Mexico Demands Punishment of Lynchers

U. S. TOLD CONVICTS SLEW 3 MEXICANS; ASK PUNISHMENT

That Demand Is Retort to Washington's Urge for Capture of Slayers of Rosenthal Denied.

500 TROOPS HUNT BANDIT KILLERS

Thirteen Suspects Already Have Been Slain by Pursuers of Party Which Killed American

DEAD PRISONERS STRUNG TO TREES.

Mexico City, September 18.—(AP)—As a warning against banditry, dead prisoners have been strung to trees along the road to Cuernavaca near the spot where Jacob Rosenthal, American tourist, was kidnaped and murdered.

The gruesome sight is designed as an object lesson to the natives of that mountainous region, that the national government will suppress banditry with ruthlessness.

Washington, September 18.—(AP)—While Mexican troops are scouring the country about Cuernavaca for the bandits who murdered Jacob Rosenthal, New York banker, the Mexican government today formally requested the American government to punish those it says broke into the jail at Raymondsville, Texas, several months ago and killed Thomas Nunez and his two sons, Mexican citizens.

Ambassador Tellez was instructed to make the representations in the case before the murder of Rosenthal occurred, and the fact that he made them at a time when the American government was pressing for punishment of the Mexican bandits was not considered in official circles as significant as a counter move by Mexico.

Following the usual course, the state department is expected to ask the governor of Texas for information in the case complained of. It has been asserted by those seeking redress that a mob tortured and shot the Mexicans and beheaded the elder Nunez.

500 Troops Pursue.

Charge Schoenfeld, at Mexico City, reported to the state department today that 500 Mexican federal troops were engaged in pursuing the bandits who were involved in the Rosenthal murder.

Troops already had killed a number of them, he said, including Bonifacio Hinojosa, mayor of Huitzilac, a small town near the scene of the kidnaping, and another reported to be Miguel Garcia, chief of police at Huitzilac.

Shoenfeld's report said the Mexican soldiers who first encountered the bandits were led in person by General Lopez. The description of the engagement between General Lopez and the "five or six soldiers," led and the bandits, was given by Mr. Schoenfeld as follows:

"They saw a group of men on a nearby hill about 9:30 on the night

TUMLIN INDICTED ON MURDER COUNT IN SISTER'S DEATH

Grand Jury's Action Halts Hearing on Murder Warrant Sworn Out by King.

James J. Tumlin, foreman of a Fulton county convict gang, was indicted Saturday morning by Fulton county grand jury in special session on a charge of murdering his sister. Miss Amanda Tumlin, whose body was found in a welter of blood Tuesday afternoon in a room of the home on Howell Mill road near Moore's Mill road.

A murder warrant was sworn out Friday noon by J. Tosh King, railroad switchman who was engaged to Miss Tumlin, and a preliminary hearing which was demanded by Len B. Guillebeau, Tumlin's attorney, was set for 10 o'clock Saturday morning before Judge J. B. Ridley in municipal court. At the time set for hearing on the murder warrant, Solicitor Boykin officially notified the court that the Tumlin murder was being investigated by the grand jury and all the evidence held against Tumlin would be presented to that body for action.

Upon learning this fact, Mr. Guillebeau waived preliminary hearing and awaited action of the grand jury.

Two counts were charged in the indictment against Tumlin. The first charged that he killed Amanda Tumlin by beating her with some blunt instrument unknown to the jurors and the second that he strangled the woman with a piece of cloth. The cloth was found tightly drawn around her neck. A coroner's jury previously had returned a verdict that she had met her death by strangulation at the hands of unknown parties.

Held in Tower.

Tumlin has been held in Fulton tower since the body of his sister was discovered. Shortly before Tumlin was to have been released by Judge John D. Humphries in Fulton superior court on habeas corpus proceedings instituted Friday by Attorney Guillebeau, King swore out the warrant.

Solicitor General John A. Boykin stated Saturday that he had written a letter to the sheriff of Wilcox county requesting the sheriff to allow him to hold J. Ed Silvey, who was arrested in Fitzgerald on the day following the killing and was brought to Atlanta Friday night.

Silvey was taken in custody by Wilcox county officers on a charge of insulting a farmer's wife near Abbeville. Spots on his clothing and shoes were thought to be blood stains and the authorities communicated with Sheriff Lowry, stating that Silvey might have been implicated in the Tumlin murder. Silvey was carried from his cell in Fulton tower Saturday to the solicitor's office, where he was questioned at length. According to attaches in the solicitor's office, he knew nothing of the Tumlin crime.

An indictment charging forgery.

All Candidates for Mayor's Post Issue Statements as Race Enters Last Lap.

HEAVY VOTE SEEN THROUGHOUT CITY

Aldermen and Council Races Gather Momentum as Friends Rally to Candidates.

As the city primary on Wednesday looms as the climax of a hot race for city offices, candidates Saturday made public statements in which they gave their views and expressed confidence of victory. All arrangements for holding the election have been completed and all polling places will be furnished with registration lists containing names of qualified voters, according to City Clerk Walter C. Taylor.

Confidence of a sweeping victory throughout the city was expressed by I. N. Ragsdale, of the tenth ward, candidate for mayor, in a short statement expressing appreciation of the work of his friends and supporters. R. A. Gordon, J. Allen Couch, C. M. Ford and Dr. L. N. Huff, candidates for mayor, also made public statements Saturday outlining their views on the situation.

"From every ward in Atlanta come only the best kind of reports," Mr. Ragsdale said. "We have examined these reports with a view to finding out the real status of the campaign and we are assured that victory is certain. We do not concede a single ward in Atlanta to an opponent.

Confident of Result.

"For 45 years I have lived in Atlanta and have conducted a business here for that period." Mr. Ragsdale continued. "During this time I have served nine years as alderman and during a part of that service I was chairman of the finance committee and mayor pro tem.

"I shall let my public record and my private record speak for themselves. I do not believe that the people of Atlanta will be misled by some of the unfair attacks that have been made on me by my opponents. I have not conducted a campaign of defamation or vituperation against those who seek to defeat me by resorting to such tactics. If my record of a lifetime in Atlanta is not enough to protect me against any such attacks then nothing I could say now would do so.

"I would not use such attacks and have not used such methods. The office is not worth that much to me." Mr. Ragsdale said.

Mr. Gordon, in his statement, outlined a program he will carry out if elected mayor. He said he would favor submitting to the voters the

9-Year Boy Aided Mother Sell Whisky

Officers Find Lad Acting as Liquor Carrier, on "Nod Signals."

Johnnie Thompson, nine years old, is a smart boy and helped his mother all he could.

Saturday night, when their home at 183 Spring street was raided, officers claim Johnnie was helping his mother sell whisky. She is Mrs. M. C. Thompson, and is in Fulton tower, charged with violating the prohibition law.

Johnnie wasn't locked up. The law has no argument with a boy who minds his mother. Instead, steps are being made to care for him in order that he may grow up to be something, which, although probably not quite as profitable, will be a bit less dangerous and more elevated than bootlegging.

Watched for Nods.

Men came in Johnnie's house and talked to his mother. He stood nearby and waited for her to look in his direction and nod her head. If she nodded it once, Johnnie ran from the house and returned with a pint of liquor. If she nodded it twice, Johnnie brought two pints back, and so

1926 FAIR PLANS NEAR COMPLETION FOR BIGGEST SHOW

With Opening Date Two Weeks Away All Space Taken and Amusements Ready.

EDUCATION WORK TO BE EMPHASIZED

Fair Officials Jubilant as Opening Day Nears and Predict Greatest Exposition in Years.

With the opening date just two weeks away, Southeastern fair officials raced Saturday into the final stage of preparations with hardly a square foot of commercial display space untaken and with less than 50 front feet of educational exhibit space unfilled. With the fair dates October 2-9 this year, the exposition is more nearly complete than it has been on the very day before the opening in any previous year, it is said.

Fair officials and the large number of Atlanta business men who are assisting in putting the fair over this year as Atlanta's biggest advertisement and a fitting climax to the first year's efforts of the "Farward Atlanta" campaign were jubilant as they surveyed the outlook.

The posting of nearly $100,000 in premiums for agricultural, live stock, home arts, educational, boys' club work and other types of competitive exhibits has drawn the largest number of individual entries ever sent into the Southeastern fair.

Amusement Features.

The $50,000 placed in the fair budget for amusements has purchased more of a human interest, spectacular, thrilling and laugh-provoking nature than has ever been secured in a Southeastern fair free entertainment program since the fair was established eleven years ago.

The unusually elaborate amusement program, including racing, free acts, fireworks, aerial exhibitions, music and every other line of popular appeal was arranged especially to bring all Atlanta into the fair grounds for the first time since the fair was established. The usual line of fair amusements coupled with the highly educational displays of interest especially to farmers and residents of smaller cities has in the past been sufficient to draw nearly 200,000 out-of-town people into the fair grounds, but Atlanta people, with less interest in agriculture and the other educa

SYMPHONY SEATS ON SALE MONDAY

Greatest Season Yet Offered by Orchestra Association Predicted by Mrs. Walker.

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

Membership tickets for the fall and winter season of concerts to be presented by the Atlanta Symphony orchestra will be placed on sale at 9 o'clock Monday morning at Phillips and Crew Piano company, 187 Peachtree street, and all indications point to the largest sale for the series ever yet made in the three previous concert seasons, according to an announcement made by Mrs. George Walker, secretary of the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra association.

This season promises to be the greatest yet offered by the association. The personnel of the orchestra is much higher because of a larger group of musicians from which to select the artists and arrangements have been made to hold more rehearsals this year than ever before. The concerts will be given at Loew's Grand theater.

It is also announced that particular care has been used in selecting the guest soloists and some of the coun-

Long Arms Holiday French Suggestion To World Nations

Spokesman for Republic Offers Resolution in League Assembly To Speed Preliminaries.

WORLD SECURITY IS HELD NEARER

Boncour Sees Little Hope of Banishing Poison Gas or Submarines From Modern Warfare.

Geneva, September 18.—(AP)—Declaring this the psychological moment for hastening the disarmament conference of the League of Nations, Paul Boncour, of France, introduced a resolution before the assembly's disarmament commission this evening urging that all preparatory studies be ended, if possible, this year or early next year, to allow of a general world wide conference before the next meeting of the league assembly.

M. Boncour urged that such a conference should declare an armament holiday for a certain period of years, the scale of disarmament to be based on the present state of preparedness in the various nations. After the expiration of such a truce, he said, the subject of disarmament could be reexamined.

The French spokesman admitted great progress had been made during the year toward giving nations a sense of security through the adoption of the Locarno pact and various regional treaties of amity and arbitration, but he insisted there is much yet to be done to make all nations so assured of their security that a really comprehensive general disarmament plan could be adopted.

Replying to the Norwegian plea for outlawing specific implements of warfare such as submarines and tanks, M. Boncour said:

"Why is a submarine obnoxious and a battleship not? The battleship has no peace time use."

The French spokesman saw no feasible check on chemical warfare because useful peacetime factories could be changed overnight to produce lethal gases for wars.

"The disarmament conference will be useful if it convenes in time, but useless if it meets too late," declared Louis de Brouckers, of Belgium, supporting the French argument.

The council's second sub-committee to which all matters are referred dealing with the plans for a disarmament conference, decided on the suggestion of the French members to question the secretary general of the League of Nations regarding the possible speed with which the council could be summoned in case of war or a threat of war.

PLANS SELECTED FOR NEW MOSQUE

Million Dollar Home of Yaarab Shrine Designed by Local Firm of Architects.

While steam shovels were busy Saturday excavating for the $1,000,000 Shrine mosque to be erected at Peachtree and Kimball streets, the first important step to actual construction was taken. A jury of award, composed of architects, and headed by one of the outstanding architects of America, selected from among six designs offered the plans from which the temple will be constructed.

As soon as contracts for the building and outfitting can be arranged, erection of what will be one of the Shrine's finest homes and a distinct addition to Atlanta's auditorium capacity will be under way.

Announcement of choice of plans was made Saturday by Edward L. Tilton, New York architect, who was called to Atlanta to serve as chairman of the jury of selection. Of the six firms which competed, the Atlanta firm of Marye, Alger & Alger was given the award. Other members of the jury were William T. Warren, of the architectural firm of Warren,

CHURCH PETTERS FEAR REVELATIONS IN CHOIR KILLING

One Theory Advanced in Murder of Dr. Hall Is Jealous Lover Lurked Near Tryst.

DEATH IS NOT ASKED FOR MRS. FRANCES HALL.

Somerville, N. J., September 18. Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, charged with the murder of her rector-husband and Mrs. Eleanor Mills, is in no danger of capital punishment.

Special Prosecutor Alexander Simpson, who procured the indictments against Mrs. Hall, her brothers, Henry and Willie, and her cousin, Henry Carpender, announces that the death penalty will not be asked for her, and that she may be tried only as an accessory. Simpson will seek separate trials for the defendants because of "varying degrees of guilt," and intimates that the death penalty will not be asked for more than two of the indicted quartet.

Somerville, N. J., September 18.—Several more hitherto concealed love affairs between members and officials of the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall's church in New Brunswick may be bared by the time Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall and three male relatives go to trial on the charge of murdering her husband and Mrs. Eleanor Mills.

It has been suggested before that many were parked in pairs here and there on the Phillips farm the night the Rev. Mr. Hall and his pretty choir singer were murdered there, and while this may have been exaggerated, the farm has been disclosed more and more in the progress of the investigation as an unusually popular place for petting parties.

The latest angle to arise in the investigation, following the arraignment of Mrs. Hall, Henry and Willie Stevens and Henry Carpender for the murders, points toward Ralph V. Gorsline, vestryman, who was present with at least one lady in the dark of the farm the night of the murders.

The jealousy motive has so often been advanced as a possible solution of this case that it is interesting to note that the two best-looking persons among all those directly or indirectly connected with the intrigues in the church, and its chair, were the two who were killed, Mrs. Mills and Hall. One needs only to look at such survivors as Gorsline, James Mills, Willie Stevens and even the motherly-appearing Mrs. Hall to realize this.

Gorsline's Story.

Prominently connected with Gorsline's name is that of Mrs. Minna Clark, another member of the choir. Gorsline it was who recently, after four years of comparative silence, admitted hearing and seeing things at the murder spot while he was packed in his car there with Miss Catherine Rastall, still another choir member. Gorsline is married.

Gorsline is threatened with prosecution for perjury by Special Prosecutor Alexander Simpson if he refuses to tell more. It is alleged that his story to the grand jury which indicted Carpender and the three members of the Stevens family contained falsehoods and serious omissions.

Simpson believes that a startling story on plots and intrigues between church figures will be revealed when Gorsline, Mrs. Clark, Miss Rastall and others "tell all."

Followed Pastor.

He recalled that members of the congregation had charged Gorsline and Mrs. Clark with conspiring to break up the Hall-Mills love affair just before it became the Hall-Mills murder affair, because Gorsline was interested in the sexton's wife, Mrs. Mills, and because Mrs. Clark had been robbed of her friendship with the handsome pastor when he centered his attentions on Mrs. Mills.

How far this strange alliance has been proved to have existed is not known, but Mrs. Clark has admitted that Gorsline often followed the pastor and Mrs. Mills to their secret trysting places and spied upon them. In so far as is known, Mills, the sexton, was at home at such times.

Enormous Damage To Florida Cities Believed Certain

Telegraph, Railway Service and Even Radio Put Out of Commission in Many Parts of State as Result of Great Storm of Saturday.

DOCK SYSTEM IN MIAMI WIPED OUT OF EXISTENCE

Many Buildings Reported Wrecked, Including That of Miami Tribune. Troops, Food and Medical Supplies Declared Badly Needed in Miami.

Seventy-five believed dead in Miami and property loss estimated at a hundred million dollars was the toll of the storm that lashed the east coast of Florida Friday night and Saturday and passed on towards the Gulf of Mexico late Sunday morning.

Fragmentary reports picked up by radio at New Orleans and Mobile told a story of ruin and desolation visited upon the city after more than twelve hours of futile effort to communicate with the affected region.

Trains from the stricken area are delayed hours, and only brief wireless communications with Miami through a makeshift arrangement late last night told of the destruction wrought to the largest city in southern Florida. All southern Florida shipping is suffering from the ravage of the 100-mile-an-hour winds that swept many small boats upon the coast and beached them.

EVERY BOAT IN HARBOR IS REPORTED SUNK.

At Miami, the one wireless report said that every boat in the harbor was sunk.

Last direct communication with the hurricane area reported immense seas sweeping in from the Atlantic, with the causeway between Miami and Miami Beach three feet beneath the crest of breakers.

The Postal Telegraph company reported 80 miles of telegraph poles down and their service paralyzed.

The hurricane sweeping across the peninsula in the vicinity of Tampa unroofed houses and leveled trees. Unusually high tides swept many craft in the Tampa harbor inland, leaving them stranded.

Towns Hit Hard.

Bradenton, Sarasota, Fort Myers and small villages in the vicinity were hit hard, but the extent of the damage will be unknown until communication is reestablished.

The Mississippi and Louisiana coasts but a few weeks ago swept by a lashing hurricane are preparing for another blow Sunday, as the Florida hurricane is sweeping that way, weather bureau advices say.

All shipping in the gulf has been warned and smaller vessels are seeking shelter in bays and inlets. Larger ves-

WARM GREETINGS GIVEN COOLIDGE ON RETURN TRIP

Citizens of New York State Turn Out by Thousands as Special Passes.

PRESIDENT AND WIFE RETURN TO CAPITAL.

Washington, September 19.—President and Mrs. Coolidge returned to the capital tonight after a vacation of ten weeks in the Adirondacks. The presidential special train arrived at 11 p. m. and waiting white house automobiles hurried the executive and Mrs. Coolidge to their official home, which has been considerably renovated during their absence.

On Board President Coolidge's Special Train, Ravena, N. Y., September 18.—(AP)—A continuous ovation was given President Coolidge today by citizens of New York state as his special train passed from the Adirondacks to the Mohawk and Hudson river valleys in daylight hours, on its way to Washington.

Returning from his vacation of more than ten weeks in the north country, Mr. Coolidge found the station platforms and the tracks lined with people as he entered the more populous sections, and with Mrs. Coolidge, he was kept on the rear platform of his observation car much of the time acknowledging the greetings.

Mr. Coolidge never appeared in better form. Refreshed by his outdoor life of the summer, he was in excellent spirits as he sped toward Washington and with hat off and ready smile, he threw his hand up repeatedly to the people, who upon spying him, lifted their hats and set up shouts of recognition.

Mrs. Coolidge, too, enjoyed the experience and with the two white house collies, Rob Roy and Prudence Prim in leash on the platform, chatted with many at the stops as the president shook hands right and left. Both she and the president paid especial attention to the school children who

Steele Is Formally Named Democratic Nominee at Fifth District Meeting Saturday

Successful Candidate Pledges Self To Duties. Reiterates Dry Stand on Prohibition Amendment

Reiterating his previously announced position favoring farm relief and continuance and enforcement of prohibition legislation and pledging himself to devote his best efforts to his duties as congressman from the fifth district of Georgia, Leslie J. Steele, of Decatur, Saturday received the democratic nomination for congress at the hands of delegates to the district convention, held in the senate chamber at the state capitol.

"I want to assure the women of the fifth district, hundreds of whom voted for me, that I am deeply grateful for their support and that they need not have fears for my position on the prohibition question," Mr. Steele declared in his acceptance address.

"I am a 'dry' and stand for enforcement of the prohibition amendment of the constitution of the United States as well as for the enforcement legislation which supplements it. As far as I am concerned there need be no apprehension on the part of citizens of the fifth district that there is anything that savors of wetness in my platform."

Complete harmony prevailed throughout the session. Congressman W. D. Upshaw nor Mayor Walter Sims was mentioned for nomination by the Fulton county delegation. Mr. Steele's nomination was made unanimous on motion of Aldine Chambers, Fulton county delegate, who announced that he had made the motion at the request of Congressman Upshaw.

Rockdale county, which was carried by Mayor Sims, sent no delegation to the convention, although several Steele supporters from that county were present as spectators.

Howard Elected Chairman.

When the convention opened at 10 o'clock, Aldine Chambers was named temporary chairman and J. E. Creel, of Campbell county, secretary. The organization was completed after the report of the credentials committee had been approved and William Schley Howard, Steele's campaign manager, was elected permanent chairman.

With a few brief remarks, Mr. Howard declared the convention ready for nominations. Robert C. W. Ramspect presented Mr. Steele's name referring to him as a man who with credit will represent the fifth district in congress and upon whom his constituents may look with pride.

Congressman Upshaw's name was placed in nomination by George P. Whitman, of the Fulton delegation, and after the roll call of counties had been completed, Mr. Chambers announced that the congressman had requested him to move for the unanimous nomination of Mr. Steele.

Mr. Steele received six votes from DeKalb county; two votes from Campbell county, and two votes from Douglas county, while Mr. Upshaw received Fulton county's six votes. Rockdale did not respond to the roll call, although Mr. Sims carried the county and was entitled to two votes.

Executive Committee.

The new district executive committee, elected at the convention Saturday, is as follows:

DeKalb county—R. C. W. Ramspeck, L. O. O'Neal, W. Paul Carpenter, Mrs. W. Stevens and Mrs. W. E. Elkin, Jr.

Fulton county—Tull C. Waters, Edwin F. Johnson, George P. Whitman, Emmett L. Quinn, Mrs. Z. V. Patterson and Mrs. Alonzo Richardson.

Douglas county—J. W. Shadix and D. S. Strickland.

Rockdale county—J. J. Sims and T. J. Calloway.

The various county delegations attending the convention were composed as follows:

PHILATHEAS ELECT NEW OFFICER LIST

The monthly business meeting of the Philathea class of the Confederate avenue Baptist church, was held Thursday night at the home of Miss Lucile McGuire, 661 Ormewood avenue.

In the absence of the president, Miss Eva May Moon presided. Election of new officers was an interesting feature of the meeting, the following girls being chosen for the next term, beginning October 30:

President, Mrs. Mary Thompson; vice president, Miss Mary Chastain; secretary, Miss Lucile McGuire; treasurer, Miss Ina Hamrick. Mrs. J. F. Echols is teacher of the class.

Negro Snatches Purse of Woman In Bold Theft

One of the most daring purse snatchings to come to the attention of the Atlanta police in many months occurred Saturday night about 9:30 o'clock in front of 245 Washington street, when Miss Lucile Curtis, of 386 Washington street, who was walking home with Miss Annie Mary Mosley, of the same address, was pulled off the sidewalk by a negro man who snatched her purse and disappeared.

Attracted by the screams of Miss Curtis, Call Officers E. E. Brackett and Odus Hewell, who were just around the corner, rushed to her aid, only to see the negro disappear in an alleyway. The officers gave chase, but the negro by some efficient fence-climbing stunts eluded them and escaped in the direction of Central avenue. Officer Hewell was nearest the negro and fired several times.

Miss Curtis, who was badly shocked, had to be taken home in the private ambulance of T. C. Bazemore. She told officers that her purse contained a small testament and about $18 in cash.

Dental School Opens In New Building For 1926-27 Term

The Atlanta-Southern Dental college will begin its 1926-27 session on October 1. Opening exercises will be the first to be held in the new college building, which is a four-story concrete and brick, fireproof, modern building, with a total floor area of 43,400 square feet, located on the corner of Forrest avenue and Courtland street.

The session 1926-27 will mark the first one in which one year of college, pre-dental work will be required for entrance, in accordance with the standards set by the Dental Educational Council of America for all class. A dental colleges throughout the United States.

Although the freshman class this year will be somewhat smaller than last, owing to the increased entrance requirements, nevertheless, a total enrollment of nearly 400 students is expected in all classes, school heads state.

Five new men have been added to the faculty for the coming session, Dr. R. H. Fike, Dr. Frederick M. Johnson, Dr. Anderson M. Scruggs, Dr. J. Roy Medlin and A. P. Hewlett.

DAUGHERTY TRIAL IS NEARING END

New York, September 18.—After being in session for eight days, the Daugherty-Miller conspiracy case nearly ended in a mistrial, it was revealed today.

Murray R. White, one of the jury, approached Judge Mack, presiding, and asked that he be relieved because of sickness. Judge Mack, however, induced White to "stick it out" thus averting the additional expense of a new trial.

Had White been relieved, it would have meant that all of the government testimony—and nearly three-quarters of it has already been submitted—would have gone for naught.

Max D. Steur, counsel for Daugherty, has indicted in his cross-examinations that the defense will be exceedingly brief. He is expected to make a motion for a direct verdict of acquital soon after the government rests. If this motion is denied, Steur is expected to rest on the evidence which the government has submitted.

Thesis on Henry Grady Wins Doctor's Degree for Georgian

:: DR. R. F. TERRELL ANALYZES EDITOR AT PEABODY ::

Presenting the style of Henry W. Grady as a writer at all stages of his life in perhaps the most analytical manner ever attempted by any critic Dr. Russell Franklin Terrell, of Atlanta, has been awarded his doctor's degree at Peabody college, Nashville, Tenn., using as the subject of his dissertation, "A Study of the Early Journalistic Writings of Henry W. Grady."

The dissertation consists of a minute study of Grady's style, as an editor and as a man, which is based upon 65 editorials and communications written by Grady. These editorials, the thesis states, "were selected between the dates of May 28, 1869, and May 12, 1883. His peculiar style as a mere boy is shown to be his characteristic style in his great orations in his mature manhood. His impressionistic descriptions and his character sketches in his early writings stand forth in his powerful humanistic touches in his orations. He was developing in a period when the emotional nature of the south was at its height and in his emotional appeal he poured forth the highest sentiments of the south and prepared the way for his effective orations.

R. F. TERRELL.

"As an editor," Dr. Terrell says, "Mr. Grady wrote about the things that had to do with the development of the south. His human interest articles equal the best human interest articles of today. He broke away from the custom of the times. He was not interested in the politician but he was rather interested in the great captains of industry. One man of affairs was worth 20 politicians as he saw things. When he was criticized for his emotional appeal he replied that he was writing to please his readers. His human interest stories read like so much fiction but at the same time make one feel their reality. The red old hills of Georgia furnish the erful editorial writings.

"Mr. Grady as a factor in the reconstruction period stands the peer of any of the great editorial writers of that period. He had his niche to fill in the south as Watterson in the central states, and Dana in New York, and Samuel Bowles the Elder in New England. It is interesting to know that these four great editors were in practical unison in their views on the reconstruction policies. While Mr. Grady was pouring oil on the troubled waters in the south, Henry Watterson was arguing with the northern radicals and appealing to the more turbulent element of the south and thus serving as a buffer between the sections, while Mr. Dana and Mr. Bowles in their own peculiar style were criticizing the administrative policies of the natonal government.

"As a seer and a prophet, Mr. Grady was the peer of these men. As a national character, Mr. Grady will live with the great men of his age."

It is announced that Peabody college will publish Dr. Terrell's dissertation in book form soon and it also announced that the document is of such value to the literary world, in that it presents the former editor of The Atlanta Constitution in an entirely new light, that it may be printed for distribution, as there is already a great demand for copies of the unusual study of the southern orator and editor.

Dr. Terrell, whose address is 16 Hardendorf avenue, Atlanta, was also given the Sullivan award, at Peabody "for helpfulness to other men and women."

Dr. Terrell has accepted the chair of professor of secondary education at Howard college, Birmingham, Ala.

SHOOT TO KILL ORDER ISSUED IN BOOTLEG WAR

Chicago, September 18.—(AP)—"Shoot to kill" orders were issued by Mayor Dever today when he heard reports that two rival bootlegging gangs were preparing to fight with guns for control of the illicit liquor traffic in Chicago. The heads of the police department were told to exterminate the gunmen, gangsters, bandits and other outlaws, "to shoot first and show no quarter."

Police officials reported they had not heard of a new bootleggers' war.

TEXAS G. O. P. PLANS TO BACK COOLIDGE

San Antonio, Texas., September 18.—(AP)—President Coolidge will be supported for renomination in 1928 by the republican delegation from Texas, R. B. Creager, republican national committeeman from this state, declared today.

"Also in 1928 we expect to elect republican senators from Texas," Creager said. "The day of the single party system in Texas has gone."

Creager said he was "absolutely silent" on the subject of the state organization supporting for reelection Harry M. Wurzbach, of Seguin, only republican congressman from Texas, who has been fighting the Creager group in the party.

League Offers U. S. Full Rights In World Court

Geneva, September 18.—(AP)—All rights enjoyed by nations holding seats in the council of the League of Nations in connection with requests for advisory opinions from the world court of justice will be extended to the United States if that country decides to adhere to the court.

Such was the decision tonight as the committee of 14 of the world court delegates' conference which reached an agreement to accept all the American reservations as interpretative of the protocol.

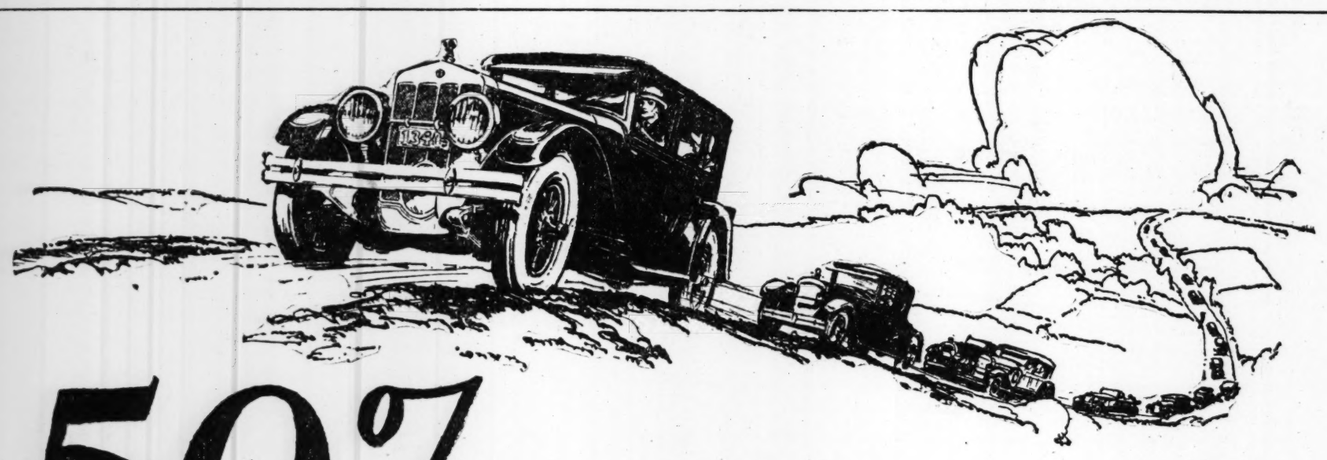

This agreement will be submitted in the middle of next week to the plenary conference and if the committee's decision is ratified the United States will be informed that the nation's signatory to the world court do not know whether requests for advisory opinions require a unanimous or a majority vote of the league council. The text of the fifth American reservation seems to indicate that the United States has proceeded on the theory that unanimity is required. The plenary conference will point out to the United States that in any event, whether unanimity or a majority vote is found to be the procedure, the United States will have the same rights as members of the league council.

This means that the conference would find itself unable to give practical satisfaction to the United States if it is found that advisory opinions can be requested by a majority vote of the council, because in that case an opinion could be asked of the court regardless of an American veto.

Makes Fat People Slim

New York Physician Perfects Simple and Easy Method of Reducing Weight.

Dr. R. Newman, a licensed practicing physician, of 286 Fifth avenue, New York, announces that he has perfected a treatment which has quickly rid fat people of excess weight. What is more remarkable is the Doctor's statement that he has successfully treated thousands of patients for fat reduction without unnecessary change of diet or burdensome exercise. He also says that fat people who suffer from chronic rheumatism, gout, asthma and high blood pressure obtain great relief from the reduction of their superfluous flesh. Realizing that this sounds almost too good to be true the Doctor has offered to send without charge, to anyone who will write him, a free trial treatment to prove his claims, as well as his "Pay-when-reduced" plan. If you want to rid yourself of superfluous fat, write him today, addressing Dr. R. Newman, 286 Fifth avenue, New York City, Dept. R.—(adv.)

50% Power Increase Since 1920 —the Biggest of any American Car!

IF POWER is what you want in the next car you buy, you deserve to know all the facts about all of them.

In the six years since 1920—recognized as the period of greatest power advance since the industry began—Franklin tops the entire American field with a tremendous gain in ability of 50%!

The Thrill of Franklin Power

Just watch it shoot away from the next traffic line-up. Just notice the number that pass you on the long, hard hills. Just note how often you find one waiting for you at the end of a long day's run.

But only with your foot on the accelerator and your eye on the speedometer can you fully appreciate its instantaneous pick-up, its relentless power on the hills, its sustained high speed on the straightaway.

And the Franklin speedometer never varies from the exact truth more than 2%. It is a Waltham—the most accurate made.

Power That is 100% Usable

Best of all—and this is the secret of Franklin's matchless speed over the day's run—this power is 100% usable!

Over roads that force other cars to slow down, Franklin's super-flexible construction allows the owner to skim along without perceptible change in riding ease or speed.

Up hills and through mud and sand that shout caution to every water-cooling system, Franklin's advanced air-cooling permits its engine to work at full capacity without halt or danger of damage.

And over distances fatiguing for drivers of other cars, Franklin's freedom from unnecessary weight, its advanced steering-gear and its non-skid transmission brake encourage maintenance throughout the day of the same fast pace you started out with!

That's the Why of Franklin's Road Records

One long drive will make it clear to you why Franklin holds road records in all parts of the country—a growing list. It goes faster—and climbs hills better—more of the time!

In every important phase of ability, it shows a clean pair of heels. Start any hill at 15 miles an hour, and there is nothing in America that will pull with such tenacity so smoothly and quietly.

And for a quick getaway at the top, the New Franklin has no equal. It leaps away like a deer—fresh as before. Air-cooling alone can give this extraordinary protection from power-loss.

The World's Most Advanced Motor Car

Air-cooling alone would entitle the New Franklin to this leadership. Ask aviation engineers. They will tell you that airplanes adopted air-cooling not only because of greater reliability, but also because of greater power efficiency. Only Franklin offers this great feature in American motor cars.

Built with extreme care, of the finest materials, on the most advanced principles, the New Franklin gives a total of elements in modern owner satisfaction which no other car today can duplicate.

Let the nearest Franklin dealer show you all you should know about the New Franklin —with emphasis on the results its power makes possible!

Do you realize how easily, under the 25th Anniversary Plan, you can own the New Franklin? Your old car applied in trade, and low monthly payments, make it the wisest investment of the day. Price includes balloon tires, Watson Stabilators, front and rear bumpers, spare tire, tube, cover and lock, windshield wiper, rear-view mirror, stop and tail light, oil gauge on dash, and transmission lock.

YAARAB SHRINE WILL HOLD THREE FALL CEREMONIALS

Noble Tom C. Law, illustrious potentate of Yaarab temple, announced Saturday that the Shrine would hold three ceremonials this fall, the first on Friday, October 15, the second on Tuesday, November 23, and the last on December 22.

All of these sessions will be held in the auditorium in Atlanta, and instead of holding one ceremonial out of the city the session in November will be a special for the out-of-town nobility. Committees are to be appointed at once to arrange plans to make this a grant "home-coming" gathering of those nobles who reside in various sections of North Georgia. One feature already decided upon is for a big dinner for the visitors to the city, and the ceremonial to be preceded by a big street parade in which the numerous Yaarab Shrine clubs will take a prominent part.

An official announcement of the October ceremonial will be prepared at once and sent out to the nobility, and it is hoped that many of the plans of activity for the fall may be fully outlined in this notice. Recorder Argard is ready to accept applications for membership in the October class.

There will also be entertainment by the newly organized Devil Dog quartette following the initiation of several new members.

It is expected that every marine and ex-marine in Atlanta will turn out to hear how the fight is progressing, as many of them were buddies of Gene Tunney while he was in training camp at Parris Island or serving in France.

The local detachment, which was organized several months ago, is composed of local ex-marines and marines. Any man who has served in the corps at any time is eligible for membership. Captain Skinnerton, commandant of the detachment, states that while 200 ex-marines have planned to attend the meeting, seats will be available for at least that many more.

Retail Merchants To Hold Meeting at City Auditorium

The Atlanta Retail Merchants' association has given Atlanta the lead in putting on, the night of September 23, at the city auditorium, the largest, most unique, and most instructive meetings ever scheduled by a southern city for the benefit of those who come in contact directly with the retail buying public.

"We have come to realize," says Frank Neely, president of the association, "that in dealing directly with the consuming public, regardless of the trade line or industry involved, everything depends on the efficiency and courtesy with which the employees serve the public.

"For this reason we are bringing to Atlanta specially on this occasion, A. P. Haake, who has in the past few years, addressed large bodies of retailers and their employees on his subject. Mr. Haake is not only ripe in practical experience, but has as a background a thorough, fundamental, analytical grasp of his subject. At one time he was head of the department of commerce of the University of Wisconsin, and at the present time he is sales promoter for one of our largest national furniture manufacturers. It is expected that fully 1,000 sales people, department heads, and executives will attend the meeting, which will be open from 6:00 to 7:00 o'clock, with the service of a buffet supper in Taft hall, followed from 7:00 to 7:30 by an entertainment; then Dr. Haake's address, and winding up with a social dance from 9:00 to 11:00 o'clock."

Neely will preside, and from the reports that are reaching his office, every one of the 20 different trade lines represented in the association will have large delegations at the meeting. The largest trade lines among these are as follows:

Men's and boys' clothiers, crockery, stores, druggists, express companies, electrical supplies, foods and meats, furniture, gas, power and electricity, fire insurance, jewelers, laundries and dry cleaners, linen and towel supply companies, millinery, office fixtures, supplies, stationery, opticians, printers, 10, 25 cent and $1.00 stores, and women's wear stores.

Sylvester Oil Station.

Sylvester, Ga., September 18.—(Special.)—The new filling and service station just completed by T. C. Jeffords, which is one of the most modern in this section of the country, has been leased by the Sinclair Refining company, and is being operated by Dismuke & Hudson, of Sylvester.

High's To Exhibit Famous Painting Of Rosa Bonheur

"Old Darby," Rosa Bonheur's $65,000 painting of a fisherman's horse, is coming back to Atlanta Monday for a two weeks' exhibition at J. M. High company for the second time in 16 years.

Over 60,000 people viewed "Old Darby" 16 years ago when the High company had it on exhibition for two weeks, and even larger crowds are expected at the present showing, which will last from Monday through Saturday, October 2.

There will be no charge for admission, those desiring to see the picture having free entrance to the second floor of High's where the original oil painting will be on exhibition. Art lovers will be given an opportunity to study the picture, to note how true to life the horse and the surroundings are, and to note how perfect is the detail.

"This is the original painting, done by Rosa Bonheur, one of the world's most famous artists, at her home at Fontainebleau, France, in 1884, and art critics and laymen the world over have united in declaring it one of the most marvelous pieces of realism ever put on canvas," states an announcement of the showing.

"The subject of the picture, 'Old Darby,' is a venerable white horse, who is seen thrusting his head from the barn door. The canvas measures 7 by 9 feet and has a commercial value of $65,000. It was never sold until after the death of Rosa Bonheur, at which time 'Old Darby' with other paintings, came into the possession of her favorite niece, Eugenie Bonheur. In 1900 the picture was acquired by E. M. Thalls, formerly of Boston, and is now the property of Mrs. Edith Fontaine."

"Old Darby," next to the "Horse Fair," is one of the most pretentious of Bonheur's works. Few of her paintings bear the same broad technique that makes "Old Darby" one of her greatest achievements.

GREAT artists of the New Hall of Fame—those whom the present-day public selects as supreme—find in Brunswick's "Light-Ray" electrical records (music by photography) reproduced on the Brunswick Panatrope the perfect medium for their art.

MARIO CHAMLEE

Music Electrically Reproduced is True to Life!

The BRUNSWICK PANATROPE

utilizes newly discovered electrical processes to bring you music and radio of a beauty hitherto unknown.

THE PANATROPE is the joint achievement of four of the most widely-known institutions in the fields of electricity and acoustics: Radio Corporation of America, General Electric Company, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, and The Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company.

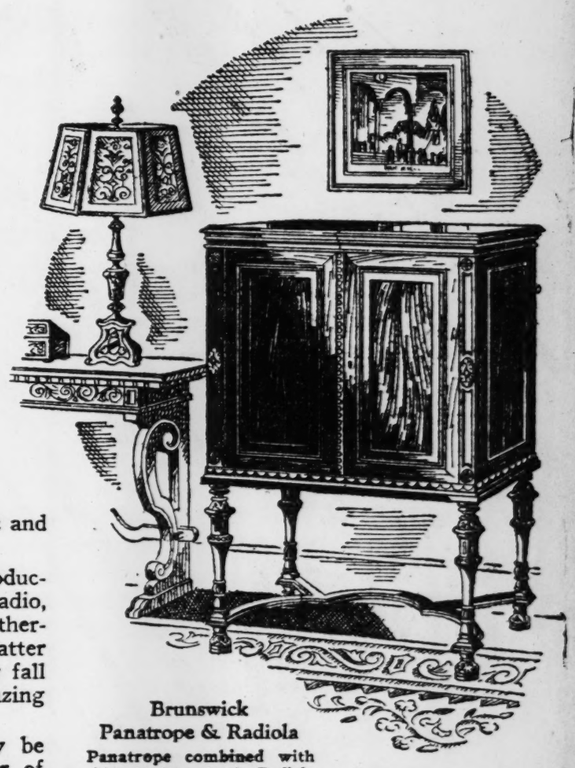

Although perfected less than a year ago, this new reproducing musical instrument has been heard by more than four million persons. When first demonstrated, it was given front-page space by the great metropolitan newspapers as the most important musical development of the age. Critics were no less enthusiastic. Nothing in the whole world of music ever created such profound interest and attention.

By means of new electrical principles, the Brunswick Panatrope reproduces the complete range of musical sound naturally. Color and shading, every sustained vibration, the technique of the artist, all are brought to you now as true as in life itself.

Radio reception, likewise, by the electrical magic of the Panatrope, is made more beautiful than any you have known. The Panatrope model shown above may also be used as the loud speaker for your present set. The model shown at the right is two instruments in one: the Panatrope combined with the Radiola Super-heterodyne. Thus the Panatrope puts at your finger-tips all recorded music and the programs of radio as well.

Before you buy any music-reproducing instrument of any kind, or radio, hear the Brunswick Panatrope. Otherwise what you buy today, no matter how wonderful it may seem, may fall obsolete tomorrow before this amazing instrument.

The Brunswick Panatrope may be obtained in any one of a number of extraordinarily beautiful cabinets. Any Brunswick dealer will gladly demonstrate this instrument. Hear it today.

Boozers Fail To Impress Bahama Folk

New York, September 18.—(AP)—The Bahama Islands, where "we regard liquor selling as a legitimate business," prefers "nice people" as visitors to "heavy drinkers," Governor Sir H. E. S. Cordeaux said tolay.

The governor sailed for England after arriving yesterday on the hurricane-beset Muramar. Of the agreement reached between him and General Lincoln C. Andrews, United states prohibition chief, the governor remarked that the public seemed to have gained an erroneous impression.

"We made no concessions as to search or seizure in our ports," he said. "We have many keys, you know, small islands running out from the mainland. Well, these keys are so useless that we don't police them. So when General Andrews said he wanted his men to keep an eye on them and chase any bootleggers that left them for Florida, only 50 or 60 miles away, we acquiesced. It's these fellows that have caused all the trouble. We don't approve of their methods at all."

The governor expressed considerable apprehension about further hurricanes in the islands. "Another one," he said, "would be a bit steep. We don't expect a hurricane except once in 20 years; and two in a year is too much. Our hurricane in July was a terror. No matter what we did to bolster the doors they would blow open. I found it difficult not being blown out of the house myself."

HUNTSVILLE PLANS TO SET SHADE TREES

Huntsville, Ala., September 18.—(Special.)—Enthusiastic indorsement as been given by the Huntsville Chamber of Commerce to the idea of planting shade trees along the state highways.

The organization has gone on record in favor of the proposal and will actively take part in the movement to have trees planted on the highways in this locality.

FURNISHING THE HOME ⁘ MARIAN MOORE

The girl who earns her own living away from home cannot be satisfied to rent a furnished room. The very qualities required for a business life or a professional career—education, self-reliance, personality—will make her discontented with the neutral surroundings usually provided for lodgers. The person who rents a room, now to a middle-aged bachelor, next month to a capable social worker, then perhaps to a beauty parlor operator who in turn may be succeeded by a sedate school teacher, cannot adjust the setting for each individual guest. The best she can do, as a matter of fact, would be to shun all aggressive forms of decoration, such as odd furniture and vivid color effects, lest these might irritate her tenants. In practice, the problem of suiting the decoration of rented rooms to the personality of the renter seldom even comes up, for the taking in of roomers is in most cases, a means of eking out an inadequate income, and economy is the decorator's primordial consideration.

Under such conditions, what is the business woman to do, she who lives an independent life and earns a fair income? After using her intelligence for eight hours of the day, accumulating experience, enriching her personality, meeting remarkable people, often among the most refined surroundings, will she be content to return to a dreary, characterless room, where the light is poor, the rug faded, the curtains torn? Will not her feminine fastidiousness revolt at the thought of sleeping where strangers have slept, of laying her personal clothes in a promiscuous commode? Will not the nameless desk defile by its multitudinous associations the very sacredness of her correspondence? And what is the use of earning an income like a man, of being capable and emancipated, if the thrill and the glamour must end obscurely each night within four drab impersonal walls?

The wise modern woman rents a kitchenette apartment or at least an unfurnished room and invests in a few characteristic pieces of furniture to create her own harmonious surroundings. She strives mainly for an effect of cheer, since she must live alone and rely to a certain extent on the suggestive power of her environment to overcome weariness, monotony and discouragement. Do you know how to manufacture cheer? Use bright colors, such as flowery chintz curtains, a gay pieced quilt or an enameled wicker chair with contrasting cushion. It is always easy to combine colors artistically by taking the hues in the figured drapery fabric as a guide and repeating them in different points of the room. Here, for instance, the color scheme is based on the chintz patterns of green, apricot and lavender. These colors appear in the quilt against a cream background; moreover, the green was borrowed from a valance to top the window, for the wicker chair and for the lamp shades which are lined with apricot silk. There is also a dash of green on the book shelf and in the pictures. The bedstead is made of maple whose honey color solidifies the golden yellow suggestion of the drapes. The lavender touch is developed through various ornaments and accented with black.

For the sake of optimism, cultivate curves, too, which are more buoyant and spirited than straight lines. Look at the bed in the above picture; isn't it positively smiling? It all comes from the sprightly lines of the head board and the posts pricked up vivaciously on each side like alert little ears. Books, portraits, and pictures help to make a girl's room attractive because they always start her thinking and feeling, which is the main part of keeping alive.

Of course, a busy person's room should be simple, in order to reserve time and energy for other activities. At the same time, it should be essentially feminine. In fact, I'd even recommend the purchase of some absurdly useless article, like the big lavender quill shown here on the desk, to assert womanliness and frivolity against the masculinizing influences of business life.

MAYORALTY RACE HOLDS INTEREST

question of whether or not they desire to have the city clerk elected by council or by the voters of the city.

Gordon's Statement.

Continuing his proposed program Mr. Gordon said, in part:

"I shall lend my most active efforts to place the payment of the school teachers' salaries on the same budgeting basis as the fire, police and other departments. There will never be a day, if I am mayor, that teachers of Atlanta will be idle for lack of funds to pay their salaries, or that the schools will be closed for this reason. There is no cause nearer to my heart than this, and if the plan I propose to work for is adopted, as I am sure it will be, there will never be a moment's cause for worry in this matter. Salaries of school teachers could be provided for and set aside at the beginning of the year so that the money thus designated cannot be touched for any other purpose.

"I shall promote at all times the closest cooperation between general council and the board of education toward improvement and expansion of the school system, but I shall work to keep this within the annual appropriation and prevent assessment of additional taxes upon the already over burdened property owners of the city.

"The sanitary department, badly crippled as it is at the present time for lack of funds, will have my keenest interest and help.

"By the closest cooperation with the park commission, I hope to insure for Atlanta's youth the finest parks and recreational centers, and by attention I shall give the fire department. I hope to extend this protection to sections at present without adequate facilities for safeguarding life and property against fire."

Mr. Couch said his campaign is growing in strength every day. He said he had conducted his campaign with extreme economy and had not hired any paid workers. He said he had delivered from one to five speeches a day since the campaign began and had not yet experienced any diminution of powers either physical or political.

In his statement, Mr. Couch said he had not professed to be able to reorganize the city government from top to bottom. He pointed out several things in the way of reform, however, which he said he hoped to accomplish as mayor. He said he would advocate a plan to give the schools of the city 30 per cent of the city's income.

Mr. Couch said he hoped to obtain a reduction of insurance rates and would back the police department in its efforts to enforce the law.

The candidate said he would speak at a meeting to be held Monday night at the city auditorium from the same platform with other candidates for mayor.

Huff Hits Corporations.

Declaring that "Atlanta must clean house and call for corporations doing business in our city limits to play fair with her citizens," Dr. L. N. Huff, in his Saturday statement said the first thing he would do if elected mayor would be to "start a telephone investigation." Dr. Huff declared he would pay $100 to anyone who could show him a city "with a higher telephone contract rate and poorer service than Atlanta has."

"I have no fight with corporations," Dr. Huff stated. "Even though they fight me, tooth and nail. All I demand is that they play fair with the people and not attempt to escape any of their duties to the people who support them. I fought and won the gas reduction agitation single handed. I can make the Georgia Railway and Power company play fair and they know it, and that's the reason why they are moving heaven and earth to keep me out of the mayor's office. But, they can't do it. The public is wise to their four years of easy sailing and are determined that it shall stop.

"I have been accused of waging an unfair and vituperative campaign against Walter C. Taylor, "our diamond-studded city clerk." My fight has not been unfair. Mr. Taylor knows, as do an increasingly large number of Atlantans that his fate is sealed. He has done nothing since occupying the office but politics and openly boasts of the members of council he owned. If these things are untrue, why is Mr. Taylor afraid of a councilmanic probe? Why is he afraid to let the people pass judgment on his case? He is afraid because he knows that once an investigation is launched, the people of Atlanta would be horror-struck by the rottenness of that office, and would forthwith eliminate him from city government.

"The eyes of the people are open. They are going to vote Huff in as mayor next Wednesday, and after January 1, 1927, Atlanta will see some real progress."

Ford Runs on Record.

Charles M. Ford, in his statement Saturday declared he was basing his campaign for the office on his record as an alderman and on the promise of working cooperation in every department in the city to the end that the government will be a "smooth running machine."

He declared that he has accomplished many improvements since he has been alderman, not for the Tenth ward alone, but for the entire city, as well. "Long drawn out promises of what any candidate for any office will do if elected are mostly bunk," Mr. Ford said, declaring that he was presenting his record for the scrutiny of the voters so that they can see where he stands on all measures and will know of what he has done in the past and what he will do in the future.

Atlanta needs a "young, vigorous man characterized by honesty, faithfulness and efficiency" for its mayor, Mr. Ford said, adding that he had all these qualifications. He is controlled by no clique or ring, Mr. Ford said and, if elected, will give every ward and section of the city his undivided attention.

Other Statements.

Murphy H. Holloway, candidate for reelection as recorder of the second division, issued a statement in which he announced that regardless of all political opposition he would continue to enforce speed laws and traffic laws of Atlanta with firmness and impartiality. Mr. Holloway asked that he be given a full term in this office as he had not served a complete term as recorder.

Robert F. Pennington, candidate for alderman from the first ward, who is now completing a three-year fight in council for the Madison avenue improvement project and for the widening of Whitehall street, issued a brief statement expressing confidence of victory. He said improvement projects he had fostered in council, were of benefit to the entire city and that they should be carried out to a successful completion.

Five candidates are in the race for mayor; aldermen are to be named in the first, second, sixth, ninth and eleventh wards, one member of council is to be selected from each of the twelve wards and in nine of the wards there are contests for this position, candidates in the three remaining wards being unopposed. Members of the board of education will be named from the ninth, tenth, eleventh and twelfth wards. Recorders of both the first and second divisions will be selected.

OFFICES OF CHEST OPEN FOR DRIVE

With opening Saturday of temporary headquarters at 233 Peachtree street preparations for the coming Community Chest campaign, October 22, to November 1, were given new impetus for the final month of preliminary work. Office space was provided without cost to the chest through Samuel Rothberg, of Froshin's, it was stated.

Checking the names and addresses of prospective givers will occupy the attention of a small group of workers for the next three weeks in order that the volunteer workers during the ten days of the campaign may conduct the canvass of the city without waste of time.

The campaign executive committee expects to complete selection of division leaders during the present week and the enlistment of the six hundred team captains, team members and key leaders of employee groups will begin at once.

While an efficient organization for raising the needed money is being perfected by the Chest directors under leadership of Bayne Gibson, president, a parallel effort also is in progress to balance the amount of the Chest budget with the giving capacity of Atlanta, with due consideration for the city's growth and the increased demands upon the Chest agencies. Tom Law, chairman and a budget committee of Atlanta business men, are conducting that work.

Mr. Gibson expressed optimism Saturday over prospects for the coming campaign.

"Business leaders of Atlanta have given more thought than before to the need for an effective social service program for our growing city and are more in sympathy than ever before to the Chest's work and it's need for larger support," he said.

Mr. Law also expressed encouragement at the progress of his committee's part of the campaign preparations.

"The agencies are all cooperating splendidly to help us reach a final budget figure that Atlanta will accept instantly as reasonable and as low as the apparent needs of the city will permit," he stated.

DEATH CAR DRIVER ILL; TRIAL DELAYED

Because of the illness of Mrs. A. H. Turner, of 750 Ponce de Leon avenue, her trial in police court was postponed Friday afternoon until September 28 on charges of reckless driving growing out of the death of Andrew Owens and the injury of two other children.

Mrs. Turner has been confined to her bed ever since the accident at Ponce de Leon and Hunt streets and is now under care of a physician and two special nurses, according to a statement of her attorney, John Hardisty, to Recorder Murphy Holloway.

HOLDER QUALIFIES IN RUN-OVER RACE FOR GOVERNORSHIP

With the payment of $150 as his entrance fee in the second primary in the race for governor, John N. Holder, chairman of the state highway commission, qualified as a candidate Saturday, according to announcement by Mrs. Bessie Anderson, secretary of the committee. Dr. L. G. Hardman, through his campaign manager, A. S. Chamlee, paid his entrance fee several days ago. The time limit for paying the fee and qualifying expires at noon Monday.

Mrs. Anderson said ballots are being prepared for the run over race and will be mailed to county chairmen during the week.

OFFICIAL RETURNS IN LAST PRIMARY

Official totals of all candidates in the recent democratic primary were compiled Saturday by auditors and were made public by Mrs. Bessie Anderson, secretary of the state democratic executive committee. Official totals were validated by Chairman G. E. Maddox, of the state democratic executive committee, while he was in Atlanta Saturday.

Official figures showed that the returns in the major races published by The Constitution and compiled by the Associated press in three hours after the election were practically the same as the official totals.

After the second primary is held October 6 in the race for governor between Chairman John N. Holder, of the highway commission, and Dr. L. G. Hardman, of Commerce, the regular state convention will be held at Macon October 13.

Fair weather and moderate temperature with probably light showers is forecast for today by C. F. von Herrmann, U. S. meteorologist. The weather bureau said that indications are the Florida storm will pass into the Gulf of Mexico and that Georgia will not be affected other than by rains in the southern part of the state.

Atlanta will not feel the storm other than a fresh breeze today, Mr. von Herrmann said. The storm Saturday was centered near Miami and moving westward toward the gulf.

Temperatures ranging between 68 and 85 degrees are expected today, Mr. von Herrmann said Saturday's highest temperature was 86 and the minimum 69.

City and County Workers Hear Candidates Explain Views on Issues at Stake

Labor Temple Crowded Saturday Night For Meeting When Political Aspirants Ask Support.

Before a crowd that packed the Labor temple to capacity Saturday night, composed largely of members of the city and county public service employees union, candidates for city offices, including four aspirants for mayor, outlined their records and attitude toward organized labor.

I. N. Ragsdale, Dr. L. N. Huff, J. Allen Couch and C. M. Ford were the candidates for mayor who attended the meeting. R. A. Gordon, also a candidate, was not present and was not represented by a speaker.

Mr. Ragsdale was the first to speak and he said that in that hall a year ago he was made an honorary member of the public service employees union.

Recalls Pay Raises.

"This honor was bestowed on me after I had stated in this very hall and in the hearing of many people who are present here tonight that I would, at that time as a member of the Fulton county commission, vote for and support a resolution providing for a ten per cent increase in the salaries of the underpaid employees and I was sorry that I could not get an even greater increase."

Mr. Ragsdale said that he voted for and supported the increase in the pay of the members of the Atlanta fire department and that he also favored a similar increase for the members of the Atlanta police department.

"It was also my pleasure to foster a resolution which provided that employees be paid twice each month, thus relieving them of the necessity of applying to small loan brokers for money at high interest rates to provide them with necessities of life between 'pay days,' he said.

Commensurate Wage.

Mr. Ragsdale said that inequalities still exist in payment of city employees and said he would stand by the workers if elected mayor and seek to get them a living wage commensurate with that paid people in similar lines of work.

"My record is before you on these questions," he said. "For the general good of Atlanta I favor every move that has been made and shall continue to do this. I shall devote my entire time to the office of mayor and shall work to lay the foundation to make Atlanta the best and biggest city in the country for your children and grandchildren and for my children and grand children. I should like to have an opportunity of being a part of the machinery which lays this foundation for a greater and better Atlanta."

Dr. L. N. Huff was the next speaker. He came to the Labor temple after addressing a meeting of his supporters held earlier in the evening on the plaza in front of the city hall. Dr. Huff said that politics in council relative to the fire department had recently brought about a raise in insurance rates. He said he opposed recent tax raises, opposed telephone and gas rate increases and told of his work in bringing to Atlanta several years ago the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

Couch Takes Issue.

J. Allen Couch reviewed his record of eight years as alderman and announced that a meeting of candidates would be held Monday night at 7:30 at the city auditorium. He took issue with Dr. Huff concerning the increase in insurance rates.

"Politics had nothing to do with the increase in insurance rates in Atlanta," he said." The Southeastern Underwriters association increased these rates in six southern states. It makes no difference who is chief of the Atlanta fire department, the increase in insurance is the same on a fodder stack in Dawson county as on a brick building in Atlanta." He referred to statements of Dr. Huff and R. A. Gordon that they would support a movement to put the question of electing a city clerk by the people up for vote.

"There are only two ways that the city clerk can be removed," he said. "One is to get a new charter from the legislature and the other is to prefer charges against the clerk and prove them."

Mr. Couch said Candidate Gordon was advocating the move to elect a city clerk, while his campaign manager, Walter Andrews, voted for a measure in the state senate taking the election of the clerk out of the hands of the people and placing it in the hands of council.

Ford Speaks Briefly.

Mr. Ford spoke for only a moment thanking the union members for the invitation to speak and expressing appreciation for any support they might give him.

The final speaker on the program was Murphy M. Holloway, candidate for reelection as city recorder of the second divison.

Holloway Speaks.

"They say I am hard-boiled in some cases," he said. "I want to say that I am going to continue to be hard-boiled until I purge the city of Atlanta of drunken and reckless automobile drivers, regardless of the outcome of this election."

Other speakers who appeared during the evening were Robert F. Pennington, candidate for alderman from the first ward; Oscar Williamson and Alvin Richards, candidates for alderman from the ninth ward; J. C. Murphy, candidate for alderman from the eleventh ward; Howard McCutcheon, candidate for council from the second ward; A. W. Callaway and John L. Cone, candidates for recorder for the first division; Arthur Knowles, C. Don Miller and T. H. Goodwin, candidates for recorder for the second division.

Towers Blown Down.

The Tropical radio station's six 450-foot towers at Miami were blown down. Terse wireless messages received at Mobile and New Orleans from makeshift radio station in Miami appealed for food, medical supplies and troops.

The Miami Tribune building, reported as having been destroyed by hurricane, was a cement structure reinforced by steel, and regarded as one of the more substantial of the buildings in downtown Miami. The building was located on Southeast First street, three blocks from the waterfront, and a half block from the Florida East Coast railway station.

Reports that a bank building had been destroyed disclosed that tremendous damage was done in the heart of the business and financial district. The two largest banks in Miami are located on Flagler street, several blocks from the waterfront, and protected by other buildings.

75 REPORTED DEAD IN STORM AT MIAMI.

Mobile, Ala., September 18.—(AP)—Seventy-five known dead, property loss of $100,000,000 in the city and every boat in the harbor sunk was the toll of the hurricane which struck Miami today, according to fragmentary messages picked up by the Tropical Radio Telegraph company station here tonight. The station is working the American Steamship Siboney which has established communication with a makeshift transmitting plant at Hialeah.

Every vestige of the city docks system was swept away and 2,000 buildings ruined, said the messages, which added that troops, food and medical supplies are needed urgently.

TRIBUNE BUILDING DESTROYED BY STORM.

New Orleans, La., September 19.—(AP)—The following message was received here early this morning by the Tropical Radio station from Miami:

"Miami is in ruins after worst hurricane in history of country. Seventy-five known dead. Property damage $100,000,000. More than 2,000 buildings destroyed, including bank building and Miami Tribune. City docks completely destroyed and all boats in harbor sunk, including steamship Nohab, formerly owned by ex-kaiser of Germany. Food, medical supplies and troops needed."

The message was sent from a makeshift radio station in Miami after the six 450-foot towers of the Tropical Radio station there had been blown down. The message was intended for the steamship Siboney, the closest vessel to Miami, but was picked up by the Tropical station at Mobile and relayed to New Orleans. The Siboney was requested to broadcast the news of the disaster.

The local station said that the message was received at Mobile about 11:30 p. m. last night. Officials at the station are of the opinion that the blow hit Miami Friday night or early yesterday morning, since they have been unable to establish connection with their station there since Friday midnight.

GOVERNOR WILL SEND TROOPS IF NECESSARY.

Tallahassee, Fla., September 19.—(AP)—Governor John W. Martin was advised today by the Associated Press that radio messages had been received from Miami to the effect that the city was badly in need of troops, medical supplies and food as the result of devastation wrought by the West Indian hurricane.

"I will immediately send a representative to Miami to ascertain the condition and will take every needed step to alleviate conditions," the governor said.

"If it is necessary, I will call out the militia to patrol the streets of the city."

STORM WARNINGS SENT EAST LOUISIANA COAST.

New Orleans, September 19.—(AP)—Warnings were sent out by telephone early this morning from the local weather bureau to dwellers on the shores of Lake Pontchartrain and along the east Louisiana coast, as the hurricane which swept Florida appeared to be heading into the gulf coast. Storm warnings along the coast were ordered changed to hurricane warnings.

Weather forecasters said that the hurricane probably would strike the gulf coast between Apalachicola, Fla., and Burrwood, La., some time this afternoon or tonight.

FLORIDA IS CUT OFF BY GREAT STORM.

(BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

The West Indian hurricane which beat a furious path across the southern tip of Florida today, passed into the Gulf of Mexico tonight after hammering at the seaports of the west coast with diminished force. It left a toll of devastation, the extent of which cannot be determined until shattered lines of communication are reestablished. Its wind velocity varied from 50 to 100 miles an hour.

Isolating Miami and West Palm Beach from the outside world early today, the tropical storm turned inward across the great stretch of Everglades, piled up the waters of Lake Okeechobee and raged through Tampa, Fort Myers and west coast cities.

Paralyzed wire facilities, broken railway lines uncoofed buildings and other ravage from wind and wave were left behind the path of the storm.

Little was known of the fate of shipping, but it was believed that most of them had been warned in time to reach safe haven.

Crew Is Rescued.

Radio messages reported the rescue of the crew of the schooner San Pierre Miquelon, which was said to have burned at sea off the southern tip of Florida.

The broken half of a schooner which bore the name Carson of Nassau, N. P., was discovered beached off Mayport, the entrance to the St. Johns river at Jacksonville tonight. There were no signs of life aboard.

No communication with Miami and West Palm Beach was possible late tonight, all commercial wire companies reporting every wire down, while the government radio station at St. Augustine was unable to raise the radio station at Miami, the operator said.

Island Inundated.

Meager advices from Miami Beach through a partial communication maintained by the Western Union Telegraph company, told of flood waters inundating the island to the depth of three feet. Although no communication was possible from the beach to the mainland, it was believed that high waters surged through the streets of the city.

Six feet of water poured over the causeway connecting the beach with Miami and the roofs of small houses on the island were lifted by the gale.

A message from West Palm Beach this afternoon before the sole connecting telephone line of a railway company failed said the wind reached a velocity of 100 miles an hour there. Passengers on a train which left West Palm Beach early today arrived at Avon Park late this afternoon and declared the hurricane to have been the worst in the history of the place.

West Coast Suffers.

The wind reached a velocity of 75 miles an hour at Sarasota late today after hurdling through Fort Myers and intermediate territory. Twenty houses were reported unroofed at Sarasota and at Tampa where gale winds swept tonight several persons were reported injured by flying missiles and glass.

Few trains moved today and tonight in the affected sections. In the central southern peninsula trains moved with difficulty because of washout dangers and flood waters. The Western Union Telegraph company received a report from its operator at Titusville that the Florida East Coast railway bridge at Jupiter had gone out and that train service might be delayed for a week.

At Fort Pierce and other places along the east coast several docks and piers were tossed into wreckage along with power boats and other small craft. Fear was felt tonight that a two mile causeway at Fort Pierce might be further damaged from high waters and wind.

Blustery weather prevailed today and tonight through most portions of Florida. Storm warnings kept shipping in port at Jacksonville and Fernandina and incoming vessels today reported bad weather at sea.

MAIL PLANE ARRIVES ON TIME.

Air mail over the new contract route of the Florida Airways corporation came in on schedule time Saturday morning from Jacksonville, although it had been interfered with south of Jacksonville by the Florida storm now moving westward into the Gulf of Mexico.

The storm is increasing in intensity, and it is not known just what effect it will have upon airmail between Atlanta and south Florida during the next few days, though it is expected the situation will clear up soon.

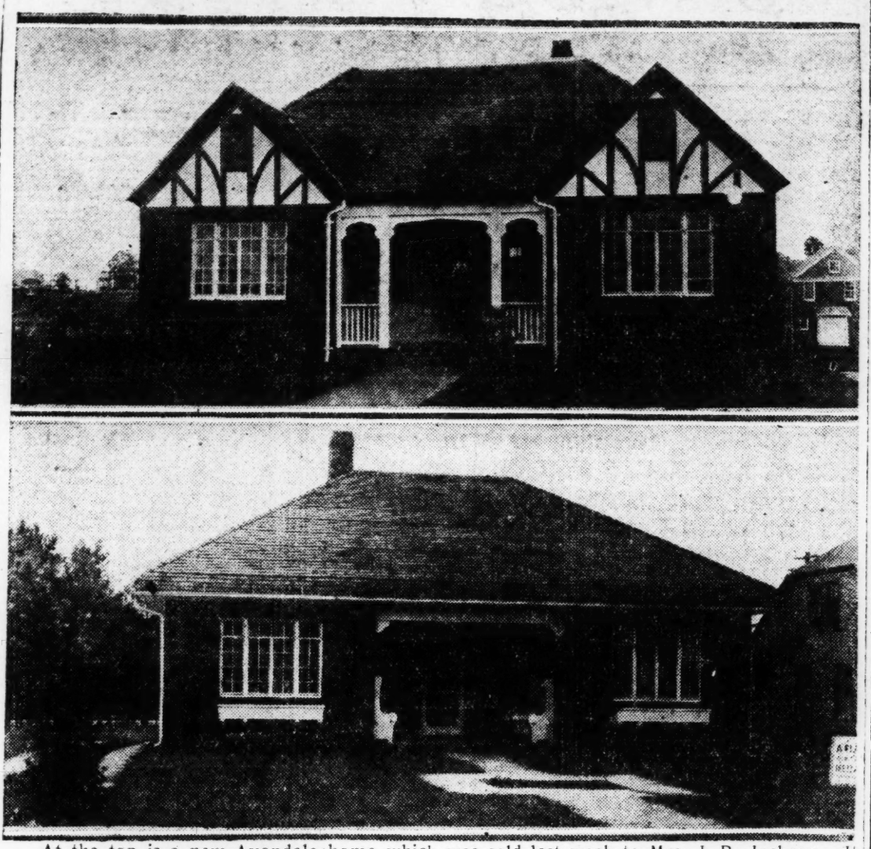

JACKSONVILLE SWEPT BY 100-MILE STORM.

Jacksonville, Fla., September 18.—(AP)—Attaining in some instances a velocity of 100 miles an hour and hiding its damage toll behind wrecked lines of communications, the West Indian hurricane which last night crossed from Nassau in the Bahamas to the lower east coast of Florida swept tonight over the Everglades and the lower peninsula into the Gulf of Mexico.

Miami and Palm Beach for the second time within two months were isolated from the outside world. Partial communication with the stricken area was maintained during the forenoon. The Western Union Telegraph company received reports of the storm in Miami Beach through a single cable and Avon Park obtained meager advices from West Palm Beach over a railway telephone line. This failed late today and West Palm Beach was cut off except for train service.

Eight Homes Sold at Avondale Estates, Many Lot Owners Plan To Build Soon

At the top is a new Avondale home which was sold last week to Mrs. J. B. Jackson. It is located at 3 Exeter road. Below is an attractive residence on Kingston road, which is offered for sale on the new plan of G. F. Willis, "Ten per cent cash and 1 per cent a month."

Sale of eight homes for a total of $87,880 and several lots totaling $15,000 in Avondale Estates, Atlanta's new suburban city, in the last two weeks, was reported Saturday by John H. Byrley, general manager of the development.

This figure of $102,880 for two weeks' sales is regarded in local real estate circles as approaching a record for fast transactions in residential real estate for a period of that extent about Atlanta.

Two of the homes sold in the two weeks were impressive structures of the dominant old English style of architecture. One of these was the home at 5 Avondale road near the entrance gates, widely known about Atlanta for its part in several "Homes Beautiful" exhibits. It was purchased by Mrs. W. S. Dobbins for $17,000.

The other was the dwelling at 10 Avondale plaza, overlooking the spacious green central square and the park-lined sweep of Kensington avenue and Berkeley road. It was bought for $14,500 by J. R. Miller, an executive of a hardwood manufacturing plant at East Point.

The home at 7 Exeter road, one of the substantial bungalows recently completed as part of the $1,000,000 development program of the year, was bought by E. E. Andrews, a young business man widely known as "Shorty" Andrews, a former University of Georgia cheer leader.

Other homes of the new schedule that figured in the two weeks' sales were those at 22 Clarendon avenue, purchased by D. I. Gorham for $8,900, and at 3 Exeter road, purchased by J. B. Jackson for $9,430. These homes were constructed by the Flagler company in the course of its program of 100 new homes for Avondale Estates, and both, like the others contemplated and completed in the $1,000,000 development program, have every refinement of modern home-fitting, as well as beauty of line and setting. No. 17 Dartmouth has been sold to J. O. Woodward, assistant general manager of the Texas Oil company, for $10,850.

Another interesting detail of the two weeks' activity was sale to L. S. Wolfe, an executive official of a local storage company, of the stucco bungalow at 8 Kingstone road. This home was built by Wager & Co.

The seventh home reported sold in the two weeks was the bungalow at 10 Covington road, in another interesting section of Avondale Estates, bought by Mrs. Fay Ivey Cochraine for $8,250.

These details of activity were accompanied by announcement of plans by a dozen or more lot owners to start immediately upon the construction of homes on their property. In this connection, the home of Hoke N. Smith, one of the builders who has played a big part in the development of Avondale Estates, is near completion at 46 Dartmouth avenue.

Charles L. McLain, an official of the federal bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, will build at 30 Wiltshire drive, in the golf section of Avondale Estates, a home that is planned for completion and occupancy at the time of Mrs. McLain's return from a tour of Europe.

Others who have undertaken construction of homes upon their lots in Avondale Estates are Dr. W. L. Orr, who will build at 28 Exeter road; Mrs. L. H. Baughman, at 21 Dartmouth avenue; R. D. Blasingame, 19 Dartmouth avenue; W. H. Goulder, 36 Dartmouth avenue; R. E. Meredith, 4 Fairfield place; Mrs. Edwin A. Smith, 12 Lakeshore drive, and Charles O. Peyton, 27 Fairfield drive.

In line with sales and with building developments is the progress of the paving in the lake and golf unit, more than half of the job, which involves seven miles of street frontage, being completed.

MUST FINISH the JOB

Loyal Georgians who have the interest of their sovereign state at heart will again go to the polls and finish the job of destroying the Brown-Holder machine that is dominating the affairs of this state. Dr. L. G. Hardman will give Georgia a business-like administration, thus saving taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars. He is ably qualified for the highest position in Georgia, that of Governor. Join the ranks and vote for Dr. Hardman October 6th.

Film—A Real Danger

To which dental science largely attributes tooth and gum disorders. To give the teeth clear color and to firm tender gums, this way is widely approved by the dental profession

RECENT scientific findings point to a viscous film that forms on teeth as the enemy of healthy teeth and gums. To a stubborn film which ordinary brushing has failed to combat effectively.

As a result, largely on dental advice, the tooth-cleaning habits of many people are being radically changed.

Many methods considered right yesterday are judged inadequate today. Modern dental science has made important new advancements. Findings that mean much in dental prophylaxis. These are embodied in the special film-removing dentifrice called Pepsodent.

Now an effective film combatant

For years dental science sought ways to fight film. Clear teeth and healthy gums come only when film is constantly combated—removed every day from the teeth.

Film was found to cling to teeth; to get into crevices and stay; to hold in contact with teeth food substances which fermented and fostered the acids of decay. Film was found to be the basis of tartar. Germs by the millions breed in it. And they, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea and most gum disorders.

Thus there was a universal call for an effective film-removing method. Ordinary brushing was found ineffective. Now two effective combatants have been found, approved by high dental authority and embodied in a tooth paste called Pepsodent.

Curdles and removes film—
Firms the Gums

Pepsodent acts first to curdle the film. Then it thoroughly removes the film in gentle safety to enamel.

At the same time, it acts to firm the gums—Pepsodent provides, for this purpose, the most recent dental findings in gum protection science knows today. Pepsodent also multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. And thus aids in neutralizing mouth acids as they form.

It multiplies the starch digestant of the saliva. Thus combats starch deposits which might otherwise ferment and form acids.

No other method known to present-day science embodies protective agents like those in Pepsodent.

Please accept Pepsodent test

Send the coupon for a 10-day tube. Brush teeth this way for 10 days. Note how thoroughly film is removed. The teeth gradually lighten as film coats go. Then for 10 nights massage the gums with Pepsodent, using your finger tips; the gums then should start to firm and harden.

At the end of that time, we believe you will agree, that next to regular dental care, Pepsodent, the quality dentifrice, provides the utmost science has discovered for better tooth and gum protection.

The Easiest Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely, and that is to dissolve it. This de- stroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordi- nary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will complete- ly dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no mat- ter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop in- stantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy never fails.—(adv.)

Charge of Insult To Dead of U. S. Incenses France

Paris, September 18.—(AP)—So great was the feeling caused by publication in the French press of Senator Cara- way's charge of the desecration of American war graves in France that the minister of pensions messaged all sectors of the battlefront where American soldiers are buried, order- ing a rigid inquiry.

The investigation is said to have revealed no basis for the senator's charges. On the contrary, the authori- ties state, it showed that isolated graves in local cemeteries are scrupu- lously kept up by the French, although they are visited by Americans only once a year, on Memorial day.

The American Graves Registration service, charged with the upkeep of the great national cemeteries, denies categorically any desecration of the graves, which are guarded daily by former service men.

WORKMEN FIND CIVIL WAR BIT AT HAYNES MANOR

Workmen engaged in the develop- ment of Haynes Manor, the newest north side subdivision, have made a number of interesting finds. Several bayonets and scabbards of civil war days have been turned up, and last week an old horse's bit came to light. It is rusted nearly through in places, but it forms an interesting memento of one of the bloodiest battles of the sixties.

"I intend to submit it to an au- thority," said Eugene V. Haynes, the owner and developer of Haynes Manor, "in the hope of finding whether it was a cavalry bit or whether it belonged to the artillery. I am making quite a fine collection of these historic relics, and large numbers of people are being attracted to Haynes Manor week after week by the unique his- toric associations of the place. Whole parties drive out every week-end, and spend much time in tracing the lines of the old breastworks, and fighting the battle of Atlanta over again."

The work of development is proceed- ing rapidly; many of the roads are already paved, sidewalks are con- structed, houses are being erected, and this beautiful section is attracting an increasing amount of interest and at- tention every week.

FRENCH GRAVES STORY QUALIFIED

Washington, September 18.—(AP)—Senator Caraway, of Arkansas, in a cablegram tonight to the Paris post of the American Legion, denied personal knowledge of the reported desecration of the graves of American war dead in France.

The senator, who in a pronouncement after a recent trip abroad, said such inscriptions as "to hell with America" had been written on the white crosses that mark the graves, cabled that the "statement made by me rested upon no personal information of mine."

"I was careful to make it plain that I had not been in that part of France," he added.

Senator Caraway quoted Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, who is a member of the American battle monuments commission, as having told of the desecration of the monuments at a meeting of the senate military affairs committee last spring.

"The substance of this testimony was published at the time," Senator Caraway continued, "and has never been contradicted so far as I know. The statement with elaborations was made to me at the time by Senator Reed.

"Also I am in receipt of letters from many people substantiating the statement I have made with reference to the attitude of France. Among them was a letter from a gentleman in Boston criticizing me, saying he had seen such inscriptions, but thought that they had been written by drunken Americans. Of course, with that explanation, if it satisfies him and others, I have no quarrel."

Knight & Davis, Birmingham, and J. S. Shaw, an Atlanta contractor.

Long-Standing Firm.

Collaborating in the plans were members of the firm, P. Thornton Marye, Richard W. Alger, and Oliver Vinour. The architectural firm is of long-standing in Atlanta and has planned some of the outstanding structures of the southeast.

The new mosque will be distinctly different from any of Atlanta's present buildings, the architects said. The style will be Saracenic, exhibiting in its exterior the spirit of beautiful mysticism which characterizes the organization which it will house. High walls, set off with Oriental promenades and terraced stairs, will mark the building as the most unusual structure in Atlanta.

A feature of the exterior will be an intriguing arrangement of exterior stairs, which will serve as fire escapes and at the same time be one of the ornamental features of the structure. The stairs will be of oriental terrace construction.

Great Auditorium.

The building will consist of the great auditorium, with the largest stage in Atlanta and a seating capacity equal to the Atlanta auditorium; a huge banquet hall to seat 1,000; various lounges and club rooms; offices; one large store on Peachtree street and several shops. Care was taken to prevent the air of simple grandeur from being subdued by the commercial part of the building.

Semi-oriental entrance towers, with minarets and domes, set off by winding exterior stairs and terraces, will mark the view from Peachtree street. Unusual features of design contribute to make the building a sort of dream castle, a structure which is expected to impress the first sight with awe, wonder, and admiration, according to Shrine leaders who viewed the preliminary sketches.

The stage of the auditorium, to be 60 feet deep and to have a proscenium width of 120 feet, will accomodate special drills of the Shrine uniform bodies, the patrol, the chanters, the oriental band, million dollar band and activities of the degree team at ceremonials. Provisions for making the stage smaller for opera and other productions have been made.

Brick And Stone Exterior.

The building will be of reinforced concrete and steel, the exterior of brick and stone. Stucco and colored wall tile will be dominant in the interior decoration. The ceiling of the great hall will simulate an open sky and will be illuminated with hidden lights. This will contribute to an atmosphere of coolness and spaciousness.

Selection of the architects was one of the problems of the project, since within the membership of the Shrine were several architects of national reputations. Competition in designs was spurred more by personal pride than by financial reward. Decision was made in July to have plans selected by a distinterested jury of experts, who chose their plans by numbers, not knowing until after the award which firm was to be favored. In this way, fairness to the competing artists and excellence in architectural merit were assured.

Several buildings in the vicinity of the new mosque, including two of Atlanta's most exclusive hostelries, possess architectural merit and these were taken into consideration in planning the Shrine structure to harmonize with surrounding buildings, the architects said.

1926 FAIR PLANS NEAR COMPLETION

tional departments, have not attended in the same proportion as out-of-town visitors.

The fair association wants Atlantans to see the educational exhibits and the agricultural displays for the sake of the good they will do to Atlantans and wants them to see the remarkable commercial and manufacturing exhibits for the sake of the larger measure of civic pride and "Atlanta spirit" they will engender.

After Big Crowds.

To get them to see these things of lasting merit, the association has set about practically to insure 100 per cent attendance by arranging such an attractive amusement program that every one will want to go to the fair. The various amusement features are to be announced from day to day during the next 10 days in the daily newspapers.

Active preparations for the fair are under the personal direction of Oscar Mills, vice president and general manager; Arthur L. Brooke, president, and Ivan E. Allen, chairman of the executive board, with a large staff of volunteer assistants from the State College of Agriculture, the Georgia School of Technology, the Atlanta public schools, the state department of education, the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association, the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural foundation and other educational, civic and commercial organizations.

The fair this year will include a larger representation of Atlanta business enterprises that ever before, although a general reduction in the amount of space allowed for each has prevented any encroachment of commercial exhibits upon space reserved for purely educational purposes.

Big Stores Cooperate.

The Sears-Roebuck company, the J. M. High company, the Davison-Paxon-Stokes company, affiliated with R. H. Macy & Co., are three of the larger department store exhibitors.

Woodruff Machinery company, Yancey Brothers and Frick Machinery company are the largest machinery exhibitors.

Two soft drink bottling companies which are native Atlanta products and which lead the entire world in retail and other sales, each dominant in its own line and reaching nearly every square mile of the globe where people get thirsty, both will exhibit.

The Barrett company, Bon Ami company, DeLaval Separator company, Delco Light company, with two big separate displays, one featuring home-lighting plants and equipments and one featuring Frigidaire electric refrigeration; W. E. Floding company, lodge regalia and novelties; H. G. Hastings company, seeds; Kelvinator-Atlanta company, Knabb & Godwin, stoves; Ludden & Bates, music and musical merchandise; Larned & Carter, overalls; Maytag company, washing machines; Pickert Plumbing company, Security Mills, poultry feed; Jacob Schultz company, of Louisville, Ky., bulbs and plants; Soft Wheat Millers' association, J. Allen-Smith company, White Lily flour; Tripod Paint company, West Lumber company, Quaker City Oil Refining company, Southern Cream and Milk company, Morning Joy Coffee company and Dixie Fire Kindling company will be among the largest exhibitors.

Big Auto Exhibition.

In addition to these, the automobile show, under the management of Virgil Shepard, will include displays by nearly all of the automobile companies which have their southeastern headquarters in Atlanta and operate from Atlanta to sell machines through local agents in the entire territory from which the fair draws its largest attendance.

All exhibits, through tacit agreement among exhibitors and the fair association, are to stress the educational element in business. To exist, each line of business must contribute something definite toward improvement of humanity, whether it is to relieve housewives of drudgery, to enable people to dress more attractively, to improve the appearance or comfort of their homes, to get about with greater ease and speed and with less expense, or in some other way make life more attractive at the time of the 1926 Southastern Fair than it was before the fair was inaugurated or even than it was at the time of the 1925 fair.

This purpose in mind in planning the exhibits will make the fair almost as notable an improvement in its commercial display department as it will be in agriculture, education, amusement and other departments.

Several units of commercial exhibit space in the automobile and liberal arts building, saved out through the same policy of concentration of space that was followed in the agricultural department, were still open Saturday night and will be left open until Monday night for commercial exhibitors, when, if they are still open, they will be assigned to a number of other applicants who have been kept on the waiting list.

Cowboys from the far west and also below the Rio Grande, as well as cowgirls who are adept at riding bucking bronchos, spinning the lariat, bulldogging and other western sports and pastimes, will arrive in Atlanta early this morning. And these champions from the various rodeos and roundups will bring with them Chief American Horse and a tribe of Sioux Indians to lend color to Circus day, if such a thing as color is necessary on Circus day.

Four performances of John Robinson's circus are scheduled Monday and Tuesday on the Highland Avenue circus grounds. Early this morning long steel trains will arrive via the Southern railroad from Spartanburg, S. C., where the circus exhibited Saturday. Unloading is scheduled just as soon as the flats and stocks are parked, as well as the Pullmans that serve as the summer homes of the performers and working men.

Boys and girls that wear the five and ten-gallon hats and incidentally the loud shirts and high-heeled boots will be much in evidence as John Robinson claims to have a wild west contingent without an equal. Carlos Carreon, former Mexican champion, heads the assemblage of ropers and riders. Among the other noted cowhands are D. H. Biron, Milt Dill, Trude Lomax, Eddie Reece, Bobby Brant, Dewey Butler, Red Schrieber, while among the cowlassies are Etta Carreon, Pearl Biron, Helen Dill, Anna Butler.

The wild west division is but one part of John Robinson's circus and the management asserts the 1926 performance the best in history. While trained wild animals are featured they do not predominate. Such subjugators as Theodore Schroeder, Carl Bruce, Ione Carle, Nellie Roth, Bob Thornton and Margaret Thompson will send the jungle animals through sensational routines in the steel arena.

Thousands of circus lovers are expected to visit the Highland Avenue grounds today to witness the erection of the circus city and also get a peep at the Sunday manners of the elephants, the lions 'n tigers and also watch the performers eat.

The city ticket office will be located at the main store of the Jacobs Pharmacy company at Five Points. The sale opens tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock and tickets, both reserved and general, will be sold Monday and Tuesday.

WARM GREETINGS GIVEN PRESIDENT

were seen at every station with American flags in their arms.

Many Stops Made.

Undertaken for the declared purpose of giving the president an opportunity to see the Mohawk and Hudson river valleys by day, the trip was arranged with few scheduled stops, but, in response to urgent requests telegraphed the summer white house at Paul Smiths and the train en route, a score or more stations were selected for the train to run through at 5 miles an hour. This gave the residents opportunity to set up a shout of greeting and the president and Mrs. Coolidge to wave their acknowledgments.

At the larger cities, where ten-minute stops were made, city and county delegations boarded the train to extend official welcomes, while republican clubs were prominently in evidence in the crowds which jammed about the observation car.

Party Leaders Talk.

Republican party local leaders headed many of the delegations and did not deny reports that they regarded the visit of the president to the state as of importance for its reaction upon the state ticket in this, a congressional election year. For Mr. Coolidge, however, it was said that in deciding to cross New York state by daylight he had in mind the sightseeing opportunities and the thought had not occurred to him that any political significance would be attached to it.

At Utica, the first principal stop, a crowd of many hundreds jammed about the train and set up a cheer when the president appeared, while the collies, standing with Mrs. Coolidge, emitted joyful barks.

Flowers were presented Mrs. Coolidge by the chamber of commerce and the city republican club members set up a cheer while a bugle corps added its notes to the din.

Smiling right and left, Mr. Coolidge showed his pleasure at the reception and leaned over the platform rail to shake scores of hands that were thrust eagerly up as Mrs. Coolidge smiled in delight.

Fonda, Hoffmans and other points added their tribute in similar fashion and then the train stopped here for ten minutes to find hundreds eager to get a glimpse of the president. Republican leaders from the city of Albany, 15 miles away, and Schenectady and Albany county were out with delegations to add their word of welcome.

With the president and Mrs. Coolidge on the trip were Bruce Barton, the writer, of New York city, and Mrs. Barton, who were house guests of the final day at White Pine camp.

TUMLIN INDCITED ON MURDER COUNT

however, was found against Silvey and efforts are being made to hold him in Fulton county, where he will be forced to stand trial on the indictment. He is alleged to have forged the name of J. O. Bankston, who lives on Chappell road, to a promissory note for $150. The note was dated January 18, 1919. The indictment was returned by a Fulton county grand jury on June 5, 1923. Bond for Silvey's appearance in court was posted but was ordered forfeited when he failed to appear at trial.

At a late hour Saturday night, Solicitor Boykin had received no reply from his request to the sheriff of Wilcox county.

Solicitor Boykin again visited the death room in the little farmhouse on Howell Mill road Friday afternoon and new clues were said to have been unearthed. Details of the discoveries are being closely guarded.

More than two dozen persons appeared in the witness chambers adjoining the grand jury room Saturday morning, all called to testify in the Tumlin murder case. A special call for a session of the body was made Saturday morning, and at 10 o'clock the jurors filed into their chambers.

Tumlin's indictment is the result of the investigation conducted solely by members of the county police force, Solicitor Boykin cooperating. Diagrams of the home have been made by the police and turned over to the solicitor. Every article of furniture in the bedroom where the body, attired in its night clothing was found, has been the object of the closest scrutiny. Captain John Oliver, Lieutenant Tom Butler, Cal Cates, Bob Hughes, Charlie Lyle, Tom Davis, and other members of the force have worked diligently since discovery of the woman's body.

Tumlin declares that he has nothing to conceal from authorities. He declares that he found the body of his sister lying on the floor of the home when he returned from his work Tuesday afternoon about 6 o'clock. He says he immediately notified neighbors who summoned police. He is being held in Fulton tower without bond.

will be held this morning at 11 o'clock from the Sardis church. The Rev. Jack Penn will officiate and interment will be in the churchyard.

Pallbearers will be Hoyt Gaines, Claude Dowin, Paul Dowin, Lint Tumlin, Louis Tumlin and E. Tumlin. The funeral party will leave the chapel of Harry G. Poole at 10 o'clock.

COUNTER DEMAND SENT BY MEXICO

of September 15. Challenged by a sentry, the bandit party replied with rifle shots. The bandits fled, but were pursued by the Lopez party who killed all three of the bandits accompanying Mr. Rosenthal. Mr. Rosenthal apparently had been stabbed twice and shot through the head. He walked bout ten metres before falling dead."

THIRTEEN ARE KILLED DURING PURSUIT.

Mexico City, September 18.—(AP)—Thirteen men have been killed by Mexican troops pursuing bandits who stabbed Jacob Rosenthal, of Woodmere, N. Y., to death.

Six of those killed were regarded by the troops as guilty bandits, the others were suspects.

Three known bandits were killed when soldiers disguised as civilians went to their lair osentensibly to pay them the $10,000 ransom which had been demanded. Seven suspects were killed yesterday in fighting with federal troops.

The other three men who had been identified by Joseph Ruff, Mr. Rosenthal's son-in-law, as having been with the bandit party which last Sunday robbed the members of Mr. Rosenthal's automobile party and took him away into the mountains, were shot last night when an attempt to rescue them was made, it was announced.

Three Confessed.

These three had confessed. They were being taken under military escort from Mexico City to be examined at the scene of the kidnaping. A statement issued by the police says:

"A party of men, supposed friends of the bandits, attempted to rescue them and in the fight they were killed."

Mexican troops are scouring the region where the crime was committed.

In reply to another formal note sent by the American embassy to the foreign office the embassy has received assurances that the Mexican authorities have been doing, and will continue to do everything possible to punish the murderers.

All armed men in the region where Mr. Rosenthal was killed are likely to receive short shift from authorities, as a recent law forbids the carrying of arms.

While the bandits killed last night confessed they were members of the gang which kidnaped Rosenthal, they said other members of the band had murdered him.

A post-mortem examination revealed three knife wounds and a pistol shot through Mr. Rosenthal's forehead.

SYMPHONY SEATS ON SALE MONDAY

try's foremost artists will come during the season to appear with the orchestra. The first concert will be offered Sunday afternoon, November 14, and will be given every second Sunday thereafter until the series of eight concerts is completed.

Among the visiting guest soloists will be Katheryn Meisle, contralto, of the Chicago Grand Opera company, who will be the first to appear on the program. The names of other noted guest soloists will be announced later.

It has been arranged to give three concerts before Christmas and five after Christmas. Four programs of heavy music and four of lighter music will be found on the program.

Atlanta is the only city in the United States which presents a season of symphony orchestra concerts with 1,000 free seats at each concert. The membership fees also are lower here than in any other city offering concerts of this class. Season membership tickets for two persons to the orchestra floor are priced at $16. This is only $8 per person and $1 for each person for each concert. Membership seats on the first balcony will be sold at $10 a pair. Single seats for the season in the orchestra will be sold for $10 and single seats in the first balcony for the season at $6. Special rates have been quoted for student memberships.

Enrico Leide will again serve as conductor of the symphony orchestra and through his masterly work the last three years has perfected a musical organization which has a nation-wide fame and which has won for Atlanta the plaudits of prominent musical critics throughout the country.

Mrs. Walker said that public interest in the concerts is greater this year than during any previous season. The symphony orchestra programs have always been of a popular nature, although four of them consist of the heavier music.

Mrs. John M. Slaton is chairman of the committee in charge of box seats. The boxes at Loew's Grand theater seat six and eight persons.

Shortage In Bank At Columbus Results In Arrest of Two

Columbus, Ga., September 18.—(AP) Paul Spier, bookkeeper of the First National bank, has been arrested in connection with an alleged shortage of $20,485.17. His bond was assessed by N. A. Brown, local United States commissioner, at $5,000, which had not been made tonight.

W. J. McLendon, Jr., a teller of the bank, was arrested September 3 in connection with the shortage and since that time bank officials, assisted by a representative of the bonding company, have conducted an investigation on the theory that the shortage could not have occurred with the system of bookkeeping at the bank without the assistance and knowledge of another employee.

Spier was made defendant in a warrant, charging that he took part of the founds, which the teller confessed to having them. Spier is also charged with making false entries on the books to assist in concealing the shortage. He is said to have made a confession. The entire shortage is fully covered by insurance and bond, according to bank officials.

New Central Railroad Head

:: JOHN J. PELLEY SOUTHERN BY DESCENT ::

Rose From Track Apprentice

BY J. D. McCARTNEY.

Savannah, Ga., September 18.—John J. Pelley, the new president of the Central of Georgia railway, is a product of the ranks, having climbed the ladder from track apprentice with the Illinois Central in 1901, to president of the Central of Georgia and of the Ocean Steamship company of Savannah in 1926. His career is like that of his predecessor, L. O. Downs, in that it has been marked by steady, unsensational advancement. It is a coincidence, too, that when he came to the Central it marked the third time that he had succeeded Mr. Downs to an official position.

J. J. PELLEY.

Mr. Pelley was born at Anna, Ill., on May 1, 1878, and belongs to the younger school of railroad executives. He was educated in the public schools of his home city and later took a special course at the University of Illinois although he did not graduate. He started his working career as a schoolteacher, but after a little more than a year of this, he gave up the idea of being a "white collar man" and found employment as a track apprentice with the I. C. in 1901.

Nearly half of Mr. Pelley's 26 years of railroad service has been spent in the south. He is a southerner by descent, his father, Joseph Pelley having served in the Confedereate army.

Among the positions he has held have been: Supervisor of the Memphis division of the Illinois Central; assistant roadmaster at Clarksdale, Miss.; roadmaster at McComb, Miss., at New Orleans, La., and at Fulton, Ky.; superintendent at Fulton and later at Memphis, and general superintendent of the Illinois Central southern lines. His entire railroad career has been with the Illinois Central system, of which the Central of Georgia is a subsidiary line.

President Pelley announces that there will be no change in the organization or policy of the Central of Georgia railway. Relations with employees will still be characterized by the desire of the management to offer continuous employment at fair rates of pay under agreeable working conditions. He announces as his policy toward the public:

"To render the same courteous and efficient transportation service that the management has always tried to make characteristic of the Central of Georgia. Our railroad looks upon itself as a citizen of every community that it serves, and stands ready to cooperate at all times in the upbuilding of its territory. With that policy I am in full sympathy, and I expect to devote a great deal of my time and efforts toward the same objectives set by my predecessor—that of assisting in every possible way in the development of the natural resources of Georgia and the southeast."

Why Not State the Whole Truth About Florida, Mr. Ragsdale?

R. A. ("BOB") GORDON,
Candidate For Mayor

Mr. Ragsdale, in a dramatic, grandstand attempt to play upon the sentiment of the voters of Atlanta, has pointed to the fact that he remained in Atlanta while others were deserting the city to follow the Florida boom.

Mr. Ragsdale's last, feeble play of heroics forces us to throw light upon this subject.

THERE ARE SEVERAL REASONS WHY MR. RAGSDALE DID NOT GO TO FLORIDA.

He was too busy paving roads in front of his property with the county's money to get away. It was more advantageous for him to remain in Georgia, where he could enhance his property in this state at Fulton County's expense than to go to Florida and deal in real estate there!

But after he had finished this paving, he did want to go to Florida! He had in mind going to Florida for the purpose of making real estate investments for he spoke to Mr. Gordon and others about the advisability of doing so. Mr. Gordon advised him to stay at home and not invest his money in Florida as he thought the market was on the decline at that time.

Mr. Gordon's Loyalty to the people of Atlanta cannot be questioned. He has been a citizen, voter and taxpayer for twenty-one years!

Mr. Ragsdale boasts that he is capable of administering the millions of dollars which Atlanta's next Mayor will be called upon to handle.

If Mr. Ragsdale is the competent financier he claims to be, why didn't he display his financial acumen and business ability while serving Fulton County as a Commissioner?

Mr. Ragsdale publicly asserted that Fulton County was out of debt on January 1, 1926, and to settle that matter authoritatively Mr. Gordon offered, through the press, $1,000 to be given to charity if Mr. Ragsdale's statement was correct. No answer came from Mr. Ragsdale's headquarters. Mr. Gordon then employed a Certified Public Accountant and had the books of the county audited, only to find that Fulton County, instead of being out of debt, actually had a deficit of $1,774,303.90!

And this notwithstanding the fact that assessment valuation had increased 100 per cent and the rate of state and county taxation had gone up in Fulton County from 85 cents to $1.10 within about seven years!

We do not charge Mr. Ragsdale with deliberately trying to deceive the public. He simply had not kept up with the true condition of affairs, which, as chairman of the finance committee, it was his duty to do so.

Mr. Ragsdale and his committee have evaded answering the question regarding the mules which he sold to the county without getting competitive bids, and the fact that he received an average of $11.11 per head more for these mules than was paid for any other mules bought by the county.

Mr. Gordon has an unimpeachable record as an official of Atlanta's city government and as a business man of highest moral integrity. He pledges a constructive, efficient administration.

He asks the vote of the people of Atlanta on September 22.

GORDON CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE

OSSES ARE HUGE IN CENTRAL WEST

Stanhope Sams and Wife

:: ATLANTA COUPLE VISITING FRIENDS HERE ::

Back From Service in East

After spending 15 years in important duties for the United States government in Japan, China and Australia, Dr. Stanhope Sams, of Columbia, S. C., has returned to America and is now holding an editorial post on the Columbia State. During a short vacation he is visiting his brother J. A. Sams, of Decatur, assistant general freight agent of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad.

Dr. Sams was reared in Atlanta and has won national recognition in the field of letters, as a newspaper writer and editor and as an authority on commercial conditions in the Far East and in the Antipodes.

Shortly after the war Dr. Sams left Atlanta to enter Vanderbilt university at Nashville. He made a fine record in that institution, particularly in languages and upon leaving Vanderbilt moved to South Carolina and was engaged in newspaper work there for some time.

After serving on newspapers in the south, Dr. Sams went to New York where he held positions on the New York Times and the New York World. Later his work attracted the attention of government officials and he was given a post in the government service which carried him to Japan. While in that country he served as editor of the Tokio Times for a period. Later he served in China and in Australia. He is an able linguist and speaks several languages perfectly.

On his trips to the East he was accompanied by his wife, Mrs. Camila Johnson Sams, who is a collector of many works of art. She brought back a fine collection of batiks which have won much admiration in this country.

Dr. and Mrs. Sams have numerous friends in Atlanta who have called on them during their present visit to the J. A. Sams home in Decatur.

Officials Meet Death in Saving Convicts' Lives

Montgomery, Ala., September 18.—Two officials forfeited their lives in a successful effort to save the lives of convicts at work in Flat Top mine today when a string of runaway empty coal cars was derailed near the mouth of a shaft.

The two officials, Z. B. Talley, night pit boss, and J. H. Fields, night haulage boss, were entering the mine on a "man trip" when they noticed that the chocks holding a string of cars had become loosened and that the cars were moving.

Leaping from the man trip, the two men rushed to meet the cars, and succeeding in derailing them, with mining implements, but were unable to escape the crash that followed. The onrushing cars piled in a heap, crushing the men beneath.

Last Saturday night the debris of the smashed cars was still being moved from the mouth of the shaft. State officials here were notified of the accident.

Angry Husband Slays Doctor, 65, On Main Street

McMinnville, Tenn., September 18. (AP)—Charged with slaying Dr. Albert B. Woodall, 65, wealthy practitioner, on the main street of the town shortly after noon today, A. J. Overall, [illegible], insurance agent, was arrested here, waived a hearing, and was held for trial.

County officers charge that after killing Dr. Ramsey, Overall proceeded to his residence where he assaulted Mrs. Overall, 45, beating her into insensibility with a shotgun. She was in a hospital here tonight, in a serious condition.

Overall was taken in custody at his residence by Sheriff Logan Malone. Defense of his home was said by officers to have been the plea advanced by the prisoner.

Witnesses told officers Dr. Ramsey drove his car into a garage where he was confronted by Overall who fired two shots from a shotgun before the physician got out of his car. The witnesses said Overall fired a third shot into Dr. Ramsey's side before he left the scene.

YAQUIS CAPTURE TELEGRAPH OPERATOR

Nogales, Ariz., September 18.—Yaqui Indians on the warpath in Sonora, Mexico, kidnaped Mauel Encinas, telegraph operator at Corral, taking him to a Yaqui stronghold in the mountains, according to a dispatch today from Guaymas to the Nogales International.

"I have just been taken prisoner by Yaquis—God grant me protection," Encinas flashed over the wires as he was seized by the renegade tribesmen, the dispatch said.

Mexican troops began a search for the kidnapers.

9-YEAR-OLD BOY AIDS WHISKY SALES

on, up to his capacity of transportation. This is the method, the raiding officers, headed by E. S. Acree, vice squad leader, claim Mrs. Thompson used in waiting on a rather flourishing trade.

The use of small children in the liquor business has become wholesale, officers declare. A boy, of Johnnie Thompson's age, ordinarily would not be suspected of having whisky on his person. So the youngsters, white and black, boy and girl, are employed to bring the liquor from a hiding spot into the place where the sale is made.

14-Year-Old Bartender.

Saturday night, the same raiding squad found a 14-year-old negro boy dispensing liquor at 168 Fair street, southwest. When the officers walked in, disguised as customers, he recognized them and made a desperate effort to pour his supply on hand into the sink. He was frustrated, however, and enough evidence to convict was confiscated. He will be handled by the juvenile authorities.

So widespread has become the practice, that the vice squad is giving a great deal of time to the observation of places suspected of employing children as whisky conveyors.

Doug Davis Wins Valley Forge Trophy in National Air Races

:: FIRST TO FLY ATLANTA PLANE IN MEET ::

BY ALBERT HARDY, JR.

"Doug" Davis, Atlanta pilot, bears the distinction of being the first man ever to fly this city's colors in a national aeronautical meet.

In addition to that, he came back with a generous helping of the bacon, which is as follows and which adds no mean bit to the reputation of a city which has become famous as the mother of champions in many lines of endeavor.

The birdman, flying a Waco 9 airplane, bearing the name "Atlanta" monogrammed on its rudder, won four prizes last week during the air races which continued for one week as a feature of the sesqui-centennial at Philadelphia.

The Valley Forge trophy now graces the mantel of his home in West End, bearing silent tribute to a pilot who sailed his plane around the air race track of Philadelphia, and brought it to a standstill six feet from a designated marker in the precision landing contest.

The first cash prize won by Atlanta's representative was awarded after Davis came in fourth in the first of a series of the air races, dubbed "On-to-Sesqui." The race began at the respective homes of pilots from all sections of the United States who raced to the sesqui-centennial.

Second In Elimination Contest.

Despite the fact that Atlanta's pilot ran into a storm in Danville, Va., and was forced to land until it subsided, Davis was awarded fourth place. Points in the race were given on the number of passengers carried, the time consumed in the flight, taking into consideration the horsepower of the plane, the weight of the ship, and the distance flown.

On the second day of the meet, the Atlanta plane won second place in an elimination contest. The planes took off from the landing field, circled the air track a certain number of times and landed. The award was a valuable cash prize to the pilot of the ship.

A handsome medal was awarded Davis, who was a member of a team which took off second honors in the novelty relay. Three planes constituted a team and the race was conducted along the same lines as the relay in track meets.

Good Return Flight.

In the team with Davis were Bob Hewett, of Philadelphia, and Jack Phrop, also of Philadelphia. A passenger in the first plane, after flying around the field the first time, alighted and climbed into the second plane, which immediately took the air, etc. Each member of the team was presented with a medal.

Davis entered races daily during the meet and placed the name Atlanta high in the list of honors.

The time the daring pilot made on his return to Atlanta must not be overlooked.

Leaving Philadelphia at 8 o'clock in the morning he flew to Richmond, thence to Greensboro and then to Atlanta, reaching Candler field Atlanta5s airport, at 4 o'clock that afternoon. Stop-overs in Richmond and Greensboro were made.

Davis is a member of the Southern Flying Service, Inc., composed of the pilot and Beeler Blevins, another aviator, with headquarters in Atlanta.

21 Americans Facing Death By Starvation

Shanghai, September 18.—(AP)—Starvation threatens 21 Americans and five Europeans hemmed in with the Chinese population of Wu Chang by the besieging armies of the Red Cantonese government.

Two weeks of bombardment and assault having failed to wrest the city from its northern army defenders, the Cantonese have completely blockaded it and settled down to starve it into submission.

Unless relief comes within one week, it is believed Wu Chang must fall. There are two faint chances of relief. The first and most possible, is that Marshal Sun Shuan-Fang, ruler of eastern China, may be able to push troops past opposing Cantonese forces 150 miles down the Yangtze river from Wu Chang. He has entered into an alliance with Wu-Pei-Fu, whose troops are the defenders of Wu Chang.

The second remote chance is Wu-Pei-Fu himself may bring aid. Forced out of Hankow, across the Yangtze from Wu Chang, Wu-Pei-Fu is receiving reinforcements at his headquarters 70 miles north, but he is faced by southern armies and may not be able to break through in time to save Wu Chang, if at all.

Annual 'Forget-Me-Not' Day, To Aid D.A.V., September 25

Saturday, September 25, by official proclamation from Washington is the day set aside in honor of the American boys who were left broken and torn by the ravages of the great war.

Atlantans are reminded that the day is near at hand, when they will be called upon to aid these sick, crippled, blind and helpless soldiers, by a committee of Atlanta women, who are sponsoring this city's "Forget-Me-Not" drive.

In a statement issued by the Service Star legion, in which the pitiful conditions of some of the disabled veterans is shown, an appeal is made to the Atlanta public to dig as deep as it can on this significant Saturday.

The statement follows:

Started by Harding.

"'Forget-Me-Not' day is different from any other tag day in that it was born in the big heart of a Christian president of the United States, the late President Harding, and given that appealing and suitable name, 'Forget-Me-Not,' in ohonor of the sick, wounded, crippled, shell-shocked, blind, ex-service men of the world war—The disabled American veterans. President Harding asked that this day be observed in every state on the same date. When Mr. Coolidge was elected to the presidency he issued a similar heartfelt desire for 'Forget-Me-Not' day. The gracious response from the people has made this day a blessing of untold value to those who gave so much for us during the war.

"Over and over we are asked why do the D. A. V. have so many tag days? There are many calls made and tag days off and on by ex-service men of the world war and of other wars. But the only tag day or appeal ever made upon our citizens by the Disabled American Veterans of the World War has been the 'Forget-Me-Not' days held in the fall for the last five years, and the appeal last June to help entertain the national convention of the D. A. V. held in our city.

"The only expense to 'Forget-Me-Not' day is the small amount paid for forget-me-nots and these are bought by national D. A. V. for all the states. Every cent turned in is used for the D. A. V. and his family and every case is well studied and looked into. The proceeds from other days does not come to the D. A. V. of the national organizations.

Run By Organization.

"Every organization has a right to put on drives and tag days and we wish for them all the greatest success, but 'Forget-Me-Not' day is only one run for the D. A. V. organization.

"Why does not the government look after these men?

"Our government has done much for these noble heroes, and we have all faith that more and more will be done. There are so many thousands of these broken in body and otherwise. Then it is very sad but true, that many Americans have not engraved upon their hearts and minds Forget-them-not.

"Did you ever look into the amount of compensation these men receive? Do you know some of them have a wife and two or three children? Do you know that many of them work a few months and have to be sent to the hospital? Do you know that thousands of them receive no compensation? Do you ever think that you are due them some consideration and help? Do you ever think your loved one might have been left sleeping in Flanders Fields or have come back to you totally blind or insane? Do you know that the Disabled Veterans are not making this appeal? They are plucky, courageous and wonderful in accepting their fate.

"Service Star legion is a friend to all ex-service men of the world war and other wars. We are deeply grateful to every man who did his part and our hearts feel a loving pride in the fact that our sons, brothers, husbands, fathers, etc., gave their best for the betterment of our world. But we realize after years of study and experience that the Disabled Veterans and their families need us most and we give ourselves to the glorious work of trying to make these more comfortable and to help them to grow strong and well and help educate them and their children. We are making this appeal for them to every man, woman and child in Atlanta and Georgia for 'Forget-Me-Not' day on Saturday, September 25.

Georgia Records.

"Many women's organizations and individuals give to 'Forget-Me-Not' day invaluable an dcheerful service each year and this year more than usual. We are looking for a great outpouring of gifts and that 1926 may far exceed previous years.

"Will you read and study the following figures from Georgia's records?

"Number of claims filed, 22,000.

"Number of veterans drawing compensation, 5,200.

"Men suffering from tuberculosis of service origin, 2,000.

"Men suffering from nervous disabilities, 2,000.

"Men suffering from gunshot wounds, 1,000.

"Men mentally incompetent, 500.

"Number of claims disallowed, 16,800.

"Totally blind, 18.

"We hope these figures and this little article may give the information that seemed to be badly needed.

(Signed.)

"Mrs. Sam D. Jones, president Service Star legion; Mrs. H. M. Nicholes, chairman Forget-Me-Not drive; Mrs. Marcus Beck, first vice president Service Star legion; Mrs. E. L. Connally, chairman Gold Star division; Mrs. Dan C. Lyle, vice chairman Gold Star division; Mrs. Sam Inman, chairman Sisters' division; Mrs. Herbert Reynolds, chairman Wives' division; Miss Jane VanDeVrede, chairman Nurses' division; Mrs. E. B. Williams, chairman Hospital No. 48; Mrs. Franklin W. Withoft, president Georgia Service Star legion; Mrs. Frank Allcorn, president Young Matrons' Service Star league; Mrs. Lott Warren, Jr., chairman Families of D. A. V."

NO COAL PRICE CUT THIS WINTER, DECLARES MAHAN

There is to be no reduction in the price of coal this winter.

This fact was made emphatic in an open letter to the Atlanta public, written by E. C. Mahan, president of the Southern Coal and Coke company, who declares that press reports bearing Washington date lines and forecasting a considerably lower price for coal, are erroneous and impossible.

"The report says that according to the bureau of mines, coal is now costing $2.04 against $2.21 a year ago," writes Mr. Mahan. "It also states that on August 30 coal was selling at $2.04 as compared with $1.96 on August 9. According to these figures, coal on August 30 was selling at exactly the cost of production, $2.04. In view of the fact that winter is now approaching when there is always an increase in the demand for coal, does a reduction in coal price seem likely, when the only way it could possibly take place would be to sell it below the cost of production?

"It is a matter of common knowledge that from April 1 to September 1 coal was sold at less than the cost of production. Those of us who are in the business of producing coal for a living will of course not continue to do this any longer than we have to. The very favorable industrial situation is indicated by the fact that each week usually shows a record breaking loading of cars by the railroads. This, together with the approaching winter, has already resulted in a very substantial increase in the demand for coal.

"I submit that with this increased demand, at home and abroad, is it likely that the producers of coal during the next six months of the year will continue to sell below the cost of production?

"I believe you will be doing your readers a distinct favor if you correct the impression contained in this news item, and on the contrary, advise them to lay in their supply of coal at the earliest possible date. Conditions for delivery are now favorable, and the buyer will get better prepared coal than he will if he waits until unfavorable weather conditions set in. Furthermore, the retail coal merchants cannot take care of the demand if everybody waits until cold weather begins before placing their orders."

JAYCEES ANNOUNCE PROGRAM FOR FALL

Fall entertainment plans for the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce were announced Saturday on the eve of an intensive drive by a committee of 50 Jay Cees for 500 new members. The membership campaign will begin Monday and last for 10 days, with a goal of a new member a day for each of the 50 committeemen.

A golf tournament at Piedmont park, with over 200 entrants, a dance on September 30 at East Lake and other interesting features are planned for the junior chamber this fall. The East Lake dance will be the first of a series of social functions during the fall and winter months. Added to this program are the regular weekly luncheon at which several hundred members gather every Thursday.

"Self-enjoyment" classes will be held this fall instead of the "self-improvement" classes formerly held. Members will be canvassed for business interests and hobbies, and classes will be arranged so that each man can study or indulge in the subject which appeals most to him. Some of the classes will probably be as follows! Accounting, advertising, salesmanship, music, modern literature, journalism, public speaking and golf.

Newton County Fair To Open on Monday; Many Exhibits Placed

Covington, Ga., September 18.—(Special)—The Newton county fair opens Monday, September 20, and will continue through Saturday. The fair association has gone to quite a bit of expense in increasing the premiums of exhibitors and enlarging the buildings.

Practically every district in the county will be represented with an agricultural exhibit it is stated.

The dairy show will be one of the best ever held in this section. There will be in the neighborhood of 100 high-class, registered Jersey cows on exhibit at this fair, it is announced.

Special interest is being shown by the 31 boys and girls who are members of the Newton county Calf club. County Agent G. W. Robinson says these club members have animals far superior to any ever shown in previous fairs.

The poultry show will be up to the standard of poultry shown in previous years, the management announces.

The home economic agent, Miss Chapman, says that she expects to have one of the best exhibits that has ever been put on in the woman's department, especially is this true in the girls' club department.

Ormiston Demands Immunity as Price Of His Surrender

Attorney States That He Will Advise His Client To Give Up If Given Protection of Law.

LAWYER ASSAILS MRS. M'PHERSON

Mrs. Lorraine Sielaff Wiseman Wins Victory. Persecution Charge of Evangelist Denied.

Los Angeles, September 18.—(AP)—Direct charges linking the names of Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist, and her former radio operator, Kenneth G. Ormiston, were made here today by S. S. Hahn, attorney, in demanding immunity for Ormiston if he comes forward with the facts in connection with the evangelist's recent mysterious disappearance.

Hahn declared that "actions between herself (Mrs. McPherson) and Ormiston take it out of the class of private delinquency."

The attorney gave out a statement apparently containing an admission that Ormiston was ready to testify that the evangelist occupied the cottage of Carmel-by-the-Sea which Ormiston rented a few days before her disappearance and which has figured so much in the case.

Public Entitled to Truth.

The public, Hahn asserted, was entitled to know the truth concerning the activities of the evangelist and the radio operator while the two were away from Los Angeles for more than a month early this summer.

"It is my opinion that immunity should be granted to Ormiston and I will surrender him," the attorney said.

"My opinion is that the public is entitled to be acquainted with the facts concerning Mrs. McPherson and Mr. Ormiston's activities during the period of their absence and from the time they left Carmel-by-the-Sea until the time Mrs. McPherson reappeared at Douglas, Ariz.

Mrs. McPherson Assailed.

"By virtue of the fact that Mr. McPherson poses as a religious leader in the community, as a pretended guardian of chastity and a campaigner against sin, the actions between herself and Ormiston take it out of the class of private delinquency."

Hahn's statement was made after it was reported at the district attorney's office that Ormiston "had ducked from sight" in filing criminal conspiracy charges against Ormiston yesterday, along with similar charges against Mrs. McPherson, her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, and others. District Attorney Asa Keyes declared no promises would be made the radio operator.

The district attorney's office alleges Mrs. McPherson was the mysteriously begoggled woman whom Ormiston brought to the Carmel cottage at 3 o'clock in the morning, 13 hours after

FRANCE SEEKING GERMAN CASH TO AID FRANC

Arrangements Said To Have Been Effected Between Foreign Ministers.

GOVERNMENTS MUST RATIFY AGREEMENT

Concessions for Germany in Return Financial Aid To Her Former Enemy

Berlin, September 18.—(United News.)—An arrangement between Germany and France, whereby Germany will give financial aid to her former enemy, is understood to have been made in a secret conference near the Swiss-French frontier by Aristide Briand and Gustav Stresemann, foreign ministers of France and Germany respectively.

It is learned from a reliable source that the arrangement is tentative between the two foreign ministers. It must be ratified by the governments of course, before it becomes effective, but the negotiations are significant of the peaceful cooperation which is beginning between two ex-enemies.

The chief feature of the Briand-Stresemann program is a proposal that $300,000,000 in German railway bonds be sold, largely in New York, enabling Germany to pay France cash on a greater part of her reparations claims.

The Liberal Press in Germany emphasizes that the French and German foreign ministers have abandoned their attempts to settle their divergencies singly and have inaugurated a policy of general agreement on all outstanding problems. It is pointed out that the solution of Franco-German differences is dependent upon indorsement not only by the cabinets of the two countries, but by the two nationalist leaders—Premier Poincare, of France, and President Von Hindenburg, of Germany.

It is announced, however, that Louis Loucheur, French economic expert, will come to Berlin next month to pursue the discussions initiated by the two foreign ministers. This is taken to indicate that they intend pressing their program for adoption.

Besides the proposed sales of German railway bonds, the Briand-Stresemann conversations are said to have resulted in these suggestions:

French occupation of the Rhineland would be reduced from 82,000 to 38,000 men.

In accordance with the treaty of Versailles, Germany would be permitted to purchase the Saar Valley Coal mines for $50,000,000.

Inter-allied military control in Germany would be deminished.

WHAT INTERESTS DOES OUR CITY GOVERNMENT SERVE?

HOME INTERESTS:

SCHOOLS—Education of our children. It controls where our children stay over one-half of their time.

BONDS NOT ISSUE, HARDMAN SAYS, IN WARM REPLY

Voters Warned Against Being Misled by Canards Seeking To Draw Attention From Real Issues.

Commerce, Ga., September 18.—(Special.)—In a statement issued here today to newspapers Dr. L. C. Hardman, candidate for governor, stated that John Holder was setting up a "straw man to knock down."

Discussing the pay-as-you-go plan, Dr. Hardman said:

"Mr. Holder and his political advisers are now endeavoring to make the issue in the governor's race 'for or against bonds.' This is not the issue. Voters have but two things to consider, namely, shall Georgia have a clean-cut business administration, or shall the machine politicians continue in power and ruthlessly spend the tax-payers' money?

"I reiterate that the governor has no power to force the legislature to pass a constitutional amendment. We have seen that tried. A bond issue is left entirely with the people to decide. The very foundation of our government is built upon this idea.

Discusses Possibilities.

"Should the 1927 degislature submit a constitutional amendment for or against bonds and they are ratified by the voters in November, 1928, which is the earliest date on which the measures may be voted, it will take at least six months thereafter, about May, 1929, to get the bonds validated, engraved and sold. The bids for contracts will have to be approved by Washington, and if any federal aid is used on the contracts, that, together with contractors getting their equipment in the sections for which their bids have been accepted, thereby delaying the work another three months at the least. Thus you see that the prospect for a state bond issue is at least three years off.

"A survey of counties carried by Mr. Holder in the primary will show that he received his main strength in counties that had been promised improved highways. Some of these counties have waited for years for hard-surfaced roads. Nearly all will wait several years more, because under the present extravagant and wasteful plan of the highway little progress is being made. We have spent $35,000,000 and have less than 500 miles of hard-surfaced roads.

"The state needs a business administration to eliminate petty graft, greed, waste and extravagance. This department of our state government should be operated on a safe, sane business plan, the same as any other business. There is no corporation or individual in this or any other state that would tolerate for a minute the rank expenditure of money that has and is being made daily by the state highway department.

Waste in Counties.

"In practically every county one may readily see the waste of money in road construction and upkeep. The official report of the state auditor shows that in one congressional district alone the cost of administration for highway construction is many times the amount spent for actual road construction. In other words, the people's money is going for politics and not road construction. We must finish this fight and destroy the Holder highway machine the same as we did the Brown machine. Both machines were joined together to travel rough-

Man Who Stole Chickens In Sixties Pleads Guilty

:: JUDGE TELLS HIM TO "FORGET IT" ::

Nebraska City, Neb., September 18.—(AP)—Conscience striken because he had stolen chickens during the civil war and desiring to "square accounts before it is too late," Tim Crook, 80-year-old war veteran who lives in the hill country, near Minersville, Neb., went before District Judge Begley here and asked to be allowed to "plead guilty."

Judge Begley, however, just smiled and told him to forget about it.

"You see when I was in Company A, of the tenth Kansas infantry," the grizzled veteran said, "we didn't get to eat but every once in a while and a stray shoat or chicken was our meal. I guess I shot and stole from the big plantations as many as the next one. They said that all is fair in love and war, and we were fighting lots and eating little, and maybe it is all right, but I ain't felt right about it ever since. When this bread and water sentence business at Tekemah came up, I decided that if they was going to be that rough on poor fellows violating the liquor laws, in other parts of the state, that maybe I had done wrong."

ANDREWS PLANS INCREASE IN ARMY OF PROHI FORCES

Leader of Dry Forces Prepares To Draft Many Federal Employees To Aid in Campaign.

Washington, September 18.—Plans for reenforcing the "dry army" by drafting many federal employees, including mail carriers, lighthouse keepers and farm agents for auxiliary enforcement work, are being prepared by General Lincoln C. Andrews, assistant secretary of the treasury, it was learned today.

Since his return from Europe, the dry czar is understood to have devoted his time to the consideration of enlarging his prohibition forces, as part of a nation-wide program for "making America safe for sobriety." By mobilizing an auxiliary force, he expects to rid the country of illicit liquor within a year.

This plan of drafting other government employees into the "dry army" will be presented to a meeting of Andrews' second annual conference of regional administrators which meets here Monday. It is reported that General Andrews has been assured of President Coolidge's support.

During the conference of regional administrators here, the latest tactics of prohibition agents will be demonstrated and passed on to the 10,000 dry agents in the United States. The improved use of firearms will be explained and other fine points of liquor detection work shown in detail during the conference which will last through the week.

CREW OF STEAMER SUNK AFTER CRASH SAFELY LANDED

London, September 18.—(AP)—The crew of the Italian steamer Ellenia, were all safely landed today at Cornwall ports. Their vessel was sunk on Thursday off the Scilly islands, after the Captain had refused help which the liner Olympic had offered. There was some doubt at first if the crew escaped safely but the uncertainty was ended this afternoon when a report to Lloyd's explained that they had been picked up by French fishing craft and landed at Newlyn and Penzance this afternoon.

KELLOGG CABLES INQUIRY TO ITALY ABOUT OUTRAGE

Seeks Particulars From Rome of Reported Fascist Attack on American Consul.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Washington, September 18.—Immediately upon receipt of newspaper reports that Earl Brennan, United States consul at Rome, had been beaten by fascist militia, Secretary Kellogg today dispatched a cable to the American embassy at Rome asking for particulars.

Kellogg denied any previous knowledge of an attack on the American consul, which it is reported took place on the same day an assassin hurled a bomb at Premier Mussolini, and stated that in the absence of word from Rome he could neither deny nor affirm the report.

Other officials were of the opinion that the department would certainly have been informed if such an attack had been made. In their opinion it would be strange if such an incident had happened without a report coming to the government here.

No answer to the query sent by Kellogg had been received late tonight, but this was not considered surprising in view of the difference in time. An answer is expected not later than Monday.

Should Warren D. Robbins, American charge d'affaires at Rome, confirm the story of the attack, the matter undoubtedly will be brought to the attention of President Coolidge at once. Henry P. Fletcher, American ambassador at Rome, now on leave in this country, also would be consulted by Secretary Kellogg.

Invariably, in cases where Americans have been injured, or attacks made on American officials in foreign nations, urgent demands are made immediately that the guilty parties be apprehended and punished.

GOVERNMENT SEES EARLY SUPPRESSION OF YAQUIS UPRISING

Mexico City, September 18.—(AP)—The government is confident that the uprising of the Yaqui Indians in Sonora will be suppressed soon. Troops are being moved from various parts of the republic into the disturbed area. Altogether some 15,000 soldiers have already been mobilized against the Indians.

Details of the situation are not made public here, but the military authorities insist they have the situation well in hand.

J. N. HOLDER OPENS SECOND CAMPAIGN IN WILKES COUNTY

Candidate for Governor Says He Has Secured Leave From Highway Board and Will Speak.

Washington, Ga., September 18.—(Special.)—Stating that he had secured a leave of absence for 30 days from the highway department without pay in order that he may "meet the people of Georgia face to face and discuss with them the issues of this campaign," John N. Holder, chairman of the state highway board and runner-up with Dr. L. G. Hardman in the recent primary for governor, opened his second campaign here today in an address before the voters of Wilkes county.

Mr. Holder stated that he felt it his duty to remain at the highway department and "attend to my duties during the first race, and I did so," making only one speech during the campaign, but declared that in the closing days of the campaign "a malicious, libelous statement was secretly circulated by Dr. Hardman's headquarters" and that he desired to meet the people and answer that charge with other issues.

As to the charge of inefficiency and waste in the highway department, Mr. Holder said with the funds in hand the highway department had built roads as economically and rapidly as any state in the union.

Mr. Holder explained his opposition to road bonds and charged that Dr. Hardman is evading the issue by not declaring where he stands on highway bonds.

Mr. Holder's speech in full follows:

"My Fellow Citizens: I have secured a leave of absence of thirty days from the highway department without pay and have notified the state treasurer and the state auditor that I would receive no compensation for services for thirty days. I did this in order that I might meet the people of Georgia face to face and discuss with them the issues of this campaign.

"The people of this state are the fairest and most honest critics I have ever known and I am willing to take my case before the last tribunal, that is, the people of Georgia.

"No man in public life in the last few years has stood the storm of abuse, slander and malicious falsehoods that I have had to undergo. In the first primary for governor, I felt it was my duty to remain at the higway department and attend to my duties, and I did so, making only one speech during the campaign and that at the homecoming in my home town in Jackson county.

"But in the closing days of the campaign a malicious, libelous statement was secretly circulated by Dr. Hardman's headquarters involving my personal integrity and character—a statement more slanderous than any statement I have ever seen circulated about a public official—and I desired to meet the people face to face, and to hurl back into the face of my defamers the accusations that they had so falsely leveled against me.

"I want to discusse these slanders briefly. There has not, as chairman of the highway department, passed through my hands one dollar of the state's money which has not been fully accounted for, either in the question of salary or expense account. The statement is borne out by the audit filed by private auditors employed by

Banquet To Feature Opening Program For City Museum

TWO-THIRDS RULE CLAMOR REPELS MANY DEMOCRATS

Agitation To Abolish It Is Held Drum Beating by McAdoo and Smith Forces for Recruits.

SOME PROPONENTS CHANGE VIEWS

Herring Is Accused of Not Relating Whole Truth About How Committeemen Stand.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

Washington, September 18.—The renewed clamor of certain democratic leaders that the two-thirds rule will be abolished by the 1928 session, as desired by the Smith and McAdoo forces, is regarded by most of those not involved in this inter-party contest as merely beating the drum to rally converts.

Clyde L. Herring, national committeeman from Iowa, who is pushing the movement, issued a statement a day or two ago predicting abolition of the two-thirds rule for nominating, and its replacement by a majority rule. He based his prediction on reports from 57 national committeemen, of whom he said 48 favor abolition of the rule, with nine opposed.

Several weeks ago, Herring issued a statement, telling of 47 in favor and nine opposed. In other words, only one more has been heard from. The net change is one.

What He Didn't Say.

Herring did not point out that there are 108 members of the national committee, so that it would take 55 to constitute a majority. The committee, of course, has nothing directly to do with the change, which must be voted by the convention, though its recommendation would carry weight. The committee meets here after the fall campaigns to map out its program, and there may be some talk at that time.

One democrat close to party developments says he knows of three who signified formerly that they favored a change who now would not like to see it. He expressed the belief that there are others in the same situation. There has been a reaction, he said, and it hinges about the McAdoo-Smith feud.

Supporters of these two have indorsed the movement, in fact most of those who have come out for it are interested in the campaign of one or the other. Many party leaders who are not involved in this party fight, it is said, do not want to see a change at this time. They are represented as desiring to see both Smith and McAdoo out of the picture in 1928 in the interest of party harmony, and they believe that likelihood of a change to the majority rule only will encourage the followers of these two.

Doesn't Seem to Help.

When the change first was broached, it was indorsed by some who believed that the change to the majority rule would help the situation by making it easier for an outside candidate to secure the nomination, it was explained. But the apparent encouragement given to supporters of Smith and McAdoo by the movement has discouraged some of these, who see the party heading straight for the old fight in Madison square garden. McAdoo was just 20 short of a majority at one time during the 1924 convention, receiving 530 votes on the 69th ballot. There were 1,098 votes in the convention. That represented the effort of McAdoo leaders to swing a majority and stampede the convention, but it failed.

Many party leaders, it is believed, would like to see the reform, but would rather wait until after the 1928 convention to consider it. The rule has been in force since 1832, and tradition itself will be hard to overcome.

Dinner in Honor of Mrs. High, Donor of New Civic Cultural Center, Announced.

SPECIAL SHOWING OF AMERICAN ART

Country's Finest Paintings and Sculpture Being Selected for Exhibition Before Opening.

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Marking the formal opening of Atlanta's new center of civic culture, the High museum of art, a brilliant dinner will be given on Saturday, October 16, in honor of Mrs. Joseph M. High, donor of the museum. The banquet, which will be given in the ballroom of the Biltmore hotel, will be given by the Atlanta Art association, and also will serve as the opening affair of a series of brilliant entertainments which have been arranged during the following two weeks.

During these two weeks, the last in October, the opening of the High Museum of Art, which is located on Peachtree just beyond Seventeenth street, will witness also the greatest exhibition of American painting and sculpture, brought here for the occasion by the Grand Central Art galleries, of New York. Despite the magnificent exhibitions which have been brought here in the past, and shown at the Biltmore hotel, by the Grand Central galleries, it is stated that the collection now being prepared for showing here in October will far exceed anything seen in Atlanta in the past. Officials of the galleries are now busy selecting canvases for the Atlanta exhibition and propose to bring more real, desirable and fine examples than ever before shown by these galleries; works of art which heretofore have only been exhibited in the studios of the painters and sculptors and which are now being collected especially for the Atlanta exhibition and museum opening.

Private Preview.

During the summer months workmen have been busy making such changes as were necessary in the magnificent High residence, which was donated by Mrs. High as a perpetual museum to the city. By the time of the opening, this work will be completed, making of the structure one of the most beautifully adapted places for the effective display of objects of art in the entire south. Long vistas greet the visitor down the halls and rooms in which the lighting has been specially arranged for the proper showing of paintings are found both upstairs and down, in ample space for almost any number of properly chosen pictures.

Following the banquet to honor Mrs. High on Saturday night, October 16, there will be a private preview of the exhibition by invitation only, on Sunday afternoon. This will be open only to members of the art association and their friends, and invitations both for the banquet and the Sunday afternoon showing will go out from the association headquarters this week.

The exhibition will be thrown open to the general public on Monday, and the collection of the Grand Central galleries will remain for the following two weeks. The museum, of course, will be open to the public thereafter, with the present two score paintings and sculptures which have been secured from time to time, by gift or purchase, by the art association as a nucleus for the magnificent collection which Atlanta ultimately will own. The possession of the magnificent new High museum, it is believed, will induce many people of means to purchase works of art in the future for presentation or loan to the city.

Outstanding Event.

J. Carroll Payne, president of the association, stated Saturday that full details for the program at the High dinner had not been quite completed. There will, however, be short talks by two prominent figures in southern art circles from out of town, and, in addition, the officials of the Grand Central galleries and many of the artists whose work will be exhibited will attend.

The opening of the museum is the outstanding event of signifcance in Atlanta's cultural life of the past decade

Boiler-Maker Confident In His Dream of Millions

:: EXPECTS TO RECEIVE $9,000,000 ESTATE ::

Chicago, September 18.—(AP)—John Cooper, Kewanee, Ill., former boiler-maker, who claims to be heir to a mysterious Roanoke, Va., estate valued at $9,000,000 rested here today waiting for his dream to come true. When Cooper left his home town several days ago his friends there believed he had gone to Virginia to take possession of the estate, the existence of which they have never been able to confirm.

Cooper says he confidently expects to receive $9,467,856.28 tonight.

Reading from the purported will of his grandmother, Mr. Cooper listed the different stocks, bonds and real estate which he says he is to inherit. He also displayed a letter which he said was from his father, telling him of his inheritance.

Cooper said he was en route from Cincinnati to Kewanee and intended to awit here for the arrival of his father and attorneys from Delaware for the signing of papers.

He visited Godley and Godley, architects, at Cincinnati, to arrange for the construction of a new building for the First Christian church in his own town as a gift. The pastor of the church, the Rev. W. B. Oliver, met Mr. Cooper in this city, the latter said, in order to arrange the details for the new structure.

Cooper's father has been made executor, he said, and on his arrival they will go to Kewanee.

Cooper received a number of telegrams and communications at his hotel, one of them a telegram believed by police to have come from confidence men. It asked an appointment at a fictitious address which detectives said had been used on previous occasions by swindlers.

M'MILLAN GAINS IN UNION RECOUNT

Blairsville, Ga., September 18—(Special.)—At a meeting here today of the poll holders in the primary of September 8 in Gum Log district with the Union county democratic executive committee, a recount of the votes cast in Gum Log was made and Robert McMillan, of Clarkesville, candidate for solicitor general of the northeastern circuit, was given 53 votes instead of 23, as was first reported. The vote of Ed Kenyon, the other candidate for solicitor, tallied with the original count in Gum Log district, it having been reported at three votes.

The effect of today's recount when filed with the state executive committee, will insure the nomination of Mr. McMillan as solicitor, it is said. Mr. Kenyon had been declared the winner by eight votes upon the face of returns as filed with the committee in Atlanta.

Mr. Kenyon today filed a counter contest, which will be heard next Thursday by the Union executive committee, of which E. B. Fite is chairman.

The alleged error in Gum Log district was discovered when records of the vote in Union were compared by local citizens.

IMMUNITY ASKED BY ORMISTON

the evangelist disappeared from the beach here May 18. The woman is known to have spent 10 days in the cottage and it was alleged attempts by Mrs. McPherson to produce a "Miss X" as the occupant of the cottage that resulted in charges against her of manufacturing false evidence. The evangelist denies she was at Carmel.

Hahn did not reveal what Ormiston may claim to know about Mrs. McPherson's activities over the entire period of her disappearance, ending with her arrival at Douglas, Ariz., with a story of having been kidnaped.

At San Francisco today Ormiston's mother publicly called upon her son to surrender and tell the truth concerning the case.

Declaring that his client, Mrs. Lorraine Sielaff-Wiseman, self-confessed imposter in the McPherson case, was entitled to the same consideration as Mrs. McPherson herself, Attorney Hahn won a victory in court when he succeeded in getting the time of Mrs. Sielaft-Wisemann's preliminary hearing changed from today to September 27. That is the date set for the preliminary hearing of Mrs. McPherson and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy.

Keyes Answers Charges.

Official cognizance of the statements of Mrs. McPherson, Temple evangelist, and her mother that they have been victims of persecution in the filing of felony charges of criminal conspiracy against them, was taken today by District Attorney Asa Keyes. He issued the following statement:

"Mrs. McPherson is not and never has been made a victim of persecution in so far as the law enforcement agencies of this city and county are concerned. Every act of my office concerning her kidnaping story was weighed carefully and thoughtfully. We went over every shred of evidence before issuing complaints against Mrs. McPherson and her mother in order that we would not be guilty of hasty and ill-considered conclusion.

"Mrs. McPherson returned home after a month's absence with a story that she was kidnaped and held a prisoner in a shack by a Steve and Rose we now know to be purely mythical. She never brought forward an iota of evidence to back her astounding charges but went instead to the county grand jury and attempted to make that body a plaything by asking indictments for kidnapers that did not exist.

"This office has its duty to perform and must do it regardless of who is hurt.

"I am sorry for Mrs. McPherson, but that cannot influence my sworn duty."

BONDS NOT ISSUE, HARDMAN SAYS

shod over the people of this sovereign state, but the voters will assert their rights October 6 and vote overwhelmingly for a business administration.

"Expensive machinery has been turned over to inexperienced men. Hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of this equipment is rusting away by roadsides throughout the state and also at East Point. It is a shame and a disgrace. The taxpayers are crying for relief. They must have relief and they will get relief if you elect a governor who favors a business administration in every department of the state government. The defeat of the machine politicians is inevitable. Holder's supporters see the handwriting on the wall and are deserting his ranks. They realize they cannot stem the tide that is rolling across the state.

"Emmanuel, Telfair and other counties in the state have waited patiently for the state highway to match funds. Mr. Holder urged them to float bonds and yet he says he is against bonds notwithstanding the fact he endeavored to float a state bond issue a few months ago. Does this not prove his inconsistency? In Jefferson county, the home of Highway Commissioner John Phillips, a bond issue of $250,000 was sold for $242,000. Practically all of this money has been spent and this county has less than 12 miles of hard-surfaced roads. When will Jefferson county receive her state and federal aid? When will the dozens of other counties in the state receive their promised aid? It needs no expert to figure out that it will be some 10 or 15 years before these counties receive their pro rata share of state and federal money. Do you call this business efficiency? Certainly not. So why let the politicians pull the wool over your eyes with their whispered promises? Let us have a business administration that will be fair to all counties instead of a favored few.

Voters Are "Awakening."

"Down in Chatham, county the starting point of the coastal highway, voters have awakened to the fact that it will be years before their road is finished to the Florida line. All counties from Richmond down to Clinch now realize that their road will not be completed as promised. And so the story goes throughout Georgia. Did you know that seven million dollars is now due various counties on road work? Did you know the state highway has about 18 cents on the dollar to pay this with? Are you willing to have your county settle on this basis? Just another paramount need of a business administration in Georgia.

"My record in the legislature on labor in Georgia is like an open book. I fought against the convict-lease system while Mr. Holder fought to extend the lease another five years. I have always advocated better educational facilities for our state, better banking laws, better health laws and other reforms. My record speaks for itself on these measures.

"The false report circulated that I had offered to appoint Governor Clifford Walker on the highway board is absurd. But these are like many other false reports, simply campaign canards, and are not worthy of a reply. As previously stated I have no campaign pledges to pay and when I enter the office of governor I will do so free and untrammeled. My appointments will be made to men best qualified for the office.

"I again call upon my loyal friends throughout the state to be on their guard, watch every canard that is circulated for political effect, then vote solidly against the Holder machine that is throttling the state. This octopus must be and will be crushed.

MACHINE MUST GO SAYS CHAMLEE.

Discussing the gubernatorial campaign Saturday, Alex S. Chamlee, manager of Dr. L. G. Hardman, in a statement to the press, said:

"That the people of Georgia are fully determined to complete the job on October 6, that was partially completed on September 8, has been further demonstrated during the past week.

"Georgians are fully aware of the fact that the Brown-Holder machine is a distinct menace to the interest of the people of Georgia. This machine was partially demolished on September 8 and from unmistakable indications it will be thoroughly destroyed on October 6. Not only are the friends and supporters of George Carswell lining up 100 per cent behind Dr. Hardman in this race, but there are pouring into headquarters daily letters and telegrams from hundreds of people who formerly were supporters of John N. Holder, stating that they are through with him and are whole-heartedly supporting Dr. Hardman for governor in this race.

"It has been necessary to more than double the force at headquarters to keep up with the ever increasing flood of mail and telegrams pouring in from all directions; and the constant stream of visitors at headquarters bring reports from all sections of Georgia that Dr. Hardman is making tremendous inroads on the Holder following.

"Notwithstanding the horde of employees of the Brown-Holder machine that are spreading Holder propaganda over the state by traveling in state automobiles and drawing state pay, the people are not being fooled, but on the contrary, each day grow more determined to utterly and completely demolish the remainder of this machine on October 6.

"These paid emissaries by hundreds are traveling in all directions through Georgia with instructions to let the word get out that Holder people are actively working. Next week they will be instructed to spread propaganda everywhere that 'Holder is gaining.' The propaganda which they were instructed to spread during the third week is that 'Holder is going in by a great landslide.'

Cannot Fool Voters.

"But the people are much harder to fool than John N. Holder and his all-star cast of campaign managers seem to think. They have been fed up on this propaganda and know full well whence originates the word these hirelings will pass around that 'Holder people are working;' 'Holder is gaining,' and 'Holder will go in by a great landslide.'

"The people know full well that Dr. Hardman will go into the governor's office bound by no promise save to do his full duty as he sees fit, by the state of Georgia. The silly charges of trades and combinations made by Mr. Holder will not fool anybody. Dr. Hardman has made no trades, no promises and when elected will enter upon the performance of his sacred duties absolutely free and untrammeled. In great many letters and telegrams from all sections, this expression recurs: 'It will be a great day in Georgia when a man like Dr. Hardman goes into the governor's office absolutely free from all political trades, promises and alliances.'

CLUB FOR HARDMAN FORMED AT WOODLAND

Woodland, Ga., September 18.—(Special)—The friends of Dr. L. G. Hardman organized a Hardman-for-governor club here today. A large membership was enrolled.

Hardman's friends claim he will carry Talbot county on October 6.

J. N. HOLDER OPENS SECOND CAMPAIGN

W. T. Anderson and Governor Clifford Walker, the purpose of whose employment was to find some charge upon which to remove me as chairman of the highway department. The same fact was found by the state auditor, Honorable Sam J. Slate, in whose audit the people of the state have confidence.

Many Roads Built.

"As to the charges of inefficiency and waste that have been leveled against the highway department, I desire to say that with our funds we have built roads as rapidly and economically as any state in the union, and to say further that I have only been chairman of the highway department since 1922, and am only one member of a board whose action is governed by a majority. I have not had the appointment of the highway engineer, who directs the field force, lays out detours and new projects, looks after the work and employs the men. I have done everything that I could with the aid of my colleagues on the board, to hold down the expenses of the department and produce results, and I believe that any man in Georgia who knows conditions will say that the highway department has vastly improved in the last three years.

Dr. Hardman's headquarters at the eleventh hour secretly circulated a report charging me with misappropriating trust funds of the Martin institute and the Methodist church—the vilest slander ever printed. I asked Dr. Hardman to disavow this untruthful charge, but up to the present time he has remained silent. The best refutation of this slander lies in the fact that Dr. Hardman, assisted by his check book, could not carry the county of Jackson, in which both of us resided, and in which Martin institute is located.

The last charge they circulated against me is that I would appoint J. J. Brown chairman of the highway board. I believe the people of Georgia have a sense of fair play. Mr. Brown has been defeated and after a man is defeated it is not manly or customary to hound him. Fair-minded people do not believe that he should be continually thrown into another campaign. I desire to say, however, that I have not discussed the chairmanship of the highway department with J. J. Brown, either before or after the primary. Mr. Brown has not asked for anything at my hands, and if I am elected governor I will not appoint him chairman of the highway board.

The charge of machine politics is not only absolutely as false as the charge of collusion with the Brown machine, but the best answer to this charge is the fact that while I carried the county of Jackson, my home county, Mr. Brown's opponent carried the same county by a large majority.

Running Own Race.

I am running my own race. I have run it without any collusion, understanding or agreement with any other candidate for office. Can Dr. Hardman truthfully say as much? For while he was attacking me in north Georgia, his allies, Joe Wood and George Carswell, were attacking me in various sections of the state. Scarcely had the ballots ceased falling in the box before the combination, aided and directed by W. T. Anderson, Julian Harris and Governor Clifford Walker, had issued a manifesto to the people of Georgia and declared that the men who supported Carswell and Wood were to be delivered into the Hardman column, I think not. No man yet has ever lived who could deliver the people of Georgia—the free and untrammeled voters of this state—into political trades. Of course, every man knows that there was a working agreement—a trade and collusion between Hardman, Wood and Carswell, and the chief promoter of this trade was the governor of the state. The chief morthpieces of this combination were W. T. Anderson, of Macon, and Julian Harris, of Columbus, who have set themselves up as the political mentors and dictators of the state.

I desire no campaign of personal mud-slinging, but the day has come when the picture that Dr. Hardman has drawn of himself—a great humanitarian millionaire—must be exposed.

I would like to ask the doctor if, in the days following the world war, when the dollar had lost its purchasing power, when cotton mill operatives over this state were asking employers that their wages be adjusted to meet living conditions and some of the mills adjacent to Commerce did adjust the wages—didn't the humanitarian millionaire doctor voice an indignant protest and state that $2 a day was entirely too much for cotton mill operatives, as none of them were worth over 50 cents a day? I would ask the doctor, as an employer of labor, what improved conditions and modern conveniences are furnished the employees of his own cotton mills?

The doctor speaks much of his prosperity and great business ability. How has he acquired his millions? Did he inherit them? If not, let him tell the people of Georgia how he made his vast fortune.

Another thing, my fellow citizens, money has never yet been the only attribute the people have required of their governor. I did not know that sharp trading has ever been thought in Georgia to be a prerequisite before a man could hold the position of chief executive of this state.

Charges Evasion.

The doctor has skilfully and studiously evaded the issue of this campaign—and that is, bonds. He stated once that I should remain on the highway department and build roads, and let him be governor. That is the reported speech he made in Madison county. The doctor has stated, according to the press, that he was in favor of a small bond issue, to be divided between roads, the common schools and the higher institutions of learning. He stated, further, that he was for bonds for paved roads to every schoolhouse and church in Georgia. This would conservatively cost two hundred million dollars. In another speech he stated that he was in favor of a bond issue of fifteen million dollars. Now where does the doctor stand?

Where do you stand today, Dr. Hardman, on the bond question? I have taken unequivocably a stand against bonds. I have stated my reasons therefor. The people of Georgia know that, if elected governor, I shall oppose the loading down with bonded indebtedness the future of our state because we must all realize that increase of bonded indebtedness means increased taxation. That has been the fact everywhere, and every sane man knows that an increase in governmental expense calls inevitably for an increase in public revenues, if a deficit is to be avoided. This means increased taxation, and means in case of bond issues, diversion of current revenues to pay the dead weight of mounting interest payments.

The doctor prides himself much upon his business ability, but upon this—the greatest economic question confronting the people—he has evaded the issue from the beginning of the campaign.

All the pro-bond advocates hail him now as the bond candidate. Yet he opens not his mouth to explain to the people how he proposes to retire an educational bond issue. In fact, on the very question upon which his business ability would shed light, the doctor sheds no light. This has been a strange campaign.

What Governor Can Do.

Why do the candidates who favor bonds resort to such secretive methods? Again and again you hear the story "the governor has nothing to do with the issuance of bonds—that is a matter for the legislature." What more has a governor to do with other laws than he would have to do with state bonds? Why does Dr. Hardman advocate changes in certain other laws? If he assumes the attitude he is reported in the press to assume as to bonds, he will make no recommendation to the legislature. While, of course, the governor can pass no legislation, he can counsel and advise, can call an extra session, and he can recommend bonds. And surely, with the self-proclaimed business ability of Dr. Hardman, there is no question that could come before the legislature in which he could advise with more confidence than that relating to finances. If a governor has nothing to do with a bond issue, why was it that the present governor spent $125,000 of the taxpayers' money in an effort to ram down the throats of the people of Georgia a bond issue of $93,000,000—$70,000,000 for roads and $23,000,000 for education? And the same governor is the chief ally—the fountain head of the machine which is supporting Dr. Hardman.

Sutely Dr. Hardman does not expect to hide behind this—the last device of political cowards—when he says that state bonds are a matter for the legislature, and yet all other laws are matters for the governor to counsel and advise with the legislautre.

Made No Trades.

Now, to my friends over the state, I have come to you with my message. I have declared to you that I have made no trades or combinations. I have made no promise to any man. I have declared to you that the trumped-up charges involving my personal integrity and character are absolutely false, base, libelous and slanderous. I have accounted for every dollar of public money that has ever come into my hands. I desire to say to you, further, that if elected governor of Georgia, I shall do my utmost to promote an era of good will among our people.

I shall have definite and well defined plans and policies to recommend to the legislature. I shall recommend to the legislature that definite steps be taken to find out the educational needs of our state and to provide for them. With the experience I have gained, I shall lend every encouragement to the building of paved highways, and our paving program shall proceed as rapidly as possible, and our increasing revenues will enable us to do this from year to year until in a few years, Georgia will have a network of paved highways, without incurring one dollar of bonded indebtedness. I shall urge the legislature to give undivided attention to the banking laws of the state. Measures looking toward the safety of depositors' money will have my earnest support. If elected governor, no efforts will be spared by me to prevent bank failures, and to write our banking laws so as to prevent a repetition of what has occurred. My effort will be directed to securing better markets for our farmers, and I shall cooperate in every possible way to promote agriculture. I shall cooperate with every official elected by the people of our state in an earnest effort to give Georgia the best government of which we are capable.

In conclusion, my fellow citizens, it is my earnest conviction that the office of governor cannot be bought. If my platform and if the things for which I stand appeal to you, I hope that you will loyally and enthusiastically support me and carry our banner to victory on October 6.

HOLDER HEADQUARTERS ISSUES STATEMENT.

"John N. Holder's popular plurality of 4,268 votes in the gubernatorial primary of September 8, as shown by the official tabulation of the state democratic executive committee, serves further to stimulate confidence in Mr. Holder's nomination in the run-over primary of October 6," it was pointed out at Holder headquarters in the Kimball house Saturday afternoon.

"The official figures, as announced by Mrs. Bessie Anderson, secretary of the state committee, are both reassuring and significant," it was announced. "It is, of course, highly gratifying that the popular vote in Jackson county contributed to swell Mr. Holder's plurality. Jackson county is the home of both Mr. Holder and Dr. Hardman, and the official returns strikingly indicate that their fellow citizens experienced no difficulty in choosing between thhem, and this despite the slanderous attacks on Mr. Holder's integrity circulated on election eve by Dr. Hardman's headquarters.

"We remark and emphasize the result in Jackson county because, from verbal and written reports, we have been convinced that it has made a deep impression throughout the state. Personal visitors, letters, telegrams and phone calls from all over the state daily request official figures on the Jackson county result, and it heartens us to furnish such indisputable evidence of the relative esteem in which the candidates are held by the people who have known them through the years.

Official Vote Shown.

"The official tabulation of the vote in Jackson county gave Mr. Holder 1,350 as against 1,191 for Dr. Hardman—a clean, clear-cut plurality of 161 votes.

"The returns from the Commerce and Jefferson districts, the respective homes of Dr. Hardman and Mr. Holder, were even more significant. In the Commerce district, Mr. Holder polled 96 votes as against 495 for Dr. Hardman; and in the Jefferson district, Dr. Hardman polled only 34 votes as against Mr. Holder's 526 votes.

"In a word, Mr. Holder received 96 votes in Dr. Hardman's 'own home town,' while in his own city of Jefferson, there were only 34 persons who voted for Dr. Hardman.

"A further study of the official returns shows that Mr. Holder ran first or second in 134 counties. He ran second in 19 of the 27 counties carried by Mr. Carswell, and second in 6 of the 7 counties carried by Mr. Wood.

"These facts, considered in connection with his substantial popular plurality and his clean sweep of Jackson county, made Mr. Holder the leading candidate in the primary of September 8, and help to explain the decided advantage that he enjoys in the run-over—an advantage that is becoming daily more apparent.

"Our reports from Mr. Holder's meeting at Washington, Wilkes, today were most gratifying, and we are delighted to announce that he plans to continue actively on the stump throughout the remainder of the campaign. His speaking itinerary will be announced next week, and our only regret is that the time is too short to permit of his visiting every county in the state."

Legion Post Not Wanted By Pershing

Washington, September 18.—(AP) General John J. Pershing made known tonight that he would not be a candidate for national commander of the American Legion and could not accept the post if offered to him.

The general announced his position in a letter to George Washington Post No. 1 of this city, which group recently adopted a resolution proposing his name as a candidate.

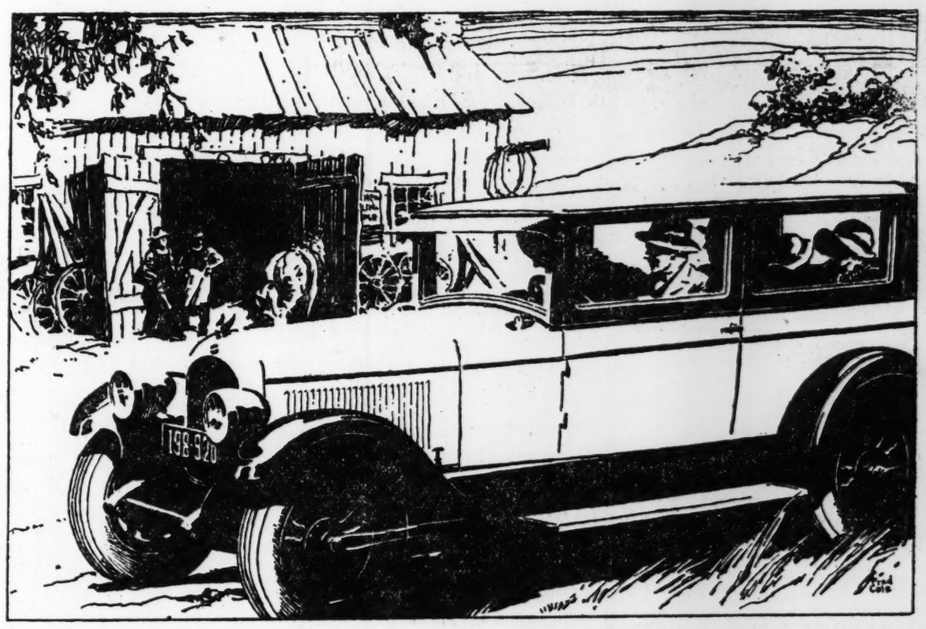

He wrote that he was in accord with the "noble aim and purposes" of the legion, retained an abiding interest in its welfare and believed that it has become "an invaluable asset to the nation," adding:

"Because of important work that I have in hand at present, it would be impossible for me to give exclusive attention to this task which efficient leadership demands. I am, therefore, compelled to deny myself the opportunity for an hour that might well crown the career of any soldier.

"I am not a candidate for the office and have not authorized the use of my name in that connection. I shall be content to serve in the ranks."

proving itself the most sensational value in the history of the motor industry as the direct result of Chrysler's plan of Quality Standardization

Within three weeks of the lighter, lower-priced Chrysler "60" introduction, overwhelming demand required a production in excess of 500 cars a day. But even this has now fallen far short of supplying an insistent and enthusiastic public which has singled out the Chrysler "60" as a six of value far in advance of anything in its field or at its price.

In the lower-priced Chrysler "60" you get the same Chrysler Standardized Quality of scientific engineering and manufacturing precision comprehended in the Chrysler "70" and Imperial "80".

60 miles—and more—per hour; lightning acceleration of 5 to 25 miles in 7¾ seconds; the economy of 22 miles to the gallon; characteristic Chrysler smartness and beauty; phenomenal riding ease; the safety of Chrysler four-wheel hydraulic brakes; oil-filter; air-cleaner; seven-bearing crankshaft; full pressure lubrication; impulse neutralizers; road levelizers front and rear, roomy luxurious bodies; and scores of other features which bespeak dependability and long life.

The Chrysler plan of Quality Standardization differs from, and is superior to, ordinary manufacturing practice and methods, because it demands fixed and inflexible quality standards which enforce the same scrupulously close limits—the same rigid rule of engineering exactness—the same absolute accuracy and precision of alignment and assemblage—in the measurement, the machining and the manufacturing of every part, practice and process in four lines of Chrysler cars—"50", "60", "70" and Imperial "80".

There isn't a lower-priced six on the market that will begin to give you as much for your money.

See the Chrysler "60" for yourself; drive it; put it to any test. We know the Chrysler "60" will sell itself to you—that you'll be satisfied with nothing else at its price.

PAINE COLLEGE LIBRARY DRIVE STARTS MONDAY

A campaign to raise in Atlanta $25,000 as part of a $75,000 fund for the erection at Paine college, Augusta, of a library building in memory of Dr. George Williams Walker, former president of that institution, will be inaugurated Monday, according to Rev. C. C. Neal, an officer of the C. M. E. church, who has been in the city several days helping to plan the campaign.

The movement to honor Dr. Walker in this way is an interracial plan and was given the indorsement of the white Methodists of Atlanta at a mass meeting held at Wesley Memorial church on August 29, at which a committee was appointed to cooperate in the campaign. At that meeting an apportionment of $25,000 was accepted as Atlanta's share of the total. Bishop R. A. Carter of this city has headed the subscription list with a pledge of $500. The Rev. Ray S. Tomlin, president of Paine college, and the Rev. J. A. Martin, of Nashville, Sunday school secretary of the C. M. E. church, will be in Atlanta throughout the week and will assist in interviewing hundreds of public-spirited citizens in the interest of this memorial to Dr. Walker.

Paine college, to which he devoted his life, is one of the leading institutions in the south for the training of colored youth, thousands of whom it has fitted for lives of usefulness.

ATLANTA TO INVITE BIG MANUFACTURERS

Atlanta will make an effort through the convention and tourist bureau and other agencies to obtain for 1927 the annual convention of the American Manufacturers' association, which meets in New York early in October.

W. C. Royer, president of the Atlanta Hotel Men's association, probably will attend the New York meeting, in company with Thomas Brumby, of Marietta, president, and J. W. McGuire, secretary of the Georgia Manufacturers' association, to extend the official invitation, it was said Saturday.

The invitation was decided upon at a meeting last week at the convention and tourist bureau offices of representatives of the Georgia Manufacturers' association, the Atlanta Merchants and Manufacturers' association, the chamber of commerce and a number of civic bodies.

"The American Manufacturers' association convention would be of immense value to Atlanta," said Ivan E. Allen, vice president of the convention bureau, "in that it will bring probably 2,000 of the really outstanding manufacturers of the country, show them how the south is progressing industrially, and perhaps convince them of the advisability of establishing branch manufactories or distribution offices here. It is well worth going after, and I believe we can convince the manufacturers that Atlanta has something to offer them."

The American Manufacturers' association has held its conventions for a number of years in New York.

Farmer Outwits Boll Weevil

:: Diversified Crops Without Cotton Solves Problem ::

With Herd of Jersey Cows

BY C. F. COLE.

Some six miles out from Atlanta on the old McDonough road leading out from East Atlanta and just beyond the federal prison farm, Harmon W. King has outwitted the boll weevil with a herd of registered Jersey cows and diversified crops.

Several years ago when the boll weevil pest hit this section of the state and literally put the farmer out of business, Mr. King turned his attention to cows and to crops other than cotton in an effort to regain his footing on the farm. Making a careful survey of his land, which consisted of about 300 acres, much of which was in pasture and timber, and that under cultivation being in a very run-down condition, Mr. King decided that he would specialize in Jersey cattle and diversified crops, leaving cotton entirely out.

Treat 'Em Like a Lady.

After several years of experimenting and much hard work Mr. King has succeeded in raising a herd of 35 head of as fine registered Jerseys as can be found in the state of Georgia. Every cow on the place is not only registered with a high-sounding name, but has the honor of answering to her own pet name, for Mr. King has long since learned that a cow must be spoken to as a lady, to get the best results from her, therefore, when Belle, Daisy or Blossom is called, each in turn, mildly walks forth in answer to the call.

Papa Cow Answers, Too.

Even old Brinder, the father and grandfather of a number of the younger cows, answers to his name, though not always in a pleasant mood.

While the Jerseys have furnished ready money for operating the farm during these years, Mr. King has been busy building up his land by planting diversified crops which have been used for food for the Jerseys as well as his own family.

By planting fall crops and turning under the stubble after these crops are harvested, much humus is stored up in the soil. Mr. King has improved his land to such a degree that this year he has unusually fine crops of corn, beans, rye, oats, and other smaller crops.

High Corn Yield.

In one field he has 25 acres of as fine corn as can be found anywhere, the stalks standing higher than a man's head and the ears simply hanging straight out or hanging down with the weight they carry. This field will easily yield 75 bushels to the acre.

Another field of 40 acres is a perfect wilderness with its abundant crop of Larreado and Mung beans; these beans are shoulder high and so thick one can get only a little way out in the field. The beanse will be cut for hay, the stubble will be turned under and a winter ground cover crop planted.

Mr. King estimates the nitrogen stored up by using beans is worth about $10 an acre for nitrogen alone, to say nothing of humus stored up in the soil. Then the hay gathered from this crop to feed his cows will yield about two tons an acre at $40 a ton, making his bean crop worth about $90 an acre. Of course there was some cost in making the crop, seed cost about $12 a bushel, using 10 pounds to an acre; plowing, planting and harvesting, but with all that there will be a wonderful crop.

Besides numbers of other crops, Mr. King raises practically evrything on the farm for the upkeep of his family.

While Mr. King is busy with the farm, Mrs. King always raises numbers of fine chickens, both for home consumption and for market, always realizing fancy prices for her eggs and chickens. She has been unusually successful this year as her large flock will testify.

ANTI-EVOLUTION LAWS ARE SCORED

Washington, September 18.—A new appeal and plan for a "religious freedom" campaign, with especial emphasis on the battle to eliminate the anti-evolution laws of Tennessee and other states, was placed before the national convention of the Unitarian Laymen's league by its leaders here tonight.

"If the present wave of intolerance is to be checked, it cannot be done by the mere protest of a little band of liberals," said Rev. Samuel McChord Crothers, Cambridge, Mass., pastor of the late Dr. Charles W. Eliot's church.

Appeal for Liberty.

"The appeal must be made to the great body of well meaning citizens. The liberty we can agree on is that which is defined in our constitution."

Charles H. Strong, New York attorney, told the story of the laymen league's battle against fundamentalists in the Scopes case which he described as "the first instance in church history of a church organization going to the aid of a public school teacher, charged with teaching ideas contrary to the Bible."

Strong reviewed the trial of John Scopes, Dayton, Tenn., school teacher, through his conviction, in which the Tennessee law was upheld, up to the submission of his appeal to the Tennessee supreme court, which, he said, is composed of two Presbyterians, two Methodists and one Baptist—all fundamentalists.

Tennessee Law Hit.

The Tennessee law of 1915 requiring Bible reading daily in the public schools, is unconstitutional, as well as the 1925 act prohibiting teaching of evolution, Strong said, because both interfere with liberty of teaching.

The fundamentalist movement, which Strong said was richly financed by those in control of the "crusaders' champion," a Florida fundamentalist organ, is declared spreading. The fundamentalists succeeded in Mississippi and failed in Louisiana by a close vote last year, but they immediately induced the Louisiana educational authorities to exclude from schools all text books in which evolution is taught, he asserted.

WOMEN VOTERS LEAGUE TO MEET IN SAVANNAH

Savannah, Ga., September 18.—(Special.)—For the first time in several years, the Georgia League of Women Voters will hold its annual convention in Savannah this fall, and arrangements are being made for the principal features of the program. Its most important event will be the presence of Miss Belle Sherwin, president of the National League of Women Voters, and one of the leading women in public life in the United States.

The convention will be held October 28-30, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The session will be at the DeSoto hotel, and the daily luncheons will be held there. The one big social event of the convention will be the dinner at which Miss Sherwin will be the guest of honor. Some local women will be asked to preside at this dinner. Mrs. F. W. Atstaetter will be invited to preside at the meeting at which Miss Sherwin speaks.

Mrs. Dan C. Lyle, of College Park, is state president. She has appointed Mrs. Frank McIntire and Mrs. H. E. Walters to arrange the program and this has been done tentatively, in conference with Mrs. Lee V. Graham, president of the Savannah league. Mrs. Graham has appointed Mrs. E. S. Trosdal in charge of entertainment.

The Georgia League of Women Voters is a business organization and very little time is allowed for entertainment, the daily luncheons and the annual dinner being the principal social occasions, it is stated.

Mrs. Frank McIntire will give an oyster roast for the visitors Saturday, October 30, at her home at Tybee. This will give them an opportunity for an automobile drive, as well as for a social gathering. If time allows, another entertainment will be planned.

As representatives in the league is limited, the conventions are usually small, with probably not more than 50 women attending from different parts of the state.

CHILDREN OF U. S. HAVE MOST PEP —BUT MANNERS?

New York, September 18.—(AP)—European children have better manners than those in America, but American children have more initiative and adaptability, in the opinion of Mrs. Sidonie M. Gruenberg, director of the Child Study Association of America, Incorporated.

Mrs. Gruenberg, recently returned from a study of conditions relating to the child in European countries, expressed the belief that manners might be sometimes attained only at the price of harm to the child.

VOTE CONSOLIDATED IN EIGHTH DISTRICT

Athens, Ga., September 18.—(Special.)—A consolidation of the vote cast for congress in the Eighth district on September 8 shows that Congressman Brand carried eight out of 13 counties in the district. The counties carried by Brand were Clarke, Oconee, Wilkes, Newton, Morgan, Franklin, Putnam and Greene, while Paul Brown, of Elberton, carried four, Elbert, Hart, Oglethorpe and Madison. Orrin Roberts, of Monroe, carried Walton county.

Of the 34 unit votes in the district, Congressman Brand received 20, Brown 10 and Roberts four.

The popular vote in the district was: Brand, 8,593; Brown, 7,552, and Roberts, 1,912.

Outstanding measures advocated by Congressman Brand at the convention which renominated him here Thursday were:

Farm relief legislation; legislation for the protection of depositors of national banks and state bank members of the federal reserve system; mandatory law requiring the department of justice when such banks fail to immediately send an expert criminal investigator to examine the records of the bank.

Legislation under the bill introduced by him giving veterans of the world war the option of receiving cash instead of certificates of insurance.

Protest against cancellation of foreign debts.

The operation of Muscle Shoals by the government in the interest of the farmers for the purpose of obtaining cheap fertilizer, or if leased to private interests, proper protection of the interests of the farmers.

GERMAN-FRENCH 'ENTENTE CORDIALE' NOW PREDICTED

Paris, September 18.—(AP)—The French people and press begin to see prospects of an "entente cordiale" between France and Germany as a result of the conversations between Foreign Minister Stresemann and M. Briand during the latter's visit to Geneva.

The French minister of foreign affairs, who returned from Switzerland this morning, refuses to go into details concerning the negotiations at Geneva at Thoiry on the ground that this would be likely to give rise to harmful press polemics on Franco-German relations during the tentative negotiations. He declares positively, however, that an entente is possible.

BANQUET TO FEATURE MUSEUM OPENING

or more, and will be one of the most important events in the future history of the city. It carries a double significance, in that it marks the first time that Atlanta has possessed a central art museum, and brings again to Atlanta the Grand Central galleries, whose exhibition here in 1924 and 1925 were distinguished occasions in the cultural life of the city and the south, and were marked with remarkable success, literally thousands of Atlantans thronging the Biltmore to view the collection. The fact that it is housed in Atlanta's own new museum this year undoubtedly will increase tremendously the number of visitors, even above the numbers of past years.

List of Committees.

OCTOBER 27 NAMED AS U. S. NAVY DAY

Throughout the nation, in foreign lands and on distant seas to the farthest and most remote parts of the globe, wherever the Stars and Stripes may be, Wednesday, October 27, will be observed by all Americans as Navy day. On this day, Secretary of the Navy Curtis D. Wilbur, has extended to the public an invitation to visit and inspect the ships and stations of the naval establishment.

Naval vessels will be designated to visit ports on the Atlantic and Pacific on that day; naval shore stations and navy yards will be thrown open to the public in order that daily activities of the navy, both ashore and afloat, may be seen by the many visitors.

The navy league of the United States, which is fostering Navy day, is endeavoring to put before the nation the importance and necessity of an adequate, well-equipped and well-trained navy. The Navy league, in proposing the observance, says that since the days of the revolution ocean-borne foreign commerce has increased from a few ships, terrorized by the depredations of unchecked pirates and foreign molestations, to a fleet of ships that carry produce undisturbed to every port of the world.

Navy day marks the anniversary of the birth of the late President Theodore Roosevelt, who did much toward making clear the importance of sea power, and bringing the navy to a point where it places the United States upon an equal footing with other principal world powers.

New West End Elementary School Building Will Be Modern Structure

The above photograph is of the architects' drawing for the new West End elementary school building, for which bids are expected to be asked within the next few days by the board of education. The structure will be one of the most modern in the entire city, it is claimed.

The Stewart avenue elementary school, bids for which are about to be called, is one of the most modern developments of this class of building, based on the latest buildings of this character throughout the country, it is said.

While the building contains a certain number of standard class rooms, it also has special features such as medical and dental units, in addition to the administrative unit.

The usual features of the elementary schools that have been used heretofore covering a complete kindergarten unit, in this case are put in in duplicate, as is also the first grade unit with ample rest rooms and juvenile conveniences in order to secure ample, light and well ventilated accommodations for the small children, simulating as nearly as possible conditions in the average home.

This scheme also includes provisions for nature study, manual training, special students, cafeteria and play room.

On the right-hand side is shown a wing containing a complete auditorium unit which will seat, together with the floor and balcony space approximately 700 people, with full stage at the western end. This auditorium is also designed for use for interior athletics such as basketball, etc., by using the main floor area, which is of proper dimension for courts, with space on either side and in the balconies for spectators; ample conveniences are provided for, such as lockers, showers, etc.

All of the rooms are well lighted and ventilated. There are also ample entrances and exits, so that the building can be emptied in a few minutes, in addition to the fact that the character of construction will be entirely fireproof, and will include every possible safety feature.

It is expected that the board of education will call for estimates on this unit in the near future, as plans and specifications by A. Ten Eyck Brown, one of the leading school architects of this territory, have been completed.

RICH'S BARGAIN BASEMENT

$4,000 RAISED FOR TALLULAH

Approximately $4,000 was added to the Passie Fenton Ottley scholarship endowment fund for Tallulah Falls Industrial school by the fashion revue and dance which M. Rich & Bros. company sponsored as a benefit for the fund last Tuesday, officials avowed Saturday.

The entire proceeds from the ticket sale came intact to the fund through the fact that the Rich company paid all expenses. The $4,000 accruing from the fashion revue is the largest lump sum that has been added to the fund since the movement to create a new scholarship endowment fund to be named in honor of Mrs. John K. Ottley was launched seven weeks ago.

Other subscriptions, including cash donations and several endowment life insurance policies assigned to the school, bring the grand total to $15,000 thus putting the movement across the half-way mark.

Mrs. T. T. Stevens, general chairman for the fund, is confident that the entire amount will be raised within the next few weeks. She will continue to maintain headquarters on the fourth floor of M. Rich & Bros. store, from which office she is directing the movement.

How to Contribute.

Friends of education throuhout the state and supporters of Tallulah Falls school who wish to add contributions to the Passie Fenton Ottley scholarship endowment fund are asked to send their donations directly to Mrs. Stevens in care of the M. Rich & Bros. company. Amounts, whether large or small, will be received with appreciation.

The remainder of the proposed $30,000 unit will be raised through cash gifts and endowment life insurance. For the most part the life insurance policies are written for $1,000, and in all cases the endowment policies constituting a portion of the scholarship unit are assigned to Tallulah Falls Industrial School, Inc.

Owing to the very widespread interest in the movement and the firm place which the school holds in the affections of Georgia people there have been numerous unsolicited subscriptions to the new scholarship fund, and many more are anticipated before the work is finished, it is pointed out.

During the past week Atlantans had an unusual opportunity of seeing specimens of the handicrafts for which Tallulah Falls school is famous. A beautiful collection of coverlets, baskets, rugs, scarfs, feather fans, pottery and bags—all made by the children as a part of their training—were effectively displayed in a huge window at the Rich store. The exhibit, arranged by John Mackay of the Rich company, is one of the most beautiful collections of handicrafts ever seen in Atlanta.

Fame of Handiwork.

Mountain folk are natural craftsmen. In generations gone by they were famous for their exquisite handweaving. Every household had its spinning wheels and looms. Few but grew their own wool.

The introduction of machinery made inroads on the homespun for a time, but through the agency of the mountain schools that have revived the household arts the handspun and handwoven articles have become the vogue again.

Tallulah Falls school excels in these household arts. The children are taught a greater variety of handicrafts and they produce a more beautiful finished product than can be found elsewhere in the state.

Too, the market has opened up and ready sale is found for every piece of work they do. The weaving is exceptionally beautiful, thanks largely to the instruction afforded the children, and to the well-equipped crafts house with its 17 modern looms—the gift of the late Mrs. McGregor Adams, of Highland Park, Illinois, and Thomasville, Ga.

The teacher of handicrafts at Tallulah Falls is Miss Eliza Shirley—a mountain girl who was graduated from Tallulah Falls and later had special training in New York.

MASSENGALE SAYS HARDMAN IS NEXT IN GOVERNORSHIP

T. E. Massengale, former custodian of the state capitol and recently tax collector of Warren county, who is known in political circles as an accurate "election prognosticator," has sent in a prediction in the present primary race that Dr. L. G. Hardman will defeat John N. Holder in the contest for governor.

"Uncle Doshe" wrote The Constitution that he is getting very feeble, but still feels able to predict accurately on elections. He cited a list of successful candidates for governor he had introduced to political audiences and who later won their races.

"In the past I have had five men running for governor to spend the night at my home," he wrote. "Among these were Governor Northern, Governor Atkinson, Governor Hoke Smith, Governor Joe Terrell and Governor Hugh Dorsey. John Holder is a fine fellow, but Hardman seems to be the coming man."

Mr. Massengale said Hardman would get the bulk of the votes cast for George Carswell and J. O. Wood in the recent primary.

URBAN LEAGUE WEEKLY BULLETIN

Professor B. E. Mayes, former teacher of Morehouse college and Orangeburg State college, has been recently elected executive secretary of the Tampa Urban league, Tampa, Fla. He and his bride, a former teacher of the South Carolina college, who becomes case-worker for the Tampa Urban league, will spend a few days in Atlanta, familiarizing themselves more thoroughly with the technique of the local and national league. They will stop in Jacksonville en route to Tampa in order to make a study of the work done by the local organization there. Professor Mayes holds the following degrees: A. B. Bates college and A. M. University of Chicago. He taught psychology and mathematics for three years at Morehouse college, Atlanta, Ga., and during the third year he was acting dean. He was also pastor of Shiloh Baptist church during 1923-24, Atlanta, Ga. Before accepting the position as executive secretary he was head of the English department in the State college.

The most-talked-of athletic exposition of the season is the coming game between the Tigers of Tuskegee institute and the championship team of Lincoln university. This game will be played on the Pennsylvania campus, Philadelphia, October 29. A special train is scheduled to leave Montgomery midnight October 24, and will pass through Atlanta in the early hours October 25. The train will carry special Pullman and dining cars. Arrangements are being made for the Pullman cars to remain in the control of the committee on transportation, and may be used each night by persons who provide themselves with Pullman accommodations. This will obviate necessity of sleeping hotel accommodations in the city of Philadelphia. The National Urban league's office has been made the local agent and transportation representative of the Athletic Association of Tuskegee. Indications point to a large delegation of football fans coming from Atlanta and Georgia. In order to be sure of Pullman accommodations, it will be necessary for reservations to be made early.

A quartet contest will take place at Wheat Street Baptist church Monday night, September 20, at 8:30 o'clock. Some of the best singers of the city will take part. The music lovers of Atlanta are invited to be present.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE PUBLIC ON THE COAL SITUATION

News Item
Atlanta Constitution
September 11, 1926

REDUCTION SEEN IN COAL PRICES

Washington, September 10.—Coal prices will be considerably lower this winter, according to reports received here by the bureau of mines.

As compared with a year ago, the average cost of a ton of soft coal at the mines now is 17 cents less, $2.04 against $2.21. In 1924 the price was slightly less, $2.01.

The present prices however, which have been kept up by a strong demand for fuel, are expected to go down later, for several reasons. The present high production, the likelihood of no labor troubles this winter, and end of the British coal strike expected soon should tend to ease the situation.

An advance of spot coal at the mines from $1.96 on August 9 to $2.04 on August 30 was laid to the increased demand for American fuel abroad because of the British strike and trouble over car shortage in some districts. At the present time, however, there is no general shortage of coal cars. Total exports of coal, too, are only about three or four per cent of the entire production.

Soft coal mines are running at a higher productive rate now than since 1923. The total output this year up to August 28 was 353,505,000 tons as compared with 315,298,000. Anthracite production is slightly less, chiefly because the mines were operating at top speed a year ago in anticipation of a strike, which occurred later. Hard coal production to August 28 was 52,243,000 tons, compared with 60,794,000 last year.

The Jacksonville wage agreement for the soft coal fields runs until March 31, and any difficulty over another contract will not affect prices this winter. The anthracite agreement signed after the strike last winter has four years to run.

HIGH GRADE COALS
Atlanta Office, 1702 Candler Building

Knoxville, Tennessee,
September 17, 1926.

The Atlanta Public,
Atlanta, Ga.

I have read with much interest news story under Washington date line in a recent issue of The Constitution in which reports to the bureau of mines are quoted as indicating a reduction in coal prices. This news item was forwarded to me by our Atlanta manager, Mr. Max Milligan.

"I do not see from the figures quoted a reduction in coal prices in the immediate future." The report states that according to the bureau of mines, coal is now costing $2.04 against $2.21 a year ago. It also states that on August 30th coal was selling at $2.04 as compared with $1.96 on August 9th. According to these figures, coal on August 30th was selling at exactly the cost of production, $2.04. In view of the fact that winter is now approaching when there is always an increase in the demand for coal, does a reduction in coal prices seem likely, when the only way it could possibly take place would be to sell it below the cost of production?

It is a matter of common knowledge that from the first of April up to the first of September coal has sold at less than the cost of production. Those of us who are in the business of producing coal for a living will, of course, not continue to do this any longer than we have to. The very favorable industrial situation is indicated by the fact that each week usually shows a record-breaking loading of cars by the railroads, together with the approaching winter, has already resulted in a very substantial increase in the demand for coal. The British coal strike has supplemented this demand to some extent. While the end of this strike is not yet in sight, its termination will not affect the coal market to any appreciable extent. The amount of coal exported, however, this year as compared with last year, will very largely absorb the 38,000,000 tons of increased production for this year, up to August 28th, as compared with the production for the same period of time last year.

Industrial conditions this year are admittedly better than they were last year. The production of steel alone running from an 80 to an 85 per cent basis, while last year at the same time steel mills were operating on a 60 to 65 per cent basis.

I submit that with this increased demand, at home and abroad, is it likely that the producers of coal, during the next six months of the year, will continue to sell coal below the cost of production?

Since the first of September coal has been selling at figures probably slightly above the cost of production. If the producers of coal make any money on their year's operation, they will have to obtain substantially higher prices yet for the remainder of this year. There is every indication that higher prices will prevail.

I believe you will be doing your readers a distinct favor if you correct the impression contained in this news item, and, on the contrary, advise them to lay in their supply of coal at the earliest possible date. Conditions for delivery are now favorable, and the buyer will get better prepared coal than he will if he waits until unfavorable weather conditions set in. Furthermore, the retail coal merchants cannot take care of the demand if everybody waits until cold weather begins before placing their orders.

If the advice given by the news item is followed generally it will mean that everybody will, one of these days soon, be clamoring for coal at once. The producer of coal will be unable to take care of the demand and the retailer of coal will be unable to make deliveries fast enough. This will result in an abnormally high price for coal for a short period, which both the producers and retailers of coal are anxious to avoid.

Yours truly,
THE SOUTHERN COAL & COKE COMPANY,
By E. C. Mahan, President.

"The Company With the Coal and the Service."

SOUTHERN EXTENDS PHONE DISPATCHING

Use of the telephone for dispatching trains, displacing the telegraph, will be extended by the Southern Railway system over two of its important lines—Meridian, Miss., to New Orleans, La., 202.2 miles, and Asheville, N. C., to Spartanburg, S. C., 69.4 miles—giving the Southern a telephone system covering 2,363 miles of road, according to an official announcement Saturday.

Authority has been given for construction of necessary circuits and installation of telephone equipment. Material has been ordered and construction will be begun as soon as it is received and forces can be organized.

Construction of the circuits between Asheville and Spartanburg will give the Southern telephone service three ways out of Asheville, lines between Asheville and Salisbury and between Asheville and Knoxville having been completed in 1924. The line between Meridian and New Orleans will give the Southern continuous telephone connection between Cincinnati and New Orleans and between Washington and New Orleans, via Atlanta and Birmingham.

SECRETARIES MEET TO ORGANIZE HERE

The Southern Association of Convention and Tourist Bureaus will be organized in Atlanta on October 18, at a two-day conference to be held at the Ansley hotel, it was announced Saturday by Fred Houser, secretary of the Atlanta Convention and Tourist Bureau.

"Secretaries of such organizations, whether maintained separately or as bureaus of chambers of commerce and other bodies, have been invited from every city in the southern states," said Mr. Houser. "Replies indicate that more than half those invited will attend the meeting, and those who cannot come express their approval of the proposed organization and pledge membership and support.

"By working together for the general good, such an association can do a great deal to encourage motor tourist travel in the southern states and at the same time render important service to the traveling public."

The second day of the conference will be the date of the arrival of the motorcade from Asheville, N. C., over the newly-completed Appalachian scenic highway.

HIGH PRICE PAID FOR GEORGIA TOBACCO

The tobacco crop in Georgia this year amounted to 39,093,596 pounds, which sold at an average price of 33.57 cents per pound, bringing in $9,215,548.43, according to the preliminary consolidated report for the 1926 season made public Saturday by the Georgia Cooperative Crop Reporting service, Peter V. Rice, statistician.

The total sales in the state were 40,267,914 pounds and the total receipts were $9,492,370.41, but 1,174,318 pounds came from adjoining states, causing a deduction of $276,821.98 from the tobacco revenue that went to Georgia growers exclusively.

The number of pounds sold for dealers amounted to 2,425,675, valued at $553,359.80.

The crop was the second largest in number of pounds, being exceeded only by the 1925 crop of 48,039,000 pounds, and was the largest in point of value, the previous money record having been established by receipts of $8,267,000 in 1924 and $7,296,000 in 1925.

The acreage this year was 51,600, which was 24 per cent smaller than last year. The average price was more than 8 cents per pound higher than in 1925.

Douglas led all other markets, with receipts of $1,568,363 for 6,709,081 pounds, at an average of 23.38 cents. Blackshear ranked second, with 5,546,248 pounds, sold for $1,422,-963.68.

Shofar Is Blown To Mark Ending Of Yom Kippur

With special services being held in three Jewish synagogues, and the blowing of the shofar, or ram's horn, marking the end of the day of repentance, or Yom Kippur, at sunset Saturday afternoon, Atlanta Jews joined with others all over the world in closing a two-day ceremony celebrating the beginning of the Jewish new year.

The annual celebration was ushered in Friday at sunset with the playing of "Kol Nidre" in three Atlanta synagogues, followed by services led by the rabbis.

The day of atonement is an ancient Jewish holiday, dating from Biblical times and marked by complete abstinence from food and drink as well as from commercial pursuits.

Saturday services in memory of the dead were held in all three synagogues, those at the Ahavath Achim temple and the Congregation Shearith Israel being conducted in the morning, while the Jewish temple memorial service was held Saturday afternoon.

Rabbi Tobias Geffen led the services at the Congregation Shearith Israel, and spoke on "Yaaleh." Rabbi Hirmes delivered a sermon on "Repentance," at the Ahavath Achim temple and the services at the Jewish temple were led by Rabbi David Marx.

"My Life Story"

Written by Rudolph Valentino

Rudolph Valentino takes you to the Folies Bergere in gay, glittering Paris in this installment of his intimate, personal memoirs. Read his thoughts, his anticipation of seeing the things he worshiped—beauty.

"When a woman is beautiful," he sets down, "she is a miracle, a masterpiece of God, an acolyte of Venus, a lotus of love."

He tells of the "night life of Paris." He reveals his dreams of what he hoped to see—raptures and rhapsodies. Sylphs with flower-like limbs and porcelain throats! And the realization!

Read it. "The Great Lover's" own heart emotion at what the world has called the Shrine of Beauty.

"Were the Folies Bergere girls worthy of my eye-strain?" he asks.

Read the "Sheik's" own confessions as he pours out his most intimate thoughts in this enthralling, intriguing narrative.

XVI INSTALLMENT.

More motoring today. Luncheon at a charming little inn overlooking the sea. Wine of the country, Normandy women serving us. Smell of milk and butter and fresh eggs and mounds of sweetly smelling bread. Comfort, rest, tranquility, contentment.

A Normandy peasant—with the luscious country resting back of him and the smitten sea sprawling at his feet—what more could the heart of man desire? Why travel further to find Nirvana?

Tonight, the Casino again.

Normandy shall not mean the Casino to me; no, nor the Grand Prix de Beauville, which is supposed to be such an event of events. Normandy shall mean the countryside, the atmosphere of events. Normandy shall mean the countryside, the atmosphere of those who have gone before, the fragrant simplicity, a fine breathing of old standards—this is Normandy.

Listless Gayety.

Tonight, the night of the Grand Prix at the Casino, is supposed to be the most interesting of all the scheduled events. There may be some sense of appreciation lacking in me, but it wasn't any more interesting to me than than any of the other nights, and I feel that I am fairly easy to amuse. Fairly easy to interest and capture.

Tomorrow we start back to Paris. And I shall be partly sorry—partly very glad. It is not the Casino and all the so-called gayeties there that I shall regret leaving, but the sea that did not, this time, receive my eager form, the delicious wine of the country, the omelettes they serve, a specialty of the province, the bread, hot from the "fourneau," and the smiling Normandy faces, made real to me after so many years of reading and dreaming of them.

Back to Paris!

We have gone to very few theaters here. And of the well-known and much-advertised "night life of Paris" we have seen little or nothing.

Before I left America, many of my younger friends tapped me on the shoulder, cocked wicked, knowing eyes and said: "Ah, Rudy, wait until you get to Paris—such sights!—such—girls—la, la!"

Well, but the beautiful French wommen one sees in the pages of "La Vie Parisienne" do not exist.

They simply do not exist in flesh and blood. That is all. They are myths. Floating fancies. Make-believe houris from the brain of a simpler Baudelaire.

And the chorus girls of Paris come under the same heading, in my estimation.

Follies "Putrid."

We went to the Follies Bergeres, for instance, and it was simply putrid.

The production, the chorus girls I have mentioned, the whole ensemble, was fearfully disappointing.

French chorus girls cannot begin to compete with the American chorus girls.

They are simply not in the same class at all. The costumes at the Follies are gorgeous—but, after all, who cares to fasten his eyes on a costume if the girl inside the costume is not worth the eye-strain? And they are not worth it at the Follies.

Then, too, the stages are tiny. Nothing, NOTHING, in the French theater, from the girls up (or down, as you may care to put it), is done on the luxurious plan it is in America.

Wrong Impression.

Of course, I may have been a poor one to judge, coming as I did fresh from the theater life of New York, with its munificence, its display, its luxuriance, its vast expenditure of time, money, space and beauty. My last impression, when I was in Europe ten years ago, my last impression of the European stage was marvelous. But that was before I had been in America.

After one has seen how things are done in America, anything else would appear poor and inadequate by contract.

Most of the girls, for instance, are fat.

That surprised me, and I think it would surprise a great many persons who, like myself, doubtless imagine the French Follies girls as slim and sprightly sylphs, with flower-like limbs and porcelain throats. I was surprised. These girls were fat—and half naked.

Nakedness, nudity, is the most beautiful thing in the world—when it is beautiful. But when you see rolls of fat—ugly lines—then you see a parody of exquisitness.

You cannot deify ugliness because it is a counterpart of beauty. It is like cartooning a beautiful painting, etching or print. You may sigh and marvel over the print, you may recognize that the cartoon comes from the print, but alas, you can only laugh at the cartoon.

I think, perhaps, I should say more humbly I hope, that I see beauty when and where it is to be found.

And certainly I know that where and when I find beauty, I worship it. Whether it be the beauty of women, the beauty of nature, or beauty of mind and soul. But I am not a sentimentalist. Just because a sunset is a sunset I do not always find it beautiful. I do not always go into raptures and phapsodies over it. Just because a poem is a poem or a song a song, I do not constantly hold my hands over my chest and sigh, "How marvelous!"

And just because a woman is a woman, I do not acclaim her with beating heart as a masterpiece from God, a divine acolyte of Venus, a lotus of love.

When a woman is beautiful, she is a miracle. When she is not beautiful—she is a woman. And her lack is her misfortune. I pity and respect her, but I do not sing hosannas to her surpassing charm. Truth has beauty, too, it seems to me. Truth of seeing. Truth of hearing. Truth of thought.

Well, we went to the Follies Bergere and we went to Montmarte.

I have recorded my impression of Montmartre was—tourists.

I suppose, poor, well-meaning souls, they are trying to get their fill of Paris; they wanted to go back home to Oskaloosa, to Kankakee, or wherever they came from, and tell the neighbors next door they had "seen life." The night life of Paris!

The way to do it, they figured, was to go to Montmartre, about which they had read so many naughty, naughty stories in so many naughty, naughty magazines. I wonder if, under their masks of fun and frolic, they were as secretly disappointed as we were. And didn't like to show it. Didn't think, perhaps, it would be quite "the thing to do."

They were the Cook's tourist type. And they were all disgustingly drunk. Which, probably, they also felt necessary to their environment and their trip of sightseeig. If in Montmartre, why not be drunk? Surely, they might have argued, that would be THE thing of things to do.

They were shouting noisily all over the place and were generally objectionable. There were none of the nice Americans there, nor did we see any of the nive French people. Buyers, traveling salesmen and so forth. We swore we would not go back to Montmartre again. And we didn't. And we won't.

We went to Ciro's, but it was dead.

Follow the "Great Lover" in tomorrow's paper—follow him and the novely Natacha into the warm Southland—en route to Nice and Natacha's parents. His last heart-stirring thought of Paris. "She still wears bangles on her limbs, though they have walked to the funeral dirge," he writes. His last heart-throbs. Read them. Don't miss a line in tomorrow's paper.

JORDAN TO DIRECT DUFFEE-FREEMAN RADIO DEPARTMENT

C. W. Jordan, well known Atlanta business man and an expert in the radio business, has been appointed general manager of the radio department of the Duffee-Freeman Furniture company, it was recently announced.

Mr. Jordan has for the past several years been actively interested in radio development in Atlanta and during that time has been connected with one of the leading radio dealers in the city.

Due to its success in the furniture line and with a view to further expanding, the Duffee-Freeman Furniture company recently installed a radio department and has placed Mr. Jordan in charge.

"We have also added a complete line of Atwater-Kent radio receiving sets," Grady Dupree, advertising manager of the firm, stated Saturday afternoon.

According to officials of the company, no expense will be spared to make it one of the most up-to-date furniture and radio houses in the south and the installation of the radio department is described as "just another forward step."

AIR MAIL STAMPS PLACED ON SALE AT POSTOFFICE

New air mail stamps have been placed on sale at the local postoffice following inauguration of the Atlanta-Florida air mail service during the past week.

Handsomely engraved and printed in a sepia tone, the new air mail stamps bear the imprint of a map of the United States, showing rivers and mountain ranges, with an east-bound airplane on one side of the map and a west-bound plane on the other.

Across the top of the stamp are the words: "United States Postage" in white letters, and beneath are the words, "Air Mail." The stamp is used for postage over one zone of the government-operated transcontinental route, where the air mail postage is 8 cents plus transportation over one of the contract air mail routes up to 1,000 miles, where the postage is 10 cents. Thus five cents is the charge for transportation over the government lines and 10 cents over the contract lines.

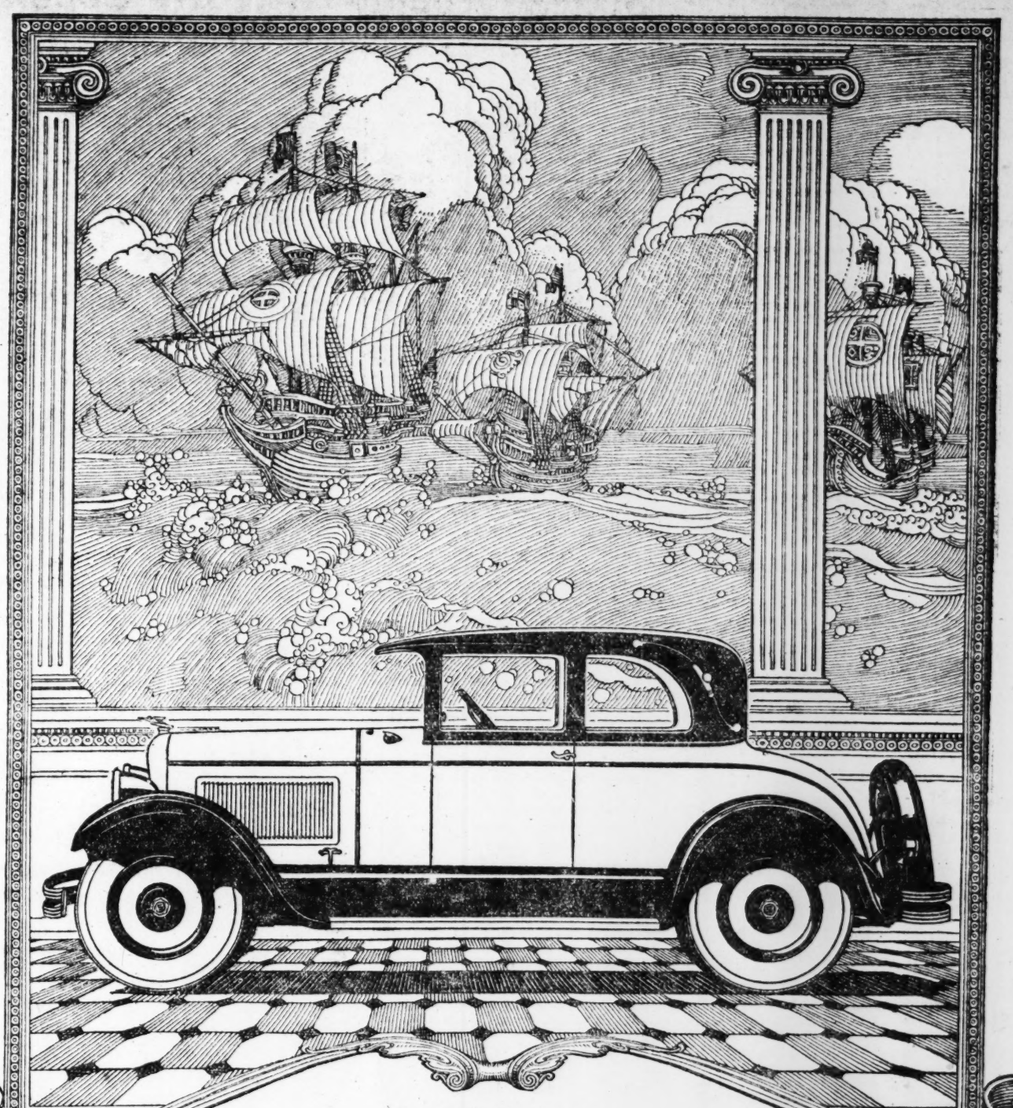

The contract air mail route between Atlanta and Miami will cost 10 cents an ounce or fraction thereof for postage, including rail connections.

STATE FORESTRY TO MAKE SURVEY OF WOODS FIRES

State Forester B. H. Lufburrow and his two assistants will leave Monday for an extended survey of frequency and destructiveness of wood fires in 30 counties of north Georgia, preparatory to an educational campaign directed against woods burning. The state foresters also will explain state and federal aid available to timberland owners who are interested in increasing growth of timber and forage value of their lands by protecting them from fire, it was announced today at the forestry department.

Twenty-three counties of the mountain section of Georgia have an aggregate of 4,742,450 acres, 69 per cent, or 3,271,111 acres, of which are unimproved or forest land, that with protection of fire could be growing one and one-half billion board feet annually, worth $5,000,000 on the stump, the state forester said. The present growth, he pointed out, was much less than this.

The costs of protecting forest lands from fire are only a few cents an acre annually, Mr. Lufburrow pointed out, which investment would result in the saving of timber growth many times this amount.

Sophocles in Georgia

Drama Portrayed on the Great Gray Face of Stone Mountain

BY GERALD W. JOHNSON.

(In The Century Magezine.)

On the face of a great gray cliff in Georgia is one clear-cut head, another with some rough stone still adhering, and another dimly discernible, as if covered with a mantle.

They are all that remains visible of the dream of Gutzon Borglum. About them for more than a year has raged a quarrel that has resounded from end to end of the republic. The quarrel has involved politics, religion, finance, sectional interests, local pride, almost everything on earth except the dream. In the bickering the significance of the sculpture has been curiously neglected. The world has been regaled with innumerable accounts of every phase of Stone mountain except what it means, or, rather, what the sculptor intended it to mean had he been permitted to complete the work.

But this, in the long run, is bound to be the only thing worth considering. Colossal figures carved in living rock may be expected to endure for centuries, while the quarrel cannot outlast the lives of those engaged in it. The quality of such work, good or bad, will attract the attention of generations so distant that the fact that there was a quarrel will be known only to their antiquarians.

The one clear-cut head on Stone mountain is a portrait of Robert Edward Lee. The head not quite finished is a portrait of Thomas Jonathan Jackson. The figure roughed out and dimly discernible as if through a mantle is that of Jefferson Davis. These three were chiefs of the Confederate States of America, a government that disputed the authority of the United States and waged war against it for four years. On that account certain organizations, believing that they were acting patriotically, have condemned the thing out of hand as a memorial to disunion. The government of the United States has acted with more discernment. It has struck a coin to aid the project. The coin was made from a design by Gutzon Borglum, who wrote on the reverse, "Memorial to the Valor of the Soldiers of the South."

The word is valor, not bravery. The commemoration of bravery alone would not have inspired the sculptor to struggle for nine years with the cliff and with an inertia of public opinion more obdurate than the granite. Bavery is to be found everywhere. In the story of the Confederacy is to be found bravery, indeed, but many other things also forming a complex that fascinated the artist. It led him to attempt a task that seemed impossible from the beginning. It enabled him to survive defeat after defeat. It carried him within sight of victory. Perhaps it is the thing that will insure his fame when he and all his contemporaries have long since returned to the dust.

The existing concepton of the Confederate memorial is Gutzon Borglum's absolutely. The distinctive element in it is the idea of working the mountain as a block, and that is his idea. The Georgia Daughters of the Confederacy did wish to have a memorial carved on the mountain, but they thought of a small bas-relief only. The audacious suggeston that the sculpture be made to dominate the mountain was Borglum's. He capped it with the audacity of accepting the commission with $2,600 in hand. He knew that the work would cost millions, but $2,600 was all that the Daughters of the Confederacy had, and so he undertook the job with that sum. To these he added the audacity of attacking eigineering problems that appalled competent engineers, and the audacity of solving them by a combination of hard work and hard sense. He had the audacity to risk his neck, his money, and his reputation against the advice of hard-rock men, financiers and sculptors. A dozen times he very nearly lost all three, and he did lose a great deal of money. Finally he had the audacity to ask the United States government to help him build a monument to the Confederacy. But the government yielded as the public had yielded and as the rock had yielded. Borglum proved the feasibility of the thing as a financial problem and as an engineering problem. Yet, gigantic as are those achievements, they are important only in so far as his artistic concept measures up to them. If he had nothing to expreses, then his other triumphs in the course of the centuries will be proved useless.

It is evident that it must have been a masterful idea that coud bind a man to the labors of Hercules for nine years. Certainly no ordinary monumental commission could have done that, not even a commission that involved a sculpture 1,300 feet long and 200 feet high. Gutzon Borglum from 1916 to 1925 poured the energies of his whole life into the Stone Mountain memorial. Mere bigness was not worth such a sacrifice. He had a reputation to lose. His "Mares of Diomedes" was in the Metropolitan museum. His "Lincoln" was in the capitol. His amazing "Nero," nine inches high, had proved that he does not depend upon size for a powerful effect. Unless he could put upon the face of Stone mountain a mightier thing than any of these, he must inevitably write there his own artistic damnation to mock him in his tomb as long as the granite lasts.

Borglum was born in Idaho. His father came there from Denmark after the civil war was over. Therefore, he was not connected by ties of blood with either side in the great struggle of the sixties. His seven was unclouded by passionate traditions learned in childhood from elders who bore the physical and moral scars of that conflict. He was detached. He was able to view it with the artist's eye, which probably accounts for the fact that Stone Mountain memorial, as he designed it, is notable among war memorials for its astonishing serenity. It has no prancing horses, no waving swords, no charging infantry. It has no need for aggression, since it is not a defense but a statement. In the words of the ancient jest, it is not arguing with the spectator, it is telling him.

It tells him, first of all, that Robert Edward Lee is the idol of the south. The picture is keyed upon Lee. A line dropped from the tip of Lee's hat divides the sculpture in halves. To the right, the artillery comes rushing into the picture down a steep slope and climbs slowly up again to pass behind the general staff. To the left, the infantry marches away in a line that has no end but fades into the distance. In th ecenter, on an eminence, Lee sits his charger, Traveler, with Stonewall Jackson at his right hand, while to his left, a little apart as befits the commander-in-chief, is Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederates States. These are the figures that are to be seen on the mountain now. The head of Lee is complete, that of Jackson nearly so, while Davis is only roughed out.

The head of Lee is the artistic center, as it is the physical center, of the piece. It gave the sculptor endless trouble for the curious reason that he could find no conspicuous flaw in Lee. Abraham Lincoln is the delight of sculptors because his outward uglines sserves as a convenient foil for his inner magnificence. A fine statue of Lincoln has its necessary dramatic contrast right there. But Lee was a handsome man. It is hardly exaggerating to apply to him Hamlet's high-flown language:

"the front of Jove himself:
An eye like Mars, to threaten and command;
A station like the herald Mercury
New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill;
A combination and a form indeed,
Where every god did seem to set his seal,
To give the world assurance of a man."

Nor was this outward splendor belied by inner darkness. Lee was great as a soldier, but he was even greater as a citizen after the war was over. His public life was flawless, but his private life was even more admirable. Soldiers died for him, the public idolized him, his family adored him, yet to the day of his death he remained a simple, sweet-spirited gentleman. Where are the contrasts essential to make a dramatic presentation of such a man? Obviously they must be sought, not in the man, but in the situation.

The easy thing for Borglum to do would have been to portray Lee as Napoleon is portrayed by Meissonier in the battle-piece, "1807," taking the salute as the cavalry thunders by at a gallop, shouting and brandishing sabers. But Lee was not a Napoleon, and the Stone Mountain memorial was not, like "1807," conceived a a glorification of war. It was conceived as a tragedy in the grand manner, the tragedy of a nation, with Lee as its protoytpe. It is a subtler thing than "1807," a more profound and beautiful thing.

Borglum conceived the war of the sixties as a needless tragedy, inevitably only in the sense that it is inevitable that humanity shall pay the penalty of its ignorance and folly. A handful of arrogant unreasoning men on both sides lighted the fires of war; and the masses went to battle, as they always go, never suspecting that the real reason they were called out was the stupidity and maudlin hates of their politicians. Once the fighting began, these politicians swiftly subsided, after the manner of their kind, and the war was thenceforward carried on by men who had had little or no share in its making, honest men who made magnificent fighters because they were thoroughly convinced that they were defending what to them was dearer than life

These are the men who make up the long line that Borglum designed to move across the face of the mountain, and it is their captain who sits upon his horse in the center. Not in defense of slavery did they go out, for the vast majority of them never owned a slave, and not in defense of secession, for secession was to most of them a mouthful of wind, but because they were persuaded that they must rise in defense of the freedom for which their grandfathers had fought in 1776. They were met by another, and stronger, army moved by the identical motive; and the two tore each other's lives out through four horrible years.

Here is indeed tragedy in the manner of the ancient Greeks, a tale of men in the grip of a destiny that they can neither control nor comprehend, and driven toward a doom that they may indeed foresee but cannot evade. The army is the chorus of this mighty tragedy, and the three figures in the foreground are its protagonists. In them the artist has endeavored to sum up the drama, and so in them centers the interest of the whole.

Stonewall Jackson rides close to Lee, his outstretched arm indicating the line of marching infantrymen upon which he is making some comment to his commander. It is a magnificent head, but not a conventional one. It is not the head of a grand marechal, not the head of a Ney, of a Lannes, of a Marlborough. It is the heald of an Old Testament mighty man of valor. No beau sabreur this, but the sword of the Lord and of Gideon. This is in accord with the historical character of the scourge of the Shenandoah, who was as mighty in prayer as he was in battle. But it is more. It is skillful recognition of the religious instinct that plays so large a part in the life of the south, and especially in the lives of the women of the south. The region cannot be understood, much less interpreted, by any one who fails to take into account this factor. The Confederate army, like every other army that has fought well, was backed by women of heroic mold; but the heroism of the women of the south rested upon faith in a God who could, and would, sustain a just cause in the midst of apparently irretrievable ruin. The religion of the south was, and is, sometimes hard and narrow, but it was, and is, strong. The face of Stonewall Jackson on Stone mountain has something of the ruthlessness of ancient Judea, that could put to the sword man, woman and child, the very cattle of the enemy; but it is touched also with the glory of ancient Judea, that held familiar converse with cherubim and seraphim.

Jeferson Davis has not emerged completely from the stone. He is glimpsed but dimly, an enigmatic figure. He is somewhat the same sort of figure in Borglum's design, even with the mantling stone cut away. He is a little apart from the officers crowding behind him, as the president should be. But his isolation makes him tremendously conspicuous, and at first glance he seems to dominate the picture. As a matter of fact he is abreast of Lee. It was the only possible place. He could not be put below his army leader, and the south would have risen in fury had he been placed above Lee. So they sit their horses side by side, but Davis looks away. He is quiet. He is ominously quiet. Every other figure in the group is in motion, but Davis is still. A little investigation of the model reveals that he is not merely still but rigid. He looks on the collapse of all his hopes, the ruin of his aspirations, and the blow is heavy. He was a proud man, and he wore fetters. All the others won glory in the field, but he was deprived of the honor of valiant deeds, and he alone suffered indignity. He was the statesman, and the statecraft of the south was its failure. Statecraft should have prevented the war and did not. The army and navy performed prodigies; the plain people were devoted to the last. But the statesmen botched their job, and ruin fell upon them. In ruin, however, Jefferson Davis towered as he never did in the days of his glory. He was not merely imprisoned, he was manacled. All the fury of the vindictive spirits in the north was poured out upon him. He was indicted for treason, and trial was denied him, although he demanded it again and again. He went to his grave with the charge hanging over him and without a chance to clear his name in open court. Yet through it all he comported himself with a dignity that compels the admiration of his countrymen to this day. In a situation that to a proud man must have been as torturous as being flayed alive, he never whimpered. Borglum pictures him sitting erect, grim, with ruined hopes before him and death in his heart, but silent. He may have led his country to ruin, but he brought no shame upon her.

Between Jackson and Davis is Lee, the flawless. By happy fortune that head is complete, standing out clear from the gray mass of the granite as the fame of Robert E. Lee stands out from the dust and smoke of the battle of long ago. The head is set, thanks to careful astronomical calculations, just where the light of the rising sun strikes oftenest in the course of the year. It faces the east, in remembrance of that morning at Arlington when Lee faced the rising sun after the blackest night of all his life. It was the night of his decision. The call had come from both sides. The president of the United States stood ready to give him command of the armies under the old flag. That flag he had fought for in Mexico. His father, Light Horse Harry Lee, had fought for it with Washington. His kinsmen had served under it brilliantly, in the council as in the field. To draw his sword against it meant that his old comrades in arms would call him by a hideous name. But Virginia had called him too. His native state, his motherland, was in desperate need and summoned him to her defense. To draw his sword against her meant, not that his comrades in arms but that his own conscience would call him traitor. He went to his room that night knowing that he was at the parting of the ways and that both the paths before him led to the place of a skull.

What passed after he had locked his door no mortal can conceive save one who likewise has ben to Gethsemane. But when the sun rose the next morning Lee's decision was made, and his allegiance never wavered again. His crucial hour was past, and he faced the morning light with head uplifted. Half his countrymen were to call him traitor, but in his heart he knew there was no treason, and he lifted his head. And so he is on Stone mountain forever. His head is slightly lifted, and he looks away toward the east. Jackson is speaking to him, but he does not heed Jackson. He seems to see, or to hear, something unperceived by the others. That something is not glad tidings, for his face is grave. But it is calm. Perhaps it is the inevitable end that his soldierly intelligence foretold. He knows that the battles to which this magnificent army behind him is marhing are to be lost battles, that the banners floating above the infantry are to be trampled in bloody mire, that the columns are to reel back shattered from a certain stone wall, and that the army and its cause are to go down in hopeless ruin. But he knows also that the blame is not his. What man can do, he has done. For the rest, if malignant Fate pursues his as it pursued Oedipus, the blameless king, to a doom at which even Theseus stood aghast, there is naught to do save go with lifted head, as the old king went when the voice of the god called to him from the haunted wood. Here is the drama. Here is tragedy after the manner of Sphocles. From far away a summons comes to the great commander. From the field of Appomattox a voice calls Lee to come and meet his doom. No pomp, no pageantry, no silken banners and cloth of gold, no glittering steel are there to illumine this awful moment, but it blazes with the glory that belongs to kingly men, for the kingly gesture is there. He lifts his head.

This is the story that Gutzon Borglum aspired to write upon the cliff. Perhaps he would have failed, but not through feebleness of imaginative power. He has not fallen into the trap that seems to be peculiarly dangerous to Americans, of employing gigantic means to accomplish petty ends, employing the colors of the rainbow and the power of the thunderbolt to advertise chewing gum, employing the earthquakes and lightnings of Sinai to squelch John Thomas Scopes, employing 16,000,000 voters to elect Coolidge. If Davis and Jackson and Lee are glorified, it is not because they figured prominently in the newspapers, but because courage rode with Davis, faith with Jackson and honor with Lee.

The civil war left wreckage enough on both sides, God knows. Not the least malignant of its effects was the tendency it developed among the heirs of the contestants to perpetuate the lie that they were glorious merely because they fought. Battle monuments in general do nothing to correct this tendency, because in general they glorify the soldier in his character as butcher. They lead to the inference that Lee reached his greatest height at Cold Harbor because there he cut down 15,000 of Grant's men in 30 minutes. Not so this monument. It proclams that the Confederate chiefs are entiled to remembrance because they possessed courage, faith and honor, the qualities that distinguish the valiant man from the merely reckless man. Like the coin, it should stand as a "memorial to the valor of the soldiers of the south."

But this is a theme as tremendous as artist ever chose. If it could be perfectly expressed, there would be nothing in the world too great to serve as the medium of its expression. Nine years is little enough time to give to it, and a mountain is a small enough tablet on which to engrave it. A man of genius might reasonably give his life to it, and if he brought it anywhere near perfection feel that his life was well spent. But Borglum works at it no more.

THREE SPARTA GINS RUNNING FULL TIME

Sparta, Ga., September 18.—(Special.)—With three ginneries in Sparta running full time, the cotton crop in Hancock county is holding up well and will go far above the number of bales produced last year, if the open weather continues so that it can be picked. Numbers of other ginneries are operating over the county and are all busy.

From all indications it appers that most of the cotton is being sold as fast as it is ginned, although the market has slumped.

Regardless of the scarcity of labor the farmers are making every effort to harvest their cotton and other crops in record time.

Run-Off Election In All Counties Urged by Maddox

Rome, Ga., September 18.—(AP)—The various county democratic executive committees in Georgia today were notified they would be expected to complete all arrangements for the run-off gubernatorial primary to be held October 6, in a statement issued by G. E. Maddox, chairman of the state committee.

The primary will be contested by Dr. L. G. Hardman, of Commerce, and John N. Holder, of Jefferson, neither of whom received a majority of county unit votes in the state primary held September 8.

Mr. Maddox cited the state election laws which required a run-off primary where a majority of county unit votes was not received, but said no provision had been made for payment of expenses incurred. He said that it would be the duty of the various committees to see that managers, clerks and tickets are available at all the polling places and that all requirements of the law are complied with.

He urged early meetings of the various committees in order that the arrangements be made.

RODGERS' COMMAND GIVEN PIONEER NAVAL AVIATOR

Washington, September 18.—(AP)—Commander Harold T. Bartlett was selected today to succeed the late Commander John Rodgers in command of the special squadron of flying boats under construction at the naval aircraft factory, at Philadelphia.

The squadron when completed will be flown via the Panama canal to San Diego for experimental work with the fleet in long distance flying and after these tests the navy department will decide whether another non-stop flight from the California coast to Hawaii will be attempted.

Commander Bartlett, a pioneer naval aviator, served with both British and French air forces during the war, and was awarded the navy cross for bombing raids against the enemy. He was appointed to the naval academy from Connecticut, his native state.

C. A. Perry has been selected as sales manager of the real estate department of George W. Ware and company as the nucleus for the enlargement of the sales staff of that department, according to a statement issued by the Ware company.

Mr. Perry is an experienced real estate man and for the past several years has been in that business in Asheville and Hendersonville, N. C., handling general brokerage, subdivisions, mortgage loans and similar lines. He is well acquainted with Atlanta property, having been born and reared here before going to North Carolina. He recently returned to his native home from Hendersonville, bringing with him his family.

In addition to securing Mr. Perry as sales manager, the George W. Ware and Company, which maintains a suite of offices in the Atlanta National Bank building, has added several salesmen to its real estate department. The company has been in the brokerage and real estate business since 1888, during which time it has built up a large clientele.

AUCTION COMPANY USES AEROPLANE TO ADVERTISE SALE

Aeroplane advertising is the novel way selected by the Georgia Realty Auction Co., to advise the public of the Tuesday sale of the Knox property on Cascade avenue, West End.

Fitzhugh Knox, Jr., of Fitzhugh Knox & Sons Realty company, stated that the property, which includes 40 residential lots, five homes and 10 business lots, is in the heart of the West End section which has evidenced so much activity in real estate transactions recently. It also is adjacent to the new West End Woman's club building site, and opposite the new Atlanta Golf and Country club grounds. Entertainment in the form of music and barbecue will be provided on the grounds Tuesday morning and all candidates for mayor have been invited to speak.

LEASES INVOLVING $30,000 CLOSED BY W. FITZPATRICK

Ward Fitzpatrick announced leases aggregating approximately $30,000, which were recently closed by himself for clients as follows:

For William Candler to Glidden Paint company, a store at 54 West Peachtree for a term of years at a rental aggregating to about $25,000. The Glidden Paint company formerly had a store at 13 Auburn avenue, which was destroyed by fire. Because of this an entirely new stock of paints and allied merchandise will be installed in their new location on West Peachtree, it was said.

For W. S. Witham, Jr., to Safety Light Sales company, of Indianapolis, Ind., a store at 455 Peachtree street, for a short term of years at a total rental of $3,600. A GOOD HORSE—

MAY trot ten or fifteen miles without a break, but it takes a GOOD one—a thoroughbred. Any kind of an old plug can trot four or five miles without stopping. And it's the same way with us human beings. The most of us are just ordinary folks, in ordinary circumstances, and when we buy a home we should consider the horse. A ten or fifteen-year series of notes without a break is a long shot, and too big a risk for the most of us. Most any of us can pay a series of notes that run only four or five years. This has been our plan for twenty-five years, and we KNOW it is best, because we have never had a client to lose a home. We arrange the terms at about what the bungalow will rent for and in four or five years you will have your DEED, and you do not have to pay any more unless you want to. "Our plan is BEST by TEST." Ask any one who lives in a HOPKINS BUNGALOW. Fight shy of these new-fangled houses that were planned for Southern Florida and Southern California, where there is never any snow or ice. We know of nothing that is any BETTER than WOOD and BRICK, we know of nothing that is as GOOD. We know of no section that is better than SYLVAN HILLS. The bungalow we sell you for six to seven thousand dollars in Sylvan Hills, you pay eighty-five hundred to ten thousand dollars for in sections that is no better. We will take great pleasure in proving this statement if you are not satisfied after you look at one of our BRICK BUNGALOWS. We are not begging you to buy our bungalows or accept our plans—they sell as fast as completed. P. B. HOPKINS & SON, Palmer building, WAlnut 4186.

P. S.—We have one brick bungalow at 979 Hart Drive that will be completed in 10 days. It's different from anything you have ever seen.

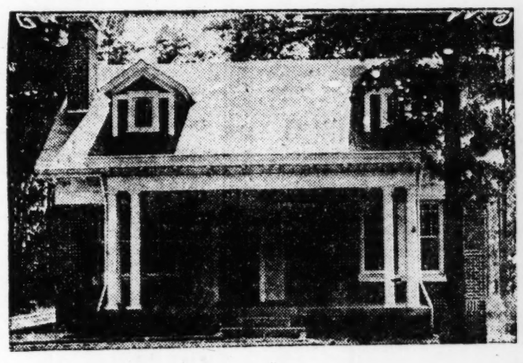

Where Town and Country Meet---

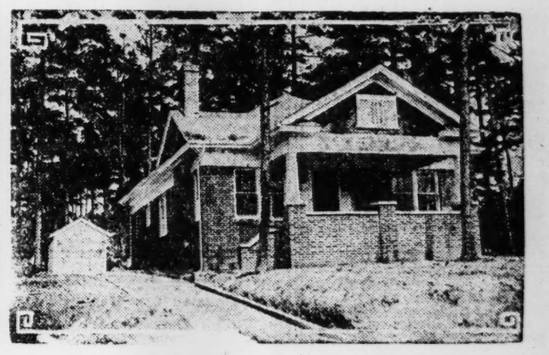

Where the rolling, wooded hills conceal, yet just reveal the tall buildings of Atlanta on the distant sky-line—where the end of the Piedmont chain limits the view to the west—where Stone Mountain towers on the east—Haynes Manor! WONDERFUL LOT PURCHASING OPPORTUNITIES FOR A HOME SITE OR AS AN INVESTMENT

Cascade Heights

CASCADE ROAD, ADJOINING WEST END

If there ever was a time for you to invest in lots for a home site or as an investment that have the very "ear marks" of rapid enhancement that time is right now—in Cascade Heights. These lots are just as sure to double and triple in value within the next two years as the sun shines.

Within less than two years, there will be hundreds of people who, if they fail to grasp this wonderful lot purchasing opportunity, will be saying "I could have bought Cascade Heights lots for $600.00 to $850.00, and I wish I had."

Large shady lots $600.00 to $850.00, terms 20% cash, $20.00 month, in the midst of brick homes of the $6,750 to $12,000.00 type and many more to follow.

Situated in a beautiful, large, rapidly developing home-owning community as is possible for nature, assisted by skilled engineering, to produce.

Lots for $600.00 to $850.00 as beautiful and desirable as lots that are priced at $2,500.00 to $5,000.00 in most sections not as desirable as Cascade Heights.

Seven miles of wide boulevards, carrying fourteen miles of these beautiful lot frontages—concrete paving, water mains, electric wiring down and paid for; these improvements cost you nothing.

Quite a number of purchasers have sold their lots and reinvested, having realized a greater profit or interest on their investment within a period of six (6) to twelve (12) months than they would have earned on the same amount involved, over a period of twenty-five (25) years through the ordinary "saving medium" of so much per cent per annum—many owners refusing to sell at splendid profits, preferring to keep their lots on which to build their homes.

Today—we are placing in service that easy-riding bus, too, and from Cascade Heights—Whitehall-Beecher car line—for the convenience of lot, home owners, their friends and prospective lot and home purchasers.

Few people can tell at a glance whether a Used Car is as good as it appears to be. Which makes it doubly important to patronize a dealer who has a reputation for giving honest facts and honest values.

New York, September 18.—(AP)—An early decline in the cotton market today was followed by rallies on apprehensions that the tropical storm approaching Florida, would cause rains in the south Atlantic state over Sunday, but the market broke again in late trading. December sold off from 16.42 to 16.25 new low ground for the movement and closed at a net decline of 9 to 17 points.

The opening was steady at unchanged prices to a decline of 2 points. Buying developed on the storms news, and relatively steady Liverpool cables, but southern hedging was renewed while there was further commission house liquidating.

Prices soon showed net losses of some 10 to 15 points, but then rallied on reports that the storm approaching the coast of Florida was gaining in intensity and that it was likely to cause rains in east gulf and south Atlantic states.

For a time the market showed considerable firmness, selling up to about yesterday's closing quotations, but at 16.24 for October and 16.52 for January, the advance was checked by renewed liquidation combined with southern and local selling. On the whole, it seemed as if the storm threat was more than offset by the trend toward increased estimates of the crop, and there were rumors of some large private crop figures in the late trading.

One of these estimates was between 15,300,000 and 15,400,000 bales, while another was above 16,000,000, and while these rumors were not confirmed, they appeared to have a sentimental effect on the market. October sold off to 16.05 and January to 16.34 in late trading and the close was at the lowest figures of the day.

Private cables attributed the relatively steady showing of Liverpool to spinners calling with continental and Bombay buying and said hedge selling was lighter.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 79,000 bales, against 57,000 last year.

SPOTS IN NEW YORK.

New York, September 18—(AP)—Spot cotton quiet, middling 16.85.

MARKET BREAKS AGAIN AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, September 18.—(AP)—The cotton market was very active for a short time today and prices developed another sharp break to the lowest points of the movement, October breaking below the 16-cent line to 15.90, and the other active months reaching within easy distance of that level. The weakness was due mainly to bigger crop views, helped by an estimate of a leading spot house of 15,342,000 bales and later by a rumored estimate by a well-known authority of 16,615,000 bales. After the session closed it was claimed that this big figure was an error and should have been 15,655,000 bales. The correction came too late, however, to undo the harm done.

After a slight gain of 3 to 5 points at the start, the market turned easier and kept on the down grade all through the session with only slight rallies, caused by storm news. The close was barely steady, showing net losses for the day of 34 to 42 points.

At the start, Liverpool was a shade better than due and first trades here were unchanged to 4 points up. Right after the call, October traded at 16.31, December at 16.47 and January at 16.50, or unchanged to 5 points above the previous close. These proved to be the highs of the day. The market turned easier and except for silght rallies, due to the storm bulletin reporting that the hurricane had reached the vicinity of Miami, Fla., and that storm signals had been extended to the west coast of Florida and the Alabama coast, the market continued to decline all through the session, reaching 15.90 for October, 16.09 for December and 16.14 for January or 36 to 41 points down near the end. The close was practically at the lows. Exports for the day totaled 13,991 bales.

SPOTS IN NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, September 18.—(AP)—Spot cotton closed steady at revised quotations; middling 34 points down. Sales, 12,981. Low middling, 12.69; middling, 15.45; good middling, 16.49. Receipts, 6,415; stock, 146,778.

Total bond sales (par value) $4,237,000.

New York, September 18.—(AP)—Bond prices drifted aimlessly in today's quiet trading, with the market developing a somewhat steadier tone after yesterday's release. Confidence was partly restored by the vigorous rally in stocks and the refusal of financial circles to take alarm over the maintenance of relatively stiff money rates.

French obligations resumed their advance as the recent spell of profit taking ran its course. Fractional gains were recorded by nearly all the government, railroad, municipal and steamship issues on a moderate volume of buying. Belgian, Italian and German bonds, however, lost ground.

Trading in domestic liens was singularly lifeless, the observance of the religious holiday intensifying the usual Saturday dullness. Gains of 1 to 2 points were registered by Granby Mining 7s, Empire Gas and Fuel 7 1-2s, American Writing Paper 6s and Continental Paper and Bag 6 1-2s, but Skelly Oil 6 1-2s slumped nearly 3 points to 135.

Rail issues were firm but they failed to keep pace with the vigorous upturn in the stocks of the carriers. Missouri Pacific first 6s and Oregon Short Line 5s were in demand.

FENNER & BEANE.

New York, September 18.—Stocks were still under the influence of yesterday's selling wave and opened fractionally lower this morning. The break of yesterday caused a call for margins overnight and some forced liquidation took place early in trading. Steel lost ¾ and General Motors ¾ from close. Business reports and trade reviews were optimistic that demand would hold up for the remainder of the year. During the first hour attempts to rally the market were spotty with the best showing made by General Motors, making a new record high at 135, Snelling and Allied Chemical. Mack Truck, after a period of heavy liquidation over last week's showing, after the tone and Steel seemed determined to head up the gains which were at first small. Warner Pictures moved up and Combustion, which lost heavily during the last two days, was steadier. Rail shares also showed a tendency to do decidedly better. In this group C. & O. was a feature, soaring to new highs around 176 on talk of more favorable terms in the Nickle Plate merger. Norfolk & Western, New York Central and B. & O. also rallied. Before the end of the first hour strength had developed in nearly all leading issues and sales were not generally maintained during the last hour and movements were somewhat mixed. Mack, after selling sold off to 107 at the close. On the other hand, G. M. was in active demand and closed at a very advance to 170¾ on the 3,000,000 of the day. Allis Chalmers was also made in Southern Railway. Closing time of the market was mixed, but considerable tendency to strength in many issues.

H. & B. BEER.

New York, September 18.—Market opened firm today and bears immediately offered steel down to low with the purpose of generating another wave of selling. The usual week-end tactics were employed and with bears apparently in the saddle they hoped for a bear market on the bottom and give constructive traders something to worry about over Sunday. 143 for steel, however, attracted buying from bargain hunters rather than further liquidation and the market turned abruptly about. General Motors, the leader and most attractive industrial, went into new high ground for the bull move and closed with a gain of 2¼ points. The same high quality buying continued in General Motors, American Smelters, Steel, Atchison, Mack Trucks, Allied Chemical and Fountain were firm on high grade accumulation. Mack Truck reached a new low for the movement at 107. This is very close to its low for the year of 1924. We expect Macks third quarterly earnings to be released about the first week in November, and to make very satisfactory showing. In the meantime we think stock will continue to drift downward with only temporary technical rallies.

Cotton Letters.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New York, September 18.—It is the first time in practically 10 days that the map has been unfavorable, yet the market failed to respond to this condition. Over the belt rains are reported in northern Florida and scattered through the Atlantics close to the seaboard. Also, there are some showers in Texas. The storm unquestionably has unsettled the weather in the south and we might say that September 21 is usually the period when storms are prevalent. Should storms develop over the week-end, as the forecast predicts in many locations, the market should respond readily Monday. In view of the fact that the market has been well liquidated, and the selling has come about principally due to the weather of the last 10 days. There are many predictions as to what the government report will be on September 23, and, as in the past, this season's estimates are quite varying. It is our opinion that the ginning figures will be a very important part of this report. Last year the report showed the ginnings of 4,275,928 bales, and we think that the figures that will be issued by the government in this report will form a very great contrast with the figures of last year. It seems to us that this market has run far enough and the slightest news of a bullish character should cause a sharp upturn in the market.

Liverpool futures are due on Monday: October, 8.65; January, 8.64.

FENNER & BEANE.

New Orleans, September 18.—The cotton market held steady during the early trading on storm and weather news but broke badly in the last trading on the steady stream of short selling, which appears to have been based on rumors that a private bureau of Chicago had increased its estimate 1,000,000 bales to 16,600,000. Later wires said its estimate would be 15,665,000. There was some selling at the start on an estimate of 15,342,000 issued by McFadden, but the market took this well and was inclined to rally until rumors got into circulation from Chicago of an estimate in excess of 16,000,000. Recent weather has been good and the trade would not be surprised at some increase in the private estimates, but the possibility of a raise of 1,000,000 bales proved disconcerting. The storm has struck the south end of Florida and appears to be moving in a direction that indicates it may reach the gulf by Sunday. The market closed in an unsettled condition.

H. & B. BEER.

New Orleans, La., September 18.—Although the weather outlook for over week-end was unfavorable for nearly all sections of the cotton belt and notwithstanding there being more danger of the West Indian hurricane entering the Gulf of Mexico, in event of it passing into the Florida straits or moving across the Florida peninsula, the cotton market was depressed by larger private crop estimates today. A large spot firm estimates the probable size of the growing crop at 15,342,000 bales and much selling was influenced by a rumor that a prominent Chicago house estimated the crop at 16,613,000 bales, but this rumor lacked confirmation. In fact Chicago estimate will not be released until next Monday.

The next government crop forecast report will be issued Thursday, September 23, at 10 a. m. New Orleans time, and will also make report on the quantities of cotton ginned to September 15. Ginnings are likely to be light compared with last year's ginnings. While private returns so far indicate a somewhat larger crop than two weeks ago when the government's forecast was for a yield of 15,166,000 bales there is no telling what the next government crop forecast will be, for while the weather has been generally favorable during last period, insects are reported to be doing damage still in localities, several damage in certain districts. Ginnings to September 1 were 695,000 bales, last year 1,886,000.

Meanwhile the weather outlook is decidedly less favorable owing to prospects of showers or rain in nearly all sections of the belt, perhaps heavy rains in whatever location the hurricane may hit in event of it hitting the mainland of the south Atlantic or Gulf states.

Grain Letters.

FENNER & BEANE.

Chicago, September 18.—Wheat: Mostly clear weather in the Canadian west has left the wheat market without any fears of damage, but as yet, the receipts at Winnipeg are considerably smaller than a year ago, hence the market has no decisive action.

It is now believed that such damage as may have been done to the crop is in the way of quality rather than quantity, thus continuing to promise a North American surplus of around 500,000,000. Export business has been of the usual small volume for the end of the week, although the seaboard states that the country consider ocean room has been chartered the last few days.

Coarse Grains: Heavy rains and floods reported from western Iowa, but elsewhere the weather favorable and crop maturing rapidly; the forecast is for unsettled conditions. Shipping demand is still poor; on the other hand the country continues to sell its surplus of the old crop, some 300,000 having been bought here today.

Provisions: Stagnation in the cash trade in provisions is beneath the dragging tendency of prices and despite the steady, although slow decline, there is no evidence of any improved demand, either at home or abroad.

HARRISON JONES SPEAKS AT REALTY BOARD LUNCHEON

Members of the Atlanta Real Estate board held a luncheon at the Ansley hotel on Thursday, September 16, at 12:30 o'clock.

Harrison Jones, vice president of the Coca-Cola company, was the principal speaker and his talk dealt with real estate business, his subject being, "What It Takes To Sell." He outlined essential qualifications that salesmen must have and stressed the importance of all real estate salesmen knowing their city, keeping up with its growth and, at the same time, equipping themselves to know more about the real estate business, so that they will be able to demand the confidence of the real estate buying public, and carry out all real estate transactions in a satisfactory way.

President Belser presided at the meeting and stated that more than 70 were present. He said that it was the most successful luncheon that the board has held in some time, and that other luncheons would be held throughout the fall at which interesting topics pertaining to real estate would be discussed.

A committee was appointed consisting of Jesse Draper, chairman; N. J. Wooding, Jr., and George L. Harrison, to have charge of arranging the program for future meetings. The next luncheon will be held on Wednesday, October 6.

Agricultural Possibilities of Georgia Brought Home to Ohio Farmers at Fair

Interesting exhibit staged at Columbus by Agricultural Appraisal company.

Charles A. Stanton, president of the Agricultural Appraisal company of Columbus, Ohio, with a branch office in the Palmer building this city, returned to Georgia yesterday feeling encouraged about the prospects of securing northern settlers for Georgia lands.

Mr. Stanton says that northern people are gradually beginning to understand the big agricultural possibilities in Georgia and that the results obtained from the exhibit at the Ohio state fair last month held under the auspices of the McRae board of trade displaying the products of Telfair and Wheeler counties has convinced him a good class of nothern settlers can be induced to move into Georgia if the proper organized efforts are made. Mr. Stanton's company is now arranging to establish a dependable scientific farm appraisal service in Georgia for the purpose of stabilizing farm land values and securing confidence in modern farm land development which he says is essential to the success of small farm settlement in Georgia under existing conditions.

His plan is to establish a chain of county land companies in every county or group of counties to deal in farm land for modern development and settlement of small farms and to have these county companies operate under a uniform plan based upon a constructive land settlement policy and the use of a dependable scientific farm appraisal service to help secure the outside capital and settlers required for the right kind of development and settlement.

Economic Advantages.

"Georgia has all the natural physical conditions and economic advantages for profitable and successful farming and there is absolutely no reason why Georgia should not be made the best agricultural state in the union," Mr. Stanton said. "It is simply a proposition of organizing the farm land business of your state for constructive settlement purposes. This can be done if the land owners of the state will think and act in terms of giving the outside settler value received in a moderately equipped ready-to-go farm at the right price and terms.

"And the good thing about it is that Georgia by reason of her low land values and physical advantages, to say nothing of her excellent location to the big markets of the world, is in position to offer the outside settler a better proposition than any other state in the south or United States. I hope you do not consider this an ordinary boosting statement. It is a fact and I know it because it is my business to study the land settlement possibilities of the country. All that is necessary to make Georgia the outstanding agricultural state in the next few years is for the land owners, bankers, railroads and business men of the state to stop wasting so much energy, time and capital in idle talk and boosting and to do something more practical along the line of improving farm land and promoting better farm homes and living conditions on the Georgia farm so that there will be some inducement for a good class of energetic white farmers to move into the state and live as well as make money in farming.

Many Farmers Interested.

"If you want to get a good farmer to locate in Georgia you must offer him something better than a tenant shack to live in. He is not going to move his family down here unless he is offered some if not all the modern comforts and conveniences he is used to. He will not come here to pioneer. The new conditions under which he lives has done away with any adventure for pioneering. He wants to buy a farm that he can move to with his family and go to work, and make a living, which he can certainly do in Georgia if he engages in diversified farming and uses the proper methods.

"I claim that the owners of the idle and abandoned farms in Georgia can give the outside settler a better deal than he can get in any other state if they will only make up their minds to organize and build modern farms that will meet the present-day requirements."

Mr. Stanton's company recently organized the Telfair-Wheeler County Land company at McRae, which is now preparing to sell small, modernly built, ready-to-go farms to northern settlers. At the Ohio state fair last month this company had an exhibit and obtained the names and addresses of more than 400 farmers who are interested in moving to Georgia. A delegation of Telfair and Wheeler county people attended the fair and had charge of the exhibit. Mr. Stanton said that this exhibit was only a feeler and the results obtained indicate conclusively what can be accomplished by practical efforts.

LABOR DAY 'CUE BRINGS BUSINESS TO REALTY FIRM

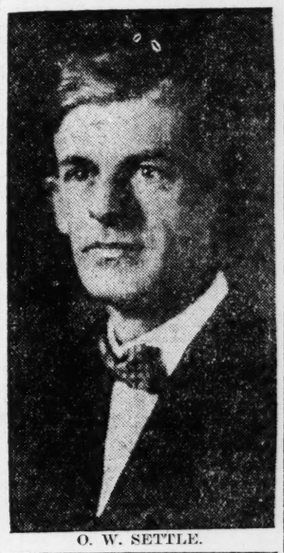

Despite the rain Labor day, when a big barbecue was held at the formal opening of Oakdale Estates, a large crowd attended and considerable real estate activity resulted.

However, the Southern Realty and Trust corporation, believing that some timid souls failed to take advantage of the old-fashioned barbecue and musical entertainment because of the rain Labor day, repeated the offering Saturday with even gerater success from the standpoint both of numbers present and realty activity.

Oakdale Estates is situated in one of Atlanta's most rapidly developing suburban sections, on Wieuca road, just of Peachtree road. It includes the proposed Wieuca Country club, which is one of the largest enterprises of its kind in the country.

Von Elm Defeats Jones To Win Crown of Amateur

CONFERENCE GRID SEASON WILL BEGIN NEXT SATURDAY

VON ELM SUCCEEDS JONES AS NATIONAL AMATEUR CHAMP

Tech Plays Oglethorpe In Opener

BY CLARENCE NIXON.

Southern conference football will get under way Saturday when 22 college teams swing into action on southern gridirons in the first games of the season.

Many teams in the southern conference are now ready to get busy on their schedule, while many others are not quite in shape as yet but are expected to be ready for the first whistle September 25.

The two biggest games around these parts are those between Georgia Tech and Oglethorpe, two old rivals, and Georgia and Mercer. This year the Petrels are bringing out one of the best teams in the school's history or as good as any ever put out by the Peachtree institute.

The Petrels have been cutting down the margin of victory by the Yellow Jackets each year and last year they brought it to within one touchdown of Tech's score. This year the Petrels are looking forward to the game and expect to emerge winner over the Gold and White for the first time since these two schools have been playing each other on the gridiron.

The Georgia-Mercer game at Athens looms as another great battle for both of these schools have a real fighting machine. The Bulldogs are expected to cause much trouble before the 1926 southern conference football championship is decided.

Bulldogs Strong.

The Bulldogs have a strong team this year with plenty of reserve power in the many players out for the team. The Bulldogs have caused much worry to backers of other conference teams. When the first whistle was blown for official practice some 75 candidates marched out on Sanford field seeking a place on the team, and the Georgia mentor has plenty of material to work with.

Many other good games are scheduled for the opening day. The Crimson Tide of Alabama will face the Millsaps in the initial game of these two schools. Alabama is expected to down the Millsaps but will have no easy time of it.

This season will see some of the best teams in the conference in many a year, with some of last year's great eleveus among the lower class. Alabama will not be as strong as that of last year, however, but is expected to be right in the running. The Wade machine is not possessed with the same power as that of last season. Many of the great stars, such as Pooley Hubert, Mack Brown and the like are missing from the ranks of the Tide and the loss is keenly felt.

Vanderbilt is also coming out with a flashy squad which bids fair to cause no little commotion in the season's scramble. Vandy has several good men in its lineup who possess much ability at handling themselves on the field. The defensive play is as good as could be expected, according to reports, and the offensive is working well.

Tech Is Loser.

Tech loses much strength with the absence of Wycoff, Williams and Murray, who left via the graduation route. But despite the fact that these stars are no more as far as the Golden Tornado is concerned, Coach Alexander has plenty of material to build up a good team.

Adrian Maurer is a big loss to the Petrel squad and will be greatly missed when the Birds line up for the coming season. His clever running and sure tackling will be missed. He was the big gun on the Petrels' defense as well as the offense and did much to win the S. I. A. A. title for the Oglethorpe squad.

Other teams in the conference were hit by graduation but are striving to make up for this loss. Mercer is stacking up to the expectations of the early dopesters and is expected to give the other teams a run for their money.

Reports from the many schools are to the effect that everything is in readiness for the opening games next Saturday. Nearly all of the schools have a much advanced team for this time of year and many of them are fast rounding into shape as the days roll by.

ALTOONA RACE IS CAPTURED BY LOCKHART

Speedway, Altoona, Pa., September 18.—(AP)—Driving a non-stop race at a pace of more than 117 miles an hour, Frank Lockhart, winner of the May 30 Indianapolis motor classic, was the victor in the 250-mile battle here this afternoon. Nursing his motor along, Lockhart never faltered after the first 50 miles, holding the lead until the final bomb heralded him as the conqueror. The official time was 2:08:13.

The veteran Leon Duray did not find himself until he had passed the 150-mile mark. Here he pushed ahead from sixth place, passing one driver after another, to take second place. His driving was the outstanding feature of the battle and he brought the crowd to its feet cheering time and again.

Peter Kreis took third place in easy fashion. Harry Hartz, well up from early in the race, dropped back gradually, giving way to Duray and Young Kreis. He placed fourth. Bob McDonough was fifth, Fred Comer sixth, and Tonny Gullotta, substituting for Benny Hill during the final 100 miles, seventh.

While Lockhart deserved much credit for his ability to keep going at top speed from start to finish, Duray took the lion's share of the fans' attention. At 150 miles Duray was forced to the pit for a left front tire change. He was then in sixth place.

Going back to the boards after dropping two laps during the stop, he opened his front drive motor wide and ran wild. He lapped the leader twice and pulled up to the runner-up post.

Junior Highs Prepare For Coming Season

BY HOWARD HOLT.

All kinds of pep and ginger is being displayed in Atlanta Junior High school football circles in preparation for the coming season. Each of the four junior schools are represented on the gridiron this season and each team will be very evenly matched.

Joe Brown Junior High school has a fine chance to cop the championship this season as they have had a number of the last year's team to report for practice at the beginning of the fall work. For a while it was doubtful as to whether or not they would have any to return but the lure of the game was too strong for the youngsters.

Coach Fallon has had about 50 boys out for practice each afternoon and with the new material that has cropped up he is having a time deciding just what combination will work out best. In the line Fallon has Captain Stokes, Hinson, Cowan, Ferguson, Benson and Lasiter from the last year's team. And in the backfield Whatley and Charlie Howard bid fair to make a berth. Charley Howard is to be remembered from the "Championship Sand Lot Team, the Rinky-Dinks" of last year.

Joe Brown had a mighty fine team last season losing only to the O'Keefe outfit, and playing the Bass Juniors to a tie.

Hoke Smith Junior High is reentering the league in football after a year's absence with mighty fine prospects. Coach Maddox has had some 40 or 50 boys out for the team this season, and it is keeping him and Roy Hutson, who is assisting with the team, on the jump.

Thaxton, Grogan, Towery, Bozo and Glover are fighting hard for a berth as regulars in the backfield. Each of these youngsters have the required qualifications of a good Junior High back.

Hard Battle.

In the line Eplan, and Morris are having a battle for the pivot position. The Perkerson brothers are giving the rest of the ends a fight for the flank positions, and Davis and Braunstein are the best of the candidates for the tackle and guard positions.

Coach Langston, of the O'Keefe Junior High school has had more boys out for the team this year than ever before. The first day out there were more than 100 aspirants for the varsity squad. By the end of the week the number was down to about 70.

O'Keefe, two years champions, will try hard to capture the 1926 championship. Last season they lost their last game of the season to Bass, who won the honors.

A number of the last year's squad have returned for another season, and will give the Irishmen a strong neucleus for a good team. Couch, Meyerson, Little and Sudderth, are old members that are back in the line. Jenkins, Landers, Holt, Eckard and Adams look good as backs. Much is expected of the new material this season. A number of the boys out have just moved to the city and have had some experience.

William A. Bass, 1925 champion, is hard at work preparing to defend the honors that they won last season. For the past two weeks Coaches Holt and Jones have had over 50 candidates out for the team. This outfit was hard hit this season when all of its backs were promoted to the Senior High school. Most of the boys who went up are giving an account of themselves this fall.

Four Letter Men.

Coaches Holt and James have four letter men of the last season team to return around which they are building the new team. Captain Jack Davis will again be seen at left end; M. L. Taylor, at tackle; Van Guthridge, at right guard; Denver Hilburne, at left guard, and Johnny Hadley, right end. These linemen have had at least one year's experience on a junior high team, and can be counted on to give good results. There are any number of ambitious youths who are husky that are trying for the vacancies in the line. Some of the most promising of the new line men are Nat and Jack De Jarnett, Oliver Jones, Louie McLendon, Carl Burgess, Ward Higginbottom, Joe LaFitte, W. L. Smith and Asa Candler.

Bobby Over Golfed, Says Frank Getty

BY FRANK GETTY.

Baltusrol Golf Club, Short Hills, N. J., September 18.—To the long list of champions who have gone down to defeat in this fateful year, add the name of Robert Tyre Jones, Jr., of Atlanta, Ga.

It was a tired Bobby, obviously "over-golfed," who went down fighting in defense of his title, beaten three up and two to play by the grim-faced, pugnacius youngster from Los Angeles.

The westerner's deadly putting, which overcame the handicap of four stymies laid by the Atlantan, won Von Elm the championship he has striven for since he swapped his job as a caddie for that of a prominent contender for national honors.

CIGARETTE IS WINNER OF GOLD CUP

Washington, September 18.—(AP)—Matching her skill and nerve against men long seasoned in the speed boat racing game, Mrs. W. J. Conners, wife of a Buffalo publisher, drove Miss Okeechobee to victory today on the Potomac river in the national regatta contest for the silver cup sponsored by the secretary of the navy.

Then she drove the same craft over a six-mile stretch to defeat Mrs. Delphine Cromwell, daughter of the late Horace E. Dodge, automobile manufacturer, in Miss Syndicate, the fastest of the Dodge fleet of motor craft. In the silver cup race Mrs. Conners averaged 52.59 miles an hour and in the match event she made a flat 53 miles an hour for the six miles distance twice around the course.

J. Gordon Hamersley, of the Columbia Yacht club, New York city, shared honors with Mrs. Conners, winning the president's gold cup with Cigarette IV, by taking first place in each of the three heats in that contest. This race was at 15 miles for each heat and the Cigarette IV won each impressively. Horace, owned by Mrs. Hugh Dillman, widow of Horace E. Dodge, and driven by Commodore F. G. Ericson, of Toronto, placed second in the gold cup race on points by taking second place in the last heat after Miss Syndicate broke a propeller shaft. Greenwich Folly, owned and driven by George H. Townsend, of the Indian Harbor Yacht club, placed third on points.

Miss America V won the international hydroplane race over Miss America IV, the only other boat to finish.

Secretary Wilbur and a number of high naval officers watched the races. Thousands of other persons were gathered on pleasure craft along the course and still other thousands lined the shores at Potomac park to see the finish of the first national regatta ever held in Washington.

TIGE FLOWERS MEETS M'TIGUE ON OCTOBER 15

"Tiger" Flowers, middleweight champion, is signed to meet Mike McTigue in a 15-round battle in Tia Juana, Mexico, October 15, according to announcement by Walk Miller, manager of Flowers, who is in Atlanta for the Chuck Burns-Young Stribling bout Tuesday night at the Auditorium.

Miller stated that he had accepted an offer of $25,000 guarantee, with a substantial percentage privilege and expenses made him by Jim Crofton, matchmaker of the Foreign club of Tia Juana.

Miller said that the match of Flowers in Chicago had been called off due to the failure of the matchmaker there to post the required guarantee.

Flowers is training daily for the match at Miller's health farm at Marietta and is in fine shape, according to his manager.

Should Flowers beat McTigue next month, Miller stated that he would accept the offer for a Flowers-Delaney title match from a Boston promoter to be staged at Braves field next May.

Philadelphia Lawyers Attacking Dempsey

Philadelphia, Pa., September 18.—Suits, counter-suits and threats of suits were being fired around this quiet city today as frequently and with as much force as the punches that Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney are tossing at sparring partners in their training camps.

Dempsey and Tunney are under obligations to Tex Rickard to fight here next Thursday night for the world's heavyweight championship, but there was a rather sizeable group of outsiders gathered today who insisted they would stop the fight with the help of the law.

Among them were two Philadelphia taxpayers, Jack Kearns, former manager of the champion, Paddy Mullins, manager of Harry Wills, the negro challenger, and B. C. Clement, who claims to possess a binding contract signed by Dempsey to fight Wills some place in the west."

The suit in which Kearns is seeking $333,333,33 of Dempsey's money will have to be answered next Tuesday morning, according to a ruling by Judge Charles Y. Audenreid. The judge invited the fighters to appear and submit to questions concerning any advance money they have received from Rickard, but their appearance is not obligatory.

Among the many complicated angles in the suit appears the complaint of two Philadelphia taxpayers that the law was violated when Rickard advanced the purse money to the two fighters before they had met in the ring.

Counsel for Dempsey intimated that the real purpose of this most recent action by Kearns was prompted by his desire to get an admission that some moneys had been advanced to find out where Dempsey's money was deposited and then attach it.

It was learned from a reliable source that any money Rickard advanced to either one of the principals was advanced on notes as loans and it was said that this transactions did not violate the letter of the law even if it might be construed as an evasion of the spirit.

B. C. Clement said tonight that his counsel was going to start action Monday to prevent the fight. He said he did not know what action would be taken and he declined to give the names of his attorneys.

Paddy Mullins, who hasn't tossed any kind of an injunction from his own fist is interested, of course, in any action that Clement may take because he signed Wills to the same contract and he insists that Dempsey ran out of a legal obligation to fight the negro before he engaged in any other battle.

FIGHT RADIO CONTRACT LET BY RICKARD

New York, September 18.—(AP)—The Dempsey-Tunney heavyweight championship bout will be broadcast over the radio from ringside at Philadelphia on September 23, Tex Rickard announced here today. The name of the radio concern to whom the broadcasting privileges were sold, was withheld. Its idenity will be made public Monday.

Whether or not other radio stations will be allowed to report the fight on the air from wire stations furnished through channels such as press associations will be a matter for the radio station to which all rights of broadcasting have been sold, to decide, Rickard said.

Asked why he did not announce the name of the firm that had bought up the privileges, Rickard said that the purchaser wanted to keep the matter quiet until Monday afternoon. Rickard said the concern had one of the most powerful radio stations in the country but he refused to reveal where it is situated.

NEWSPAPERS WILL BROADCAST.

Philadelphia, September 18.—(AP)—The newspapers of the country will not be shut out from broadcasting the details of the Dempsey-Tunney fight they receive over their wires from the ringside.

Westerner Outplays Atlantan

BY DICK HAWKINS,
Constitution Sports Editor.

Baltusrol Country Club, Short Hills, N. J., September 18.—Two balls lying close to a cup on the seventeenth green at Baltusrol—12,000 souls grouped around the green in death-like silence—a championship in the balance, and George Von Elm, square-jawed lad from California, sank his putt to halve the hole and win the 1926 championship from Bobby Jones, for two years the emperor of amateurism on the links.

Smiling—as game a loser as he is a winner, Bobby Jones shook the hand of the youth who beat him at his own game and watched the admirers of George Von Elm leave the green with a radiant blonde golfer astride their shoulders—Bobby Jones was beaten and fairly beaten.

It was just a case of Bobby Jones playing magnificent golf to the greens but failing by inches to sink putt after putt while his opponent was holing enough long putts to win the match.

No man in any branch of sports has ever continued forever undefeated. Always some opponent will catch even the best when they are sufficiently off one branch of their game to lose and that is what George Von Elm did to Bobby Jones today.

The Californian played super-human golf to win and Bobby Jones played simply a magnificent game—which was not enough.

As ever Bobby Jones did not go down to defeat without an heroic struggle.

The greatest example of this came on the thirteenth hole when he was two down and his tee shot pushed to a creek on the right of the fairway. Von Elm was straight down the fairway but Bobby stepped into the water, played his ball from the edge of the creek bed to the edge of the green. His shot rolled to a trap but it was the most beautiful recovery of the tournament without exception. The ball was in such a position that the club threw water on the spectactors when he made the shot.

The roll into the trap cost him the hole and match in three down with five to play, but the gallery could have cheered no more if Bobby Jones had won the title on that shot. It was evidence enough that the thousands who jammed the course today were pulling for Bobby. Never in the history of golf was there a more popular loser than was Bobby.

After ending the morning round one down, Bobby won the first hole with a beautiful birdie four, but like one hole in the morning round, he won with one beautiful putt, where he could have won with two putts. Von Elm was in the rough near the fence with his tee shot and topped his second a few yards to the edge of the rough. His third was in a trap at the right of the green and he did not lay his fourth close enough to go down. He took a six and Bobby a four.

Birdie Playing.

Both were shooting for birdies on the second, but both missed, and the hole was halved in fours. They also halved the third in fours and then both were again trying for birdies on the fourth. Bobby was short while Von Elm was above the hole.

Bobby putted first and his ball rimmed the cup to lay his third stymie of the day. It was not a complete stymie, but Von Elm could not negotiate the curve and the hole was halved in three. Von Elm's deadly mashie accounted for another hole on the fifth, when he laid his approach shot dead to the pin for a 10-foot putt, and a birdie three. Bobby failed by inches to sink his 25-footer. Again on the sixth Bobby brought a groan from the crowd when his first putt rolled to within six inches of the cup and stopped. It was just a case of not enough punch in his putts. He was within a few inches of the cup with more than 15 putts during the day and but three of them fell, a very low average for Bobby Jones.

The super-putter of Von Elm failed him once on the seventh when he had a chance to win with a 10-footer, but it did not fall. Bobby was in the rough at the right with his tee shot and the ball found a bad lie. His second was pitched and went into a bunker 150 yards short of the green, but rolled out into the rough. His third was on the edge of the green and he was down in two beautiful putts. Von Elm was in the trap at the left of the green with his second and his blast was short of the pin by ten feet. Sinking the putt would have meant the hole but he failed and the match stood at one up for Von Elm.

The eighth was halved in fours after Bobby had played a perfect iron from the rough to the green and was inside his opponent. Bobby was again putting for a birdie but the ball would not fall.

The ninth was halved in threes. Here Bobby ran his putt to the edge of the cup and it looked like it was in but only a groan from the crowd greeted the shot.

Miss on Tenth.

The tenth saw the only real miss from the clubs of Bobby Jones. His second hooked to a trap at the left of the green and he looked up on his niblick chip and the ball failed to clear the edge of the bunker. Von Elm was on in two and down in two while Bobby took a five to go two down with eight to play.

They were down on the eleventh in par fours both playing two perfect shots to the green and two putts.

The twelfth was also halved in par figures, not reaching the green with their tee shots and going down in two putts.

Then came the fatal thirteenth, where Bobby Jones made a shot which will long be remembered as the most gallant attempt in the match. He was in a creek with his tee shot and refused to drop back, but played from the edge of the water. He lost the hole, but it was a beautiful out and the gallery gave vent to a roar of applause.

This placed Bobby three down with five to play, but he gathered strength rather than weakness and when Von Elm's putter slipped for the second time in the round Bobby won the fourteenth hole with a par four. Von Elm took three putts.

This left the match at 2 and 3 and Bobby was shooting for a birdie on the fifteenth, but again the ball lack-

DATES FOR CAMP MEMORIAL GAMES IN CONFERENCE NAMED

Officials Hold Meet In Atlanta

Proceeds of the Tech-Georgia game here on November 13 will go to the Walter Camp memorial, it was decided Saturday in a southern conference officials' meeting. Each college of the 22 in the southern conference will designate one of its football games this season as a "Walter Camp" game in support of the Walter Camp memorial.

The executive board also devoted considerable time to the passing on the eligibility of various football players in their circuit and to the drawing up of new eligibility rules for players. These new rulings will be presented for final action at the annual meeting of all conference representatives at Gainesville, Fla., in December, it was announced.

Although the board had expected to dispose of all business matters that came before it by noon, the meeting did not adjourn until 4:30, when the members hurried out to the Georgia Tech stadium to accept Head Coach Alexander's invitation to witness the Yellow Jackets' evening scrimmage. The conference officials arrived at the bowl, however, too late to see other than the third freshman team scrimmaging with the third-string varsity, the officials said tonight. It was near dusk, however, before Coach Alexander retired his varsity men from the field.

The "Walter Camp" games that were designated by the conference representatives present at the executive board wre announced as follows:

South Carolina-Virginia game, October 30.

Tulane-University of Mississippi game, October 30.

Georgia Tech-University of Georgia game, November 13.

Florida-Clemson game, November 6.

Georgia-Florida game, October 30.

Vanderbilt-Georgia game, October 23.

North Carolina-North Carolina State.

Auburn-Georgia game, November 6.

Virginia Polytechnic Institute-Virginia game, October 23.

Dean S. V. Sanford, of the University of Georgia, chairman of the conference executive committee, presided at the committee meeting, which was held at the Henry Grady hotel. Other members of the executive committee who attended the session were: H. N. Edmunds, University of South Carolina, vice president; W. D. Funkhouser, University of Kentucky, secretary-treasurer; J. B. Crenshaw, Georgia School of Technology; A. W. Hobbs, University of North Carolina; Dr. W. L. Smith, of Tulane university, who represented M. J. White, who is touring Europe, and P. L. Reed, of the University of Florida. Dr. H. C. Byrd, of the University of Maryland, was the only member of the executive committee who was absent from the meeting, it was announced.

Official action taken on the question of eligibility of various players in the conference, will be announced only to the officials of the schools in which those players are enrolled, Secretary Funkhouser stated last night.

W-L FINISHES PRELIMINARY GRID WORK

Lexington, Va. September 18.—The activities of the varsity football squad under Coaches "Pat" Herron and "Kay" Thomas were curtailed beginning riday morning, when the regular class sessions of the university started. The mentors kept the gridders hard at the game twice every day up until the last possible opportunity for morn- practice. The afternoon drills will be lengthened beginning this week, and intensive work will be done regularly in order to prepare for the invasion of the determined Lynchburg college Hornets, who are coming to Lexington.

The ten days during which the sessions were held both morning and afternoon resulted in progress which is more gratifying to the coaches. Hard scrimmages and practical work in running back punts, live tackling, blocking, and other activities have been held frequently by Coach Herron, and the fact that no more than half a dozen men have been injured sufficiently to keep them out of uniform speaks well for the early hardening-up process which was indulged in for several days following Labor day.

The line continues to be the greatest source of worry to the coaches. Maynard Holt, playing his third year as a varsity man, is assured of a position either at tackle or guard, while the playing of Fitzpatrick, ex-yearling tackle, gives him a decided advantage in the race for regular positions. Spotts, end, who played in a number of games last year, and Dawson substitute varsity guard last year, are holding their places against all comers, but the center, one end, one guard and one tackle positions are being hotly contested for by ten or a dozen likely men. Probable starters in the game against the Hornets Saturday appear to lie in a list composed of Sanders, end; Rector, Groop and Eigelbach, centers; with Fisher and Streit both at present on the injured list, and Bailey, Thompson, Miller, and Fitzpatrick fighting it out for the vacant guard and tackle position.

Captain Rauber, fullback, Palmer, fleetfooted half, and Tips, quarter, are all in camp and showing their old form. Howe, Stearns, Whitlock, Lott and Latham are improving steadily and presenting a variegated attack and defense whenever used. The backfield candidates have been unusually fortunate in not receiving any serious injuries although Stearns was held up several days by a severe "charley horse" and Lott was out of uniform for a brief period due to a slight indisposition.

PROMISING STARS OF THE 1926 GOLDEN TORNADO

SHAKY KAIN IS SHIFTED TO HALFBACK

BY MARCUS BRYANT.

Athens, Ga., September 18.—"Shaky" Kain, fullback, was shifted to a halfback position in today's football headliner for the Georgia Bulldogs, closing the second week of practice, and leaving but one week before the initial appearance of the year against the Mercer Bears next Saturday.

Two hours scrimmaging. Such was the program today and every available varsity candidate was used against Coach Stanley Backman's yearlings. This was the third scrimmage of the week for the Red and Black and their performance today was slightly improved.

The scrimmage failed to test the defensive strength of the Bulldogs in any decided degree. The freshmen have only been on Sanford field for one week and their offense showed no especial mark of perfection. However, the work today was more pleasing.

The backfield of the first team read: Hollis, quarterback; Kain and Morton, halves, and McCrary, full. The line was bolstered by Tom Nash and Shivar at the ends, Laughtenheiser and Luckey, tackles, and Gene Smith and Dowis, guards. Blackshear Smith did the pivot duty.

There was another new team sent against the frosh, which lined up as follows: Forbes, center; Huff and Miller, ends; Jacobson and Groves, tackles; Hank and Eubanks, guards; Dudley, quarter; Hooks and Hatcher, halves, and Wooten, full. Bobby Hooks and Wooten carried away honors for this team and showed up nicely. Substitutions were numerous and upon short notice, all except the cripples being injected into play.

V. H. Bryant and Laughtenheiser continued their good work at the tackles in today's scrimmage, and Bert Cornett distinguished himself at quarter.

Gene Smith injured an ankle today, but is expected to return for duty Monday, as did "Bear" Morris, tackle, George Van Giesen and Sidney Cox have been held out for several days with pulled tendons and Kels Roland is bothered with a charley-horse, though all will be fit by Monday. Walter Fleming, back, who returned late, is out of condition.

Monday will be spent in light work, according to Coach Woodruff, while a light scrimmage will follow Tuesday. On Wednesday the Bulldogs will climax their heavy work in preparation for the Mercer game with a hard scrimmage.

Mercer comes here in the opening game after spending a practice period at St. Simons, and reports emanating from their camp are to the effect they boast a strong eleven this season, and among their aims is to best the Bulldogs, a feat never before accomplished. Last season the Bulldogs opened the campaign against the Bears in Macon, dedicating Mercer's great athletic plant. Last year's score was 32 to 0.

Howard Bulldogs Are Hard at Work

Birmingham, Ala., September 18.—The Howard college Bulldogs are going through hard workouts daily getting in shape for the opening game of the season with Marion institute September 24. Coach Burbage, of the Cadets, has probably the best team in several years and they are expected to put up a harder fight than they did last year when Howard beat them 35 to 0.

The Marion game will give Coaches "Jenks" Gillem and Doc Newton, of the Howard outfit, a better view of what their men can do in a fight and get them lined up for the game with Oglethorpe's Petrels October 2. Oglethorpe has one of the strongest teams in the S. I. A. A. and the Bulldogs will be hard put to beat it.

Big Illinois Guard Starts Second Season

M. H. (Bubbles) Mitterwallner, Los Angeles, Cal., will play his second year of football at the University of Illinois this fall. The Californian, weighing 230 pounds and a guard, played a year at Colorado college in 1921 before coming to Illinois.

GENE TUNNEY GOES 2 ROUNDS WITH LEONARD

Atlantic City, N. J., September 18. (AP)—Jack Dempsey was thrown temporarily in the hands of a receiver late today as the result of a suit filed by Jack Kearns, his former manager, demanding an accounting of all funds earned by the world's heavyweight champion from August 3, 1923 to August 3, 1926, the period of their three-year contract.

Dempsey was ordered to appear before Vice Chancellor Robert H. Ingersoll at 10 o'clock next Tuesday morning for a hearing.

Kearns, in his bill of complaint, sets forth that he has been manager of Dempsey for more than five years and that he brought him from obscurity, increasing his earnings from $200 for an exhibition to where he could have earned $500,000 for fighting Harry Wills, the negro challenger.

Kearns sets forth that he signed articles of agreement with Tex Rickard on August 18, 1925, for Dempsey to fight Wills on or before July 4, 1926 and that the champion had been guaranteed $500,000 for his engagement.

Kearns has a suit for $333,000 pending against Dempsey in New York. This represents a third of the money Kearns figures Dempsey could have earned provided he had carried out the campaign Kearns had mapped out for him. Dempsey, however, parted with Kearns, breaking off all business relations about a year and a half ago.

Since that time Dempsey has appeared in numerous exhibitions, earning as much as $5.0000 for each appearance. He also has engaged in motion picture work. Kearns said he is entitled to one-third of all of Dempsey's earnings.

PALMER GOLF MEET OPENS ON TUESDAY

Entries in the golf tournament being staged by the Palmer Properties closed Saturday at noon, and officials of the tournament announced that a large number of occupants of offices in the Palmer buildings had entered.

Play in the tournament will get under way on September 23 and will close on the following Saturday. The tourney will be a handicap affair, and each entrant will be given a fair handicap.

Beautiful prizes are offered to the winner of the entire tournament and holders of low net from each building, and consolation prizes will also be given, it was announced.

Wade Sends Crimsons Through Hard Week

BY BOB MATHERNE.

University, Ala., September 18.—Paying special attention to place-kicking, punting and running signals, the Crimson Tide of Alabama got in a fast double dose of practice here Tuesday and repeated with a strenuous workout Wednesday. Over across the field were Coaches Propst and Mack Brown with their squad of freshmen, fast approaching the hundred mark by new arrivals.

Moley Smith, a big freshman tackle of last year, was added to the list of slightly injured Thursday because of a big boil on his knee. Despite the stiffness and soreness of his leg, Smith, who is a Birmingham boy, went through the workout. This ex-freshman is another of the likely looking substitutes for the line this year. He is going good at this time and realizes fully that few sophomores have landed on the varsity team at Alabama in past years.

Wednesday morning saw the last of the morning practices for the Tidesmen. They have worked diligently for the past ten days both in the morning and afternoon, but classes started Thursday and they come before football. The two weeks of double workouts have put the crimsons in far better shape at this time of the year than they have ever been before and the crimson mentors are very much pleased with the progress they have made.

The middle of Alabama's line, where Buckler and Jones held sway with their powerful physiques for three years, is going to be filled this season from a quartet of huskies composed of Payne, Bowdoin, Hagler and Skidmore, Bowdoin and Hagler have been running with the first team for the past few days, while Payne and Skidmore have been used on the second team. Bowdoin is the more experienced of the lot and is being counted on to fill well the hole existing at guard. Hagler, an ex-fresh, is considered at this time the most likely graduated freshman to break into regular play as a varsity man this season. Payne and Skidmore are both powerful fellows and hard pluggers and may be in there before many days.

Sherlock Holmes, whose late arrival has placed him far behind the rest of the squad in condition, spent more than an hour Tuesday morning running up and down the field and place-kicking some. Holmes has been working hard all summer and will be able to stand the gaff within a few days. There is an optimistic belief at the capstone that Holmes will be the best center in the Southern Conference this season, for he was one of the best last year and will probably play a better game this season.

While Alabama's backfield will not have the powerful plunging Hubert, nor Brown, nor Gillis this season, plans are being at the capstone to have a backfield contingent that will not be any slouch in comparison to any other backfield. The backs all have speed. They are developing passes and punters to add to what they have. Rosenfeld, Barnes, Caldwell, Hammer, Earl Smith and Johnson are nice runners and Brown and Winslett, who played end last season are showing fairly decent form again. Barnes, Johnson and Caldwell can buck a line with ample power behind their thrusts, and the group as a whole is getting better defensively.

Alabama's opening game is less than ten days off with Millsaps college of Jackson, Miss., as the first opponent.

FRIENDS THINK SUZANNE UNHAPPY WITH NEW ROLE

CHAMPION SAYS SHE IS VERY HAPPY AS PRO.

BY RALPH HEINZEN.

Paris, September 18.—Has the dashing Suzanne Lenglen regretted her action in turning "pro," and would she return to the ranks of "simonpures" if the French Lawn Tennis association would close its eyes to her month of paid playing?

Through the press Suzanne has let it be known that she is happy at her new job, but her friends say otherwise. The difficulties in the way of booking professional matches, combined with the facts that the South African and German Tennis Federations have put up the bars against her and that Miss Elizabeth Ryan and many other first-water stars have refused to sell their amateurism, have considerably worried Suzanne.

Then, too, she has told her friends that she dislikes to be known now as Suzanne Lenglen, without the prefix of "mademoiselle." In European sport it is an old established custom that professionals are booked in the box scores without the benefit of "miss" or "mister."

Bothering Suzanne also is the fact that she is to lose a title which has been hers by inheritance ever since the war, with the exception of one year when her health broke down—the French national championship. The awarding of that title is bothering the French Federation considerably, too.

It will fall to either Mlle. "Didi" Penelope Vlasto or her cousin, Mlle. Helene Contostavlos. Neither is French, their parents being Greeks, who have settled in Marseilles for business. But both are good tennis players, although outclassed in Suzanne's company. Neither will turn professional for there are no offers being made them.

The title may fall to either or to both. In fact, there is little to choose between them and the federation got around a ticklish proposition in quite a tactful manner last year by rating them both second. In 1924 when Suzanne was too sick for the championships, Mlle. Vlasto took the French national title. In every other year since the war it has gone to Suzanne.

At the federation, officials said that they have written Suzanne off the books as a professional, although as yet they have received no official notification that she has engaged in play as a professional. For that reason, if Suzanne wanted to take the step, they might close an eye to her short professional past. The federation sincerely hopes she does change her mind.

GREEN WAVE STRONG AGAIN THIS SEASON

New Orleans, La., September 18.—The Tulane Green Wave looks like it is in for another big year on the gridiron this season.

With two week's practice behind him, Head Coach Clark D. Shaughnessy appears to be sitting pretty. Four full varsity teams working out twice daily and standing the gaff of the hot sun stripped to the waist and sun burned to a frazzle, is the vista gladdening the hearts of the railbirds.

The biggest surprise of the workouts has been the way the other backfield men have come through. Although Flournoy is gone with his long punts, Tulane now has at least four men who are exceptional kickers and who will be equal to almost any opponent in the booting game.

Menville, Pat Browne, Redus Day and Eddie Morgan are the four boys with the performing toes. They are also adept with the forward pass.

Shaughnessy is so favored with big heavy linemen by losing only one man from the forward wall of last year that he may be able to use some of the 1925 advance guard in the backfield. Pat Browne and Harvey Wilson were playing in the line last year, although they were formerly experienced backs. This fall may see them back in the ball carrying capacity to make room for some 200 pound freshmen.

PHILLY YOUTHS GIVE DEMPSEY RABBIT'S FOOT

Atlantic City, N. J., September 18. (AP)—The latest punch in the nose Dempsey received was delivered after his workout at the dog track here this afternoon. He did not know about the court action while he was engaging with his sparring partners, but the viciousness with which he tore into Tommy Loughran was an indication that he expected the latest thrust from Jack Kearns.

Loughran felt the sting of the champion's punch and came near hitting the canvas. The fleet Philadelphian used all of his trickery to escape it, but at the close of their two rounds Dempsey drove him into a corner, cutting loose with a left hook that landed squarely on the chin. Loughran's knees sagged and he fell into Dempsey's arms.

Dempsey engaged in his usual five rounds of glove work today, ripping and tearing into his three sparring mates with reckless abandon. He boxed the first round against Benny Kruger, German light-heavyweight champion.

Kruger was driven all over the ring under a furious battering.

Loughran boxed the next two rounds, while Marty Burke, New Orleans, faced the champion for the final two.

When Dempsey crawls into the ring against Tunney in Philadelphia next Thursday night he may carry a gold-mounted rabbit's foot concealed in his fighting trunks. The rabbit's foot and a gold belt buckle were presented to the champion today by 14 boys, junior members of the Pennsylvania Athletic club of Philadelphia.

Dempsey gave a bit of advice to the youngsters on the value and benefits of boxing as a healthful exercise and presented each with silver boxing gloves, miniature of the six-ounce boxing size.

Carlaris Expected To Be Headliner

Carlaris, hero of the last Tia Juana Derby, the last Coffroth handicap, and the last Coffroth preliminary, whose earnings gross upward of $100,000, will be a headliner at Tia Juana again next winter. W. S. Anderson refused an offer of a quarter of a million dollars last spring, immediately after the running of the Coffroth, for the English bred son of Phalaris and Carnival, which cost him only $6,300 at Philip Chinn's Saratoga yearling sale of 1924.

Anderson maintains that the son of Phalaris can beat any horse of his age in America at any distance, and is going to try to prove it at Havre de Grace in a revival of the Potomac handicap and at Covington in a renewal of the $45,000 Latonia championship. Eastern racing folk are strong in the belief that Crusader, Man o' War's smartest son so far, can beat any 3-year-old alive over a big distance. But they haven't thrown Carlaris into the discard, and are following the course of his training with curious interest.

Backfield Slow; Line Is Clumsy

Gloom hung low over Tech fl Saturday afternoon following scrimmage between the Yell Jacket varsity team and the fre man squad when the candidates for the 1926 Golden Tornado fail to make an impression on the Te coaches.

Following the stiff workout, which three complete varsity lineu were used, the Jacket mentors pressed themselves as being grea disappointed with the showing ma by the men against the first-year me who gave a good account of the selves.

With the exception of a few spur there was nothing extraordinary abo the playing of the men. Several go runs were made by the boys and qui a bit of nice kicking, but nothing li what the coaches had expected to when the two teams met.

The plays were not worked out well as they had been expected a several blunders were made which a scheduled game would have prove disastrous. The line was holding own at times, but the freshmen ma times got through to throw the va sity men for a loss. The first-year m often held the higher-ups to down but at other times the varsity m would scuttle the ends for good gain

Many times the first-year bo would keep the Jackets behind the line of scrimmage with their fa work, preventing them from gettin away with anything. The Clay bo put up a stiff battle, which confuse the bigger boys. Their offensive wor was also well, although they cou not do so much against the heavy va sity line.

Judging from the action on Gra field Saturday, much is yet to be don before the Jackets will be ready f the game with the Oglethorpe Petre next Saturday. The backfield cou not get going, it seemed. Many time they would lose ground from th fault of not being able to make speedy start.

Several plays are yet to be perfec ed before the Tornado can start o on the 1926 journey for the confe ence championship. Only four play were used, the four used seeming t much for the boys to handle agains the Clay boys.

It was plainly heard around Te Flats that had the Petrels been play ing the Jackets instead of the fresh men, the Peachtree Road school woul have easily defeated the mighty To nado. The Birds would have had a easy time with their old rivals an if the Jacket squad does n pick up in their playing the Petrel will run roughshod over the Gold an White.

Coach Alexander announced that hard week confronted the Jackets an they had much work ahead of ther before they lined up for the kick-of with the Petrels next Saturday. Mon day will be devoted to heavy signa drills with a scrimmage slated fo Tuesday and Wednesday. He did no state whether he would send the boy through a scrimmage Thursday or not but one is expected anyway.

There were no individual stars o the field Saturday and very few brigh plays. Many of the boys favored t make a great showing for the Tornad completely failed against the first-yea men. This makes things look bad fo the Golden Tornado this year, havin no stars to carry the others through However, Coach Alexander expects t have the boys ready to face the Birds from the Peachtree Road school nex Saturday.

Citadel Improves With 1st Practice

Charleston, S. C., September 18.—the first 10 days of practice has resulted in a marked improvement in the appearance of the Citadel squad. The men are regaining in a large measure the football "sense" and are becoming more used to handling the oval after a summer's vacation.

One of the first things to be done by the coaching staff is to develop a quarter to take the place of Teddy Weeks, who left school during the past spring to get married. Teddy Hutchinson, the youngster from Rock Hill, is being considered by the "side-line artists," at any rate, as first choice for the job, and the coaches seem to be of this same opinion. As to whether he will come through or not remains to be seen. Don Blanding, of Sumter, a junior, as is Hutchison, and George Weeks, a sophomore, are the other men who will be considered for the job. Hutchison, on account of Teddy Weeks, has never had an opportunity to demonstrate his ability as field general.

Weeks made quite a reputation at the Charleston High school and at Porter as a drop-kicker. No doubt during the season he will be asked to demonstrate his proficiency in this department of play. His many admirers are of the opinion that he is due to develop into something of an expert in this capacity.

Elect Gavvy Cravath Justice of Peace

Clifford C. (Gavvy) Cravath, home run hitter of the Phillies some years back, was elected justice of the peace of Long Beach, Cal., at the election there last week. He carried his opponent by a two-to-one margin. Cravath retired from baseball almost ten years ago.

CARDINALS INCREASE LEAD IN NATIONAL LEAGUE

Giants Defeat Reds As St. Louis Splits Twin Bill at Philly

Philadelphia, September 18.—(AP)—Denny Sothern, pinch-hitting in the ninth, lined out a solid single that scored Al Nixon from second base and enabled the Philadelphia Nationals at last to check the rush of the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Phillies won 3 to 2, in a hot battle after losing the first half of the twin bill, 7 to 3.

Despite dropping the second contest, the Cardinals gained a half game on Cincinnati, as the Reds lost again to New York. St. Louis now leads the National league race by a game and a half.

Hal Carlson, right-handed ace of the Phillies, made his seventh victory of the season—a fine one—by holding the Cardinals to seven scattered hits and making them fight hard for the two runs they got. Carlson also helped with a single and a double and scored one of the runs in the tight battle.

Carrollton Defeats Tallapoosa Eleven

Carrollton, Ga., September 18.—(Special.)—The Carrollton A. & M. defeated the Tallapoosa High school, 7 to 0, in the first football game of the season here. The game was hard fought all the way, but was marred by the hot weather. Several players with hot tempers engaged in a small fight between quarters.

The game was featured by the playing of the A. & M. through which Tallapoosa could make no headway. The lone touchdown came on a forward pass from Bishop to McGouirk.

New York, September 18.—(AP)—New York was Waterloo for Cincinnati today with the Reds losing, 5 to 4. Four runs for the Giants in the sixth off Donohue and Lucas gave them enough of a lead to win. As the Reds lost their second straight, St. Louis, defeating Philadelphia, put another game's margin between the first and second-place clubs.

Lions Show Punch In Early Practice

State College, Pa. September 18.—First scrimmage sessions of the practice season were ordered for the Penn State college football squad this week and the coaches were thus able to get their first indication of how the 1926 gridiron machine is shaping up. Naturally the work was very ragged but there was a showing of latent power that lends encouragement to the situation.

Assistant coach Larney Conover reported on Wednesday and immediately joined Newsh Bentz in working with the linemen. J. C. "Hap" Frank, former brilliant end, has been here all week assisting with instruction and getting himself into shape. Glenn Killinger is also working out on the Beaver field track and he has been quick to offer suggestions to Cy Lungren and other quarterback candidates.

B. M. "Dutch" Hermann, freshman mentor, spent the fore part of the week assisting with the varsity squad but called out his own squad of candidates on Thursday with the opening of "Freshman Week." A husky squad of yearlings answered the call including a number of boys with good athletic records.

Jack Dunn Plans To Scatter Oriole Team

Disgusted with the collapse of his team, Jack Dunn, of Baltimore, is quoted as planning a wholesale disposal of the personnel at the end of the year. It is said Dunn will retain only Earnshaw and Chambers of his pitching staff, will let his entire outfield and catching staff go, and secure a new third baseman to replace Fritz Maisel, who will be retained as coach.

Raymond Elkund Resigns at 'Tucky

Lexington, Ky., September 18.—(AP) Raymond Elkund, former University of Minnesota athletic star and all-American football player, resigned from the coaching staff of the University of Kentucky here today. Elklund gave poor health and the fear of a nervous breakdown as the reason for his action.

Coach Eklund came to the university in 1924 and took charge of freshman athletics, turning out a winning gridiron team and a basketball squad which was undefeated and laid claim to the championship of the south.

During the 1925-26 season, Eklund took charge of varsity basketball and developed a team which stood high in Southern conference rating. In the Southern conference tournament at Atlanta, however, they were defeated in the semi-finals by Mississippi A. and M. college.

A committee composed of Head Coach Fred J. Murphy, S. A. Boles, athletic director of the university; Enoch Grehan, faculty member of the athletic board, met tonight to decide the course to be pursued by the university in securing a new coach.

Crackers Lose Last Of Season's Games To Birmingham, 6-3

BY CLARENCE NIXON.

After seeing that the Crackers had no chance to oust the Nashville Vols out of fourth and finish in the first division, we held hopes that the Atlantans would do as much as finish above the .500 mark, but when the Dobbers from Birmingham stepped in and handed them a 6-to-3 defeat in the last game of the season Saturday, Mr. Spiller's baseballers were sent down to the .493 mark for the year.

Both teams ended the 1926 season in Atlanta Saturday with the Barons the victors by a three-run margin over the Atlantans. The Crackers lost the game for themselves. They had many chances to score on the visitors but failed when the punch was needed.

Poor base running was a big factor in their defeat. Many times the Crackers would clout a base knock and try and stretch it into a double or a triple.

The fielding was spotty throughout the game. On one occasion an error by Gilbert gave the Barons a run and advanced a couple of men. At times the Atlantans would get themselves together and hold the Dobbers in check for a while.

The defeat was due largely to the pitching of Ray Francis, starting pitcher for the locals. One big inning when the Barons scored four runs and collected six hits off the offerings of Ray gave the Barons a sufficient lead to beat the Crackers.

Following the big spurt in the fourth inning, Niehoff sent Rogers in to take up the mound duty for the Crackers. Rogers held them to two hits for the other five innings.

Rogers was in great form and never in trouble. He struck out four of the previous hard-hitting Barons. Lowthian was twice the victim of Rogers' masterful hurling and whiffed out in succession.

The Crackers were held to eight well-scattered hits by Lowthian who served on the mound for the Dobbers. The first Cracker runs came in the fourth inning, following the big batting spree of the Barons. Al Niehaus hit for the circuit with Dumas standing on first and scored two counters for the Crackers.

Nitzke also clouted the ball for four bases, scoring Baird ahead of him to add two more runs to the visitors' collection.

Hass came next in the hitting column, getting a triple in the eighth inning to score Dumas for the Crackers' last run of the last game. Hitting on the part of the Crackers was nothing to rave about, for they failed to hit when the hits were needed.

Had they won Saturday they would have broken even for the season's work, or a little above the middle mark. They would have been just a few points above the .500 mark, with 76 games won and 75 lost.

The Cracker outfit did not seem to be able to get together and, as a result, they were completely at a loss. The Barons did not altogether outplay the Spillerites, but had the right punch at the right time and made it count for something besides a base knock.

Had Rogers started the game for the Niehoffians a different tale about the game would probably be told. Francis was the victim of a fierce batting attack which netted the Barons a flock of base knocks and four runs. Francis made a good start and pitched good ball for the first inning, holding the visitors to only one hit and no runs. But the rampage started in the next inning when one run was pushed over the platter.

During his stay in the box the Barons collected a total of nine hits and six runs off Francis' wing, one of these being the long home run to the negro stands by Nitzke and one a triple by Jourdan.

Haas and Dumas performed well in the outer gardens, handling some nice catches and preventing further damage to the Crackers' reputation. The whole Birmingham team played a great game on the field and never let anything get by.

A fast double play in the initial inning probably prevented the Barons from getting a flying start on the score board and on the Crackers

Southern League Honors to Taylor

Memphis, Tenn., September 18.—(AP)—Ten points lead over his nearest rival gave Tommy Taylor, Memphis outfielder, a cheerful prospect for the season's individual batting honors in the Southern association, according to figures released today, including games of last Thursday.

Taylor, with a percentage of .382, topped Harvey Hendrick, first baseman for the New Orleans champions-elect, who has wielded his club for a high average throughout the diamond year. But three points under Hendrick was Bigelow, Chattanooga gardener, with .369. Fourth place was held by Yaryan, Baron catcher, with a score of .366, while Carroll, another Lookout outfielder, came fifth with the acceptable total of .362.

Famous Trainer of Browns and Macks Dies

M. P. Lawler, 50 years old, nationally known trainer of athletes, died at his home in Lafayette, Ind., on September 4, after an illness of 14 weeks. He was athletic trainer at Purdue university at the time of his death. Prior to his college work, Lawler was trainer for big league ball teams. His first job was with the Athletics and he then served 13 years with the St. Louis Browns. His last baseball job was with the Boston Red Sox.

WORLD SERIES USUALLY PULLS BIG SURPRISE

We're right on top of another world series, and nobody knows just what to expect. That, however, is always the proper attitude, for even the oldest and most experienced baseball experts never know what to expect—with a single exception. That exception is this: If you always expect some surprising thing to happen, the chances are you will not be disappointed. World series usually work out that way.

From the time the Boston Red Sox came from behind and beat Pittsburgh four straight games in 1903 to the time when Pittsburgh, practically a dead cock in the pit, came to life and walloped Washington three straight in 1925, every series has had its surprise. No intelligent baseball fan ever dreamed that the Braves would put the binger on the famous Athletics four straight times in 1914, allowing the A's not a single victory, and nobody ever imagined that Art Nehf, pitching a winning game in 1923 would blow up and put the Yanks on their way to their only world championship. The baseball world thought the Athletics of 1910 had surely met their match in the tremendously successful Chicago Cubs, yet the Cubs took only one game in five; and when the Giants of 1921 failed to score a single run in the first 20 innings, nobody had any right to expect them to turn around and win five of the next six games. Yet that's what the Giants did.

Fans Hope for Best.

So, about the only thing a fan can do is to hope for the best and expect the worst. A world series is only a set of five, six or seven ball games, but you just never can tell how it's going to come out.

The series of 1926 will be the 23d engaged in by American and National league contenders. The American league has won out 13 times and the National 9. Total games played number 134, of which three were drawn. Of the 131 victories, American league clubs took 68 and National league clubs 63. Considering that the series has been contested for nearly 25 years a margin of five games in favor of the American league doesn't show any great surplus of merit either way. In other words, the leagues are pretty well balanced.

Apparently it doesn't make much difference to a team whether it is playing at home or abroad, since in the 131 contests the home team won 67 times and the visiting team won 64 times.

In the first 11 years the American league won six flags and lost five, and in the last 11 years the Americans won seven titles and lost four. But in the last seven years the National has copped four world flags. There's just no system about it; you can't ever tell.

Borotra Is Beaten By French Partner In Straight Sets

Forest Hills, September 18.—(AP)—Rene Lacoste, youthful French star, won the tennis championship of the United States today by defeating his countryman, Jean Borotra, in straight sets in the first all-foreign final in American history. The scores were 6-4, 6-0, 6-4.

Lacoste's victory was one-sided. Borotra battled gamely but he was outstroked from start to finish, except for brief flashes of volleying in the first and last sets.

The Basque's store of stamina seemed apparently had been exhausted by his gruelling fights to victory on the previous two days against "Little Bill" Johnston and Vincent Richards, two of the four American aces who passed out of the tourney at French hands.

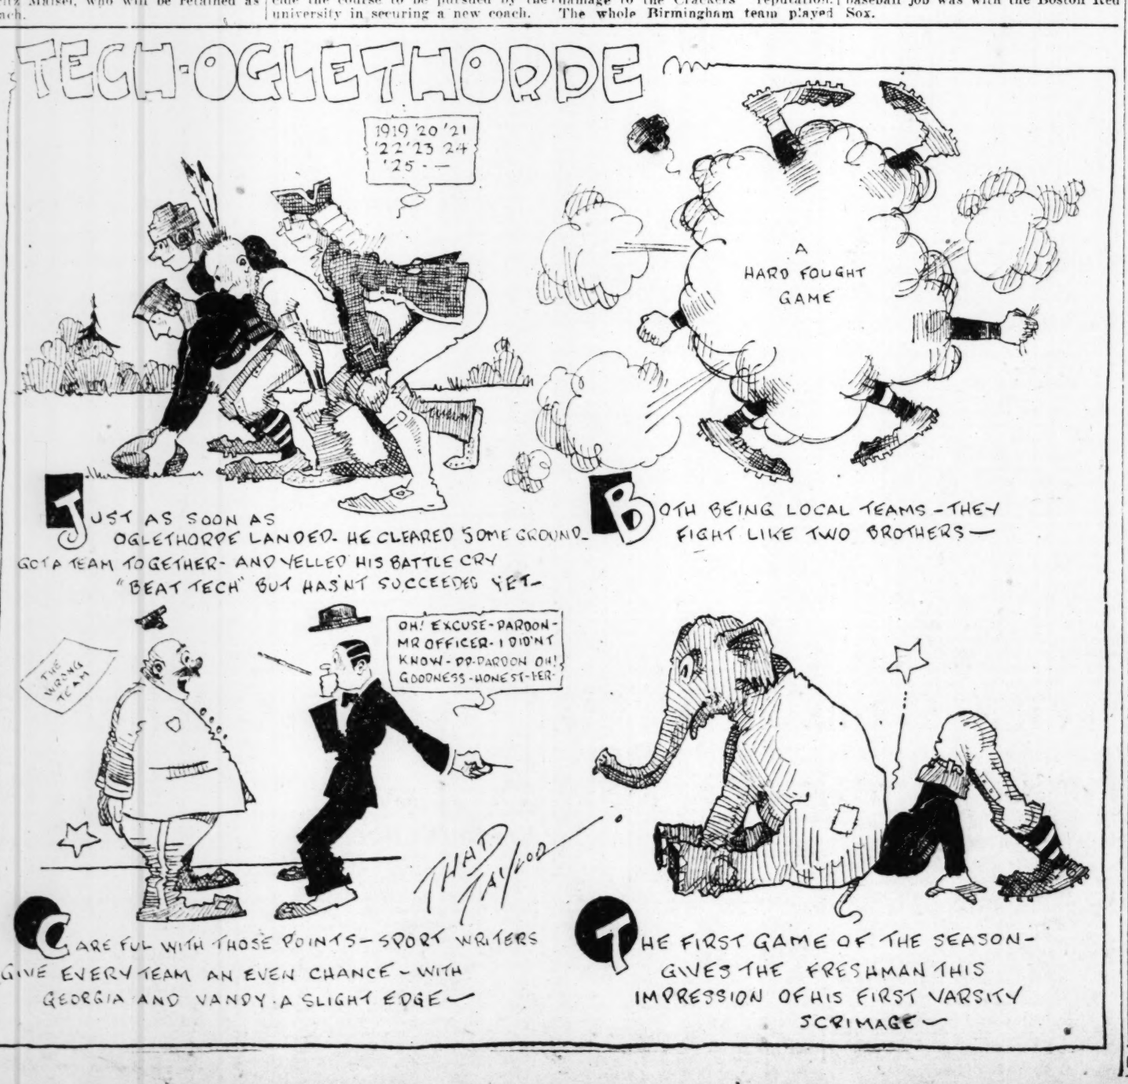

"Big Bill" Tilden, conquered by Henry Cochet, served as a linesman for today's match. The six-time former American champion was the first to congratulate his successor.

A crowd of 12,000 cheered the final act of the French sweep, which sends the American title overseas for the first time in 23 years.

Lacoste now holds two American titles, having won the national indoor crown last winter.

National Pro Elevens Open Season Today

The National Professional League of Football Clubs will start its season September 19, three games being scheduled. A total of 23 games are enrolled. The American league, with nine teams, will get under way September 26.

Pa Stribling Angered by Charges of Walk Miller

Threatens To Force Miller To Be Quiet If Talk Continued

War was officially declared Saturday by Pa Stribling and Walk Miller, rival box-fight managers, upon the former's return from Tampa, where young Willie Lawrence stopped Buck Aston in nine rounds Friday night.

"What's this I've been hearing?" Mr. Stribling queried, having gotten an inkling of the charges made against him by Walk Miller last week. Miller, manager of Chuck Burns, spared nothing in his written statement to the newspapers, accusing Pa of picking set-ups all over the country for his son to bowl over; of insisting upon a "family referee" for all his bouts; of great overrating and over-pressagenting, and of his offspring showing the white feather in his match with Paul Berlenbach in June.

"Mr. Miller is placing himself in a dangerous position," declared Pa. "I may suddenly decide to take matters into my own hands and square accounts outside the ring."

Pa was nettled; no doubt of that.

"Perhaps it is a good idea that I don't see Walk in my present mood," he flashed. "I might be carted away for disturbing the peace."

It is evident that there lies a strong possibility of Miller and Stribling coming to blows either before or during the battle Tuesday night in the auditorium which will involve their young understudies. Stribling and Burns, as the feature attraction of a Gate City A. C. card, a share of the proceeds of which will go to the disabled vets.

Stribling In City.

Mr. Stribling was in the city proper Saturday while Miller remains in the seclusion of his health retreat near Marietta, where he has been putting Burns through a rigid training process which included wood-chopping, swimming, plowing, rowing, bag-punching, wrestling and boxing with Tiger Flowers, Bob Lawson, Larry Avera and Spike Webb, to say nothing of various other capable young ringmen who have happened in from time to time.

Walk Saturday reported over telephone that his man is right; that he is fit for the battle of his life, and that Chuck will enter the ring Tuesday night in better shape than he was for Frankie Murphy here recently, when he hammered that worthy to an ignominious defeat in 10 rounds.

If Burns is all that well-conditioned, Stribling may have a lively time keeping the flying fists of the stocky Texan from disfiguring his classic features.

The latter showed that he is at least still capable of dealing out punishment when he stopped Buck Aston in his first actual contest since he was beaten by Berlenbach.

"W. L. Looked Good."

"W. L. looked awfully good," reported Mr. Stribling Saturday night. "I think he will take Burns but it should be a great battle."

Walk was as confident as ever that his boy will win.

All these expressions of confidence lend credence to the voiced opinion of local fans and critics that it will be one of the fiercest fights Atlanta has ever seen, and certainly the best in which Stribling has appeared here.

The public has shown its keen interest in the impending clash by buying up seats by the armfuls since they were placed on sale at Chess'.

Final shambattles of the two principals will be held today and Monday, very brief and to the point. The boxing commission will appoint a referee either Monday or Tuesday, then the stage will be set.

VON ELM DEFEATS ATLANTAN FOR TITLE

ed the punch and held on the lip of the cup. They halved in fours.

Putter Fails.

Von Elm was away on the short sixteenth though Bobby was fully 35 feet from the pin. He ran his putt up safely and then Bobby Jones made another effort to check the Californian. He studied the putt for many second and rolled it to within six inches of the hole, but it did not find the cup and the hole was halved in threes.

This left the match dormie two and Bobby was faced with the task of winning both the two remaining holes.

Throughout the day Bobby had been consistently outdriving his opponent, though only by a small margin. On this long seventeenth Bobby sent his tee shot fully 300 yards straight down the fairway, 50 yards beyond that of Von Elm. But his attack was useless. Both laid their third shots on the green, and Bobby, who was 20 feet from the pin, missed the putt by a few inches and the match was over.

The king is no longer king. Bobby Jones is no longer amateur champion of the United States, but he is still open champion of the world's two greatest nations and another year the hosts of amateurism will gather again—then let Mr. Von Elm, the game, tow-headed, youth from the Pacific, look to his laurels.

The morning round ended with Bobby one down to the Californian and there were no alibis from the ranks of the Jones boosters. George Von Elm, rated as the second best golfer in the United States, was simply the best amateur golfer for a period of 18 holes.

Von Elm Master.

He was putting better than Bobby and his second shots were more accurate. Bobby was finding trouble in making his mashie shots split the pin.

George needed but 34 putts on the 18 greens and Bobby took 35, having two three-putt greens in the round, while Von Elm had but one.

On the short 16th where he ended his match with Chick Evans, on Thursday, Bobby Jones made the most perfect tee shot of the tournament when he came within less than a foot of making a hole in one.

Bobby started by winning the first hole with a beautiful approach shot dead to the pin on his third which left him but one putt for a birdie four and a win. Von Elm was on the edge of the green with his third and took two putts.

Then Bob's mashie began to fail and on the second he was short of the green with his second and using a putter from the short rough on the edge failed to lay his third up for a putt. He took a five while George won the hole with a par four. Bobby's second putt laid a stymie and George sent a shiver through the crowd when he holed the putt with his mashie.

They halved the next two holes in par fours and threes respectively, both playing flawless golf.

Von Elm Holes 15-Footer.

Then Von Elm's super-putter came into play and he holed a 15-footer on the fifth green for a birdie three and a win. Bobby's long putt from the edge of the green rimmed the cup but would not fall.

This placed Von Elm one up but his putter momentarily lost its magic on the sixth and he took three putts to lose the hole when Bobby was down with his second for a four. George was in the rough at the right of the fairway with his tee shot and his second was just on the edge of the Green. He should have played a pitch and roll at which he is particularly adept, but he elected to use his putter and was short eight feet to take three putts. On this hole also Bobby laid a partial stymie.

This again squared them, but Bobby repeated his performance of yesterday and found the trap at the right of the green with his spoon shot while George was just on with his second, to go down in four while Bobby took a five. Bobby's putting stroke was not working. He nearly holed his first putt, after passing the pin 20 feet with his pitch from the trap, but the ball would not fall.

Von Elm was again in the rough on the eighth but his second was safely on and they halved the hole in par fours.

On the ninth Bobby had a piece of ill luck to contend with. Von Elm had hooked his tee shot to the left of the green in a trap and after Bobby had teed his ball, taken his stance and started his swing, the ball fell from the tee. This is disconcerting when a golfer is playing under the strain of championship golf and Bobby sent his shot to the trap on the right of the green.

George Up.

Neither was able to lay his pitch for a putt and both took fours on the par three-hole to turn the nine, the Californian one up. Bobby got a 37 on this nine and Von Elm a 36. Von Elm got a break on the 440 yard tenth, when his topped wood shot rolled to the green about 35 feet from the pin. Bobby was on with his iron second and both took two putts to get down and halve the hole, in par fours.

Bobby was in the edge of the rough with his tee shot on the eleventh, but played a safe mashie to the edge of the green and halved the hole with a par four. On this hole Bobby was shooting for a birdie, but he rimmed the cup.

The putter of the mighty Bobby failed him on the twelfth and he went down to his opponent when he took three putts from the edge of the green for a four, while Von Elm was down in par three. Bobby was just over the trap at the right of the green with his tee shot, and he used his putter to roll up short by 10 feet and missed the putt. This is the first time in the tournament that the champion has been two down, though Dick Jones had him one down on two occasions.

Just to prove that his putter had not deserted him entirely, Bobby holed his first putt on the thirteenth for a birdie three and a win. There was irony in the situation, because George was in trouble and took a five. Two putts would have won the hole for Bobby, but he sank the 20-footer just the same. This again placed Bobby only one down, but he played his tee shot on the fourteenth too far to the right and was forced to play his second over two bunkers.

Game Sportsman.

It faded to the right ad it found a bunker at the right of the green, from where he was 30 feet short on his explosion shot to take a five and lose the hole.

The fifteenth brought another break for Von Elm, when his second kicked away from the trap and was on the green when it looked like certain trouble. Both were down in fours to halve the hole.

The short sixteenth gave the immense gallery the super-thrill of the match when Bobby's tee shot looked like a hole in one, but it stopped less than one foot from the pin. Von Elm bared his fighting spirit when he laid his pitch shot within 3 inches of the cup from the edge of the right-hand trap, where his tee shot had lodged. Bobby was conceded his deuce to win when Von Elm's pitch failed to fall.

This left the Pacific coast star one up going to the long seventeenth. On this green Bobby Jones showed himself to be the great sportsman that he is. Both were on with their third shots and Bobby was dead with his first putt, but Von Elm was about 2 1-2 feet from the cup. The Californian took his stance to putt and a section of the gallery which could not see the play made a break for the next tee. Von Elm stooped in the middle of his putt, clearly annoyed by the noise. It was an entirely missable putt, as has been demonstrated more than once in this tournament, but Bobby waited a moment and then knocked his opponent's ball from the cup, conceding the putt and a half for the hole.

Both were in traps on the eighteenth with their second shots, and Von Elm was 30 feet over with his third, while Bobby was 15 feet short. Von Elm rolled up safely and Bobby's putt rimmed the cup. They both took fives to end the morning round, with Robert Tyre Jones one down in the finals of the 1926 amateur battle of the links.

BRAVES, CUBS SPLIT PAIR.

Boston, September 18.—Boston and Chicago divided honors in a double-header today. The Braves won the first game, 2 to 1, scoring the winning run in the ninth with two out on High's single to right. The second game was a Chicago victory, 6 to 0. Blake held the Braves to five hits, made three hits himself and fielded his position well. Manager Bancroft and Catcher Taylor, of the Boston team, were put of the first game for disputing a decision by Umpire McLaughlin at third base. Both made three double plays in the second game and claimed that their total of 173 to date set a new National league team record for double plays.

ROBINS DOWN PIRATES.

Brooklyn, September 18.—Dick Cox's triple in the fourth and Pittsburgh errors accounted for two Brooklyn runs and a 2-to-1 victory for the Robins today. It was their third straight win over the faltering world's champions.

Emil Yde was hit only four times but faulty defensive work on the Buccaneers lost the game. Paul Waner got three of Pittsburgh's six hits off McWeeny but it was Traynor's triple, augmented by a single by Grantham, which gave the Pirates their lonesome tally.

THREE TEAMS IN EAST HAVE NEW COACHES

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

When the leading university and college football squads take their first practice on Wednesday, men who have demonstrated their coaching ability on more than one occasion will be in charge of the preparation.

Captains who have stood the test of hard fought struggles will be among the candidates and in some cases the leaders will be compelled to play even better football than last year to retain their positions. A definite idea of the strength of the various elevens cannot be drawn until after the first games are played the latter part of the month and early in next.

With few exceptions, outstanding elevens will be developed by the same men who were in charge last year. Probably the most pronounced change in coaching staffs is at Harvard, where Arnold Horween, a former Crimson player, will be in charge. Horween was a great player and he has surrounded himself with splendid assistants, including Chuck Carney, the former Illinois end.

Jones New Army Coach.

Lieutenant L. M. Jones has succeeded Captain McEwan as head coach at the Army, while Bill Ingram, who coached at Indiana last year, will have the same position at the Naval academy. Captain McEwan resigned from the Army to accept the position of head coach at the University of Oregon. At the other large eastern schools Tad Jones again will coach at Yale, Bill Roper at Princeton, Jesse Hawley at Dartmouth, Gil Dobie at Cornell, and Lou Young at Pennsylvania.

In the middle west only one important change has been made in the coaching staffs. H. O. (Pat) Page, the former Chicago athlete who has been connected with Butler university of Indianapolis, will be head football coach at Indiana. Pat Succeeds Ingram.

F. C. Cappon, one of the greatest plunging backs in the history of Michigan football, will be head of the football department at the University of Kansas. Cappon takes the place of Potsy Clark, a former Illinois athlete who now is connected with the University of Minnesota.

On the coast most of the head coaches of last year again will be in charge. These include Howard Jones at Southern California, Pop Warner at Stanford, Bagshaw at Washington and Schissler at Oregon Aggies. Clarence Price takes the place of Andy Smith at California. Smith died shortly after the close of the last season.

Walker at New Orleans.

In the south Fred Walker, a former Chicago athlete, has been appointed director of athletics and football coach at Loyola University of New Orleans. Walker has had plenty of coaching experience and should make a valuable man for the southern school. At the other universities and colleges the teams will be developed by coaches with experience.

A number of the teams will engage in their opening struggles on September 25, but the season will not open officially until October 2 when every eleven of note will go into action. From this time until the playing of the Army-Navy game in Chicago on November 27, football will hold the attention of the sports world.

In the western conference, a peculiar situation has developed. Big Ten rules call for each eleven to meet at least four others of the association each year. Some of the teams were unable to arrange the required four conference games and this resulted in the slating of home and home struggles between four teams. Michigan and Minnesota will meet twice and the same is true of Northwestern and Indiana.

As the coaches know the ability of their material, no time will be lost in starting the preparation. The forward passers and kickers will be given instruction and the same is true of the linemen, who will receive lessons in blocking and charging. On each succeeding day the work will become harder and more intensive so that more complex formations can be learned as the big games near.

WOMEN STARS IN SPORTS

BY MARY K. BROWNE.

We have had in the past more consistency in tennis than in golf, but tennis this year seems to point to strange happenings. Perhaps it will become as difficult to win two tennis tournaments in succession as it has always been in golf.

Among the women tennis players, there were a number of reversals in the four tournaments prior to and including the national. At East Hampton I defeated Mrs. Mallory, but lost to Miss Wills. Then at Seabright Miss Ryan defeated both Mrs. Mallory and Miss Wills, while at Westchester Biltmore, Mrs. Mallory defeated Miss Wills and got even with me in the finals.

In our national tournament, Miss Ryan defeated me and then lost to Mrs. Mallory.

If the championship was to be decided on the winnings of these four tournaments it would mean that Miss Ryan and Mrs. Mallory would have a win each, just as Mrs. Mallory and I would be even up. But the national tournament went to Mrs. Mallory and she richly deserved it, for her win from Miss Ryan, whom until this match she had never defeated, will live long in the memory of the tennis fans as one of the greatest uphill fights in tennis.

Among the men's tennis reversals, the end of last season and the beginning of this, we had Johnston defeating Richards, Tilden defeating Johnston, and to complicate matters, Richards turns around and defeats Tilden. This season abroad we find Cochet defeating Borotra in France, and just a week later Borotra reversing the defeat by winning from Cochet in England.

What really makes tennis history is the player who can put his best foot forward in the title tournament. It has been said of golf that there are so many competitors of equal ability that the champion is the player who the week of the national is lucky enough to reach top form.

The future will find, I believe, more reverses in tennis than in golf for the tennis players are improving their tactics with the object of upsetting their opponents' game, a weapon which cannot be used in golf.

INDIANS DEFEAT YANKS.

Cleveland, September 18.—Before 27,000 fans, the Cleveland Indians took the fifth and crucial game of the series with the Yankees here today, 3 to 1, and rose within two games and a half of the league leaders. They play their final game tomorrow.

The Indians scored in the first on Spurgeon's single, Speaker's roller to Gehrig which the latter threw into left field, trying to double Spurgeon at second and Burns' single. Spurgeon's second single, Speaker's double and Dugan's error of Burns' bounder in the third gave them another.

RockneLooksatWorld Through RoseGlasses

Twenty-six letter men are available for Knute Rockne's Notre Dame football team, which will travel from coast to coast. Only four players from last year's squad have been lost by graduation and with the new material coming up from last season's freshman squad and reserve forces bidding for team places, the prospects are bright. The missing veterans are Clem Crowe, Rex Enright, Dick Hanouseck, and John McMullen.

Prepared for Future.

When asked last year if he would hurry the training of his men for the Army game, Rockne replied that he was building for the future and that the process would not be speeded up a bit. Instead he has gone about building an eleven similar to that which won the national championship in 1924, and the close of last year's grid season showed that his charges had progressed quite a bit on that road. So this year "Rock" will at least have an experienced team.

What Notre Dame needs is a good punter and a fullback. The first may be answered in Niemice of last year's freshmen, who showed promise along that line in spring workouts. Niemice is the nearest thing to a triple threat that Rockne has.

At fullback another freshman, Jack McGrath, is expected to show something. Elmer Wynne, brother of the famous "Chet," is another likely bidder for this post. The remainder of the backfield will probably be composed of Captain Gene Edwards, quarter; Captain Tom Heardon and Christie Flannagan at halves.

Here Are Letter Men.

The returning monogram men are Captains Hearden and Edwards; ends Voodisch and Wallace and Walsh guards, John and Richard Smith, Mayer, and Marelli; center, Bud Boeringer; half, O'Boyle, Roach and Flannagan.

Of last year's reserve squad the following are expected out. Ends, Collins and Moore; tackles, Doarn and Hogan; guards, Leppig and Crowley centers, McCarthy and Doyle; quarterbacks, Riley and McNally; halfbacks, Chevigney and Hurley; full, Collins and McCabe.

From the freshmen: Collerick, Carberry, Duperior, Miller, Ramsavage Locke, Law, Monohan, Nash, Plummer, Brady, Niemice, Railly and McGrath. From last year's inter-hall circuit: Snell, Viada, Hugger, Burte, Russell, Hogan, McKinney, Gebert, Montroy, Elder, Murphy, Wanek and Waterston.

Third Member of Notre Dame's Famous 4 Horsemen Gets Chrysler '70' Roadster

When the Harry Sommers, Inc., local Chrysler distributors delivered Don Miller his Chrysler "70" Sport Roadster the past week, they delivered the third "70" roadster to a member of Notre Dame's famous "four horsemen," Struldhour and Layden having received theirs recently from the dealer in their locality.

27 CANDLER COLTS ARRIVE FOR BIG RACES

Twenty-seven race horses of the famous Walter Candler Lullwater stables are enroute to Atlanta from race tracks in all parts of the country and will be here in time for the horse races at the Southeastern fair, October 5 to 8, it was announced Saturday night by Oscar Mills, vice president and general manager of the fair.

Mr. Candler himself, at home on business while his expert horsemen are in charge of his speed kings and queens on northern and eastern tracks, confirmed Mr. Mills' announcement. He declined to announce the names of the horses he is bringing here.

"We may not announce the names of any of the horses until after entries close September 28," Mr. Candler said. "I will go far enough to tell you, however, that if there are any better horses in the Lullwater stables than these 27, that fact is yet to be proven on the track."

The first carload of horses is to arrive in Atlanta sometime Monday. They will be taken directly to Lakewood amusement park to quarters prepared for them in the Southeastern fair stables and will be kept there for daily workouts over the Lakewood track until the fair race meeting opens two weeks from Monday.

A second carload will arrive from one of the eastern tracks later this week, and a third carload will come directly from the grand circuit meeting at Detroit the following week.

Among other horsemen who either have shipped horses to Lakewood already for the fair races or have definitely announced their intention of coming are George Stiles, of Rome, driver of a number of grand circuit winners, T. D. Murph, of Spartanburg, J. H. Armstrong, of Woodville, I. P. Russell, of Stevenson, Ala., Penny Brothers, of Greensboro, N. C., W. H. Bushelman, of Barnard, Ohio; Harry B. Gray, of Toledo, Ohio, and others.

Modern Fighters Live TooHigh,SaysVeteran

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

"I have an old barn down on my place in New Jersey," said Jimmy DeForest, "and every now and then I go out and look at it and think of the difference btween fighters of today and fighters of 25 years ago. Jim Jeffries used to train in that old barn and some of the other big fellows of the good old days when fighters didn't get so much money.

"I have an old shower bath that Jeffries used. You take a world's champion in training quarters these days and he must have a nickel-plated shower with hot and cold water. Jeff's shower bath was a hogshead with holes bored in the bottom. They used to throw buckets of cold water into it, and Jeff would stand underneath and take his shower. Why, I've given some of the old-time champions a shower by turning the hose on them No luxury in those days. Fighters used to eat a lot of plain food. Today they want to live in the best hotels and eat the highest-priced meals.

"I'd think a lot more of Jack Dempsey's chance to go on being a great heavyweight if Jack didn't wear uch good clothes. He is very particular about wearing fine clothes—has been ever since he won the championship I think wearing fine clothes softens a man—a mental result. He wants to live up to the clothes, keep them clean and nicely pressed, and he loses the crude roughness that makes a real fighter. He becomes too delicate. Dempsey may be pretty good, but he'll never be the rough boy who beat Willard down—never again. When he beat Willard he hadn't gone far past the overall and the dinner bucket stage, and he wasn't a bit refined—not a bit.

Does More Harm Than Good.

"Another thing I don't care about particularly—and I see it in Dempsey's camp—is wearing a mask while boxing. Dempsey wears a mask to save his eyes and ears, and has his sparring partners wear them to make it an even break. Wearing a mask is saving his ears and eyebrows, and he gets careless about ducking punches. He expects the mask to break the force of them. Then he gets into the real fight, and for a moment he forgets that he hasn't a mask on, and he doesn't move his head out of the way of a punch. A fellow who never wears a mask is careful not to stay in the way of any blow he sees coming—or if he can't dodge he tries to catch it where it won't do any harm. Anyway, the mask isn't a protection even in training. A boxer can get more cauliflower ears and cut eyebrows with a mask on than without a mask.

"Too much luxury," went on DeForest, "spoils more fighters than used to be spoiled by too much liquor. Sugar, sweet desserts, rich meats, long meals with everything mixed up. It's no wonder most of the champions go to pot in a year or two, where the old-timers used to fight 15 or 20 years and still be as good as ever. That and soft beds, fine clothes, automobiles to ride in every time they go around the block. On the level, sometimes I wonder what the average American will be like 20 years from now. Except for the bunch that alwqays goes in for outdoor sports, I figure the future is going to develop a lot of undersized, bandy-legged, soft-handed freaks, about five feet tall and wearing 12-inch collars. Long before that, Europe, where they haven't so much luxury, is going to send over a bunch of boxers who will run our heavyweights off the map. You mark my words."

Fuchs Refuses To Let Braves Get Away

Rumors that the Boston Braves would be sold, were spiked by President Emil E. Fuchs last week, when he announced that he had purchased the 33 per cent of the stock held by Albert H. Powell, vice president and treasurer of the club. The deal gave Fuchs complete control of the club, which he figures to be worth $1,000,000. Powell will continue to hold office until the end of the year, when he will retire to give his attention to other business.

HEADS SECRET IN RUMORED THIRD LEAGUE

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Sunday baseball in Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, for which the major league magnates now are hoping, even working, may turn around and smite the same fellows between the eyes.

Of late there have been rumors of a third major league for next year. The report has sprung up in various spots but as yet nobody has been identified with the movement and the holders of American and National league franchises refuse to be annoyed.

But it might be well to take warning. The Federal league became a menace before it was bought out by big league money and it might have been choked off at the start if attention had been given the movement. There is no real reason why another venture cannot be launched and the field certainly will be thrown open to inducements if such centers at Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Boston escape the Sabbath blue laws.

Pittsburgh Plans New Team.

The present big league bosses may feel secure in their position by pointing out the obstacles in the path of promoting a third league, but it is not revealing a secret to say that a Pittsburgh syndicate has been tentatively formed with the idea of bringing another team into that center of population. The claim is made that a park site and ample funds are available.

Given Sunday baseball there isn't any doubt that Pittsburgh could and would support a second team. Philadelphia with the same Sabbath leeway might prove fertile because of the unpopularity of one of its two present occupants. For the same reason Boston capital might be induced to enter. In the west Detroit is sufficiently large and prosperous for another team but beyond these four cities the promoters might have to do some deep thinking.

Of course, the old problem of players would be presented, but it was overcome to an amazing extent in the expansion of the American league and in the Federal raids. Any number of present major athletes would jump if they saw the color of the coin but it would be difficult to get enough to supply eight teams.

Players Are Interested.

Practically every squad in the present majors boasts of at least a couple second raters because the supply of good ones is limited and if the talent was spread over three circuits it would mean a lowering of the standard of play. This happened when the Feds got going in earnest.

Since the rumors of the new league became current the players in the majors have dispayed marked interest. Newspaper men have been asked to tell what they know about it. Naturally, they know nothing as yet. But the fact that the players are asking questions shows that they see a possible chance of a period of inflated salaries and salary is a matter of grave concern to professional athletes just as it is to everybody else not possessed of an independent income.

Amateur League

Fox Manufacturing Company lost to the Pep Class at Fort McPherson Saturday afternoon, 11 to 6. This was one of the semi-final games of the city amateur championship series, and by winning it the Peps get to enter the finals wih Georgia Railway & Power company team next week. The Peps won the pennant in the Perrin Sunday School league last year and the Fox team is champion of the Atlanta league.

The Peps and Foxes showed the most cordial spirit in their rivalry Saturday, the rooting was intense but always clean. The Pep supporters turned out in great numbers and kept the air full of their songs and yells all through the game. After the game the Fox company entertained their team at a banquet at a popular downtown cafe, and they had the entire Pep team for their guests.

Peps Score First.

The Peps scored first in the second inning, but in the third the Foxes tied it up and in the fourth they went ahead three runs. Howell, Perkins and Sappenfield all helped the runners around the bases with their bingles. Lewis was pitching up to this point, but here he was relieved by Heil, who was also nipped for a couple.

The Pep rally came in the fifth inning when the whole batting list had a chance at the willow, and Allen two chances. Allen led off with a single and Norwood and four others followed suit. All told, there were six hits and a couple of free passes in this inning, and Giles was removed before it was over and Smith took his place.

Smith hit a nice homer in the seventh that traveled low and far. He passed third just as the fielder picked it up and made home by a big margin.

The Pep team played tight ball in the field, getting through the game without an error, while the losers made five.

Georgia Railway and Power company won from Citizens and Southern at Almand park Saturday afternoon, 11 to 1. This makes the power team one of the finalists in the game for the championship of Atlanta next Saturday. It is not certain yet whether the final game will be played at Spillers or Almand park. Citizens and Southern won the championship of the Spalding league this year, and the Power Company won in the City league.

Fittery pitched a good game for the winners, retiring 11 men and allowing only four hits. The Bankers seemed unable to hit the offerings of the left-hander, while the Power men hit Wilkie to all parts of the field. Bankston won the last two games the Bankers played against the Steel plant, but for some reason he was not chosen to lead the attack Saturday. He took up the reigns in the sixth after Wilkie had been touched for six hits and two walks in the fifth, and held the Power Co. scoreless and hitless for the rest of the game.

Heavy Hitting.

Marion, Fittery and Dowda were the important cogs in winning the game from the batting point of view, but they all played well in the field. Bankston scored the only run made by the losers the first time he came to bat, which was in the seventh inning. He beat out a slow roller to third. Rogers singled to center and then Walker walked, filling the bases. London muffed Dowda's throw to third and Bankston came home.

The fifth inning in which the heavy scoring was done for the Power company went as follows: Englett singled to third, London was hit by a pitched ball, and Dowda knocked a double to left, bringing Hicks in. Marion then doubled to left, scoring London and Dowda. Thurmond filed to Sims and Marion took third after the catch. Kirk popped to M. Stephenson. Snipes singled through the pitcher and Marion scored. Fittery singled to left field. Englett was hit by a pitched ball, filling the bases. Hicks singled over third, scoring Snipes and Fittery, and London filed to Sims.

Illini Squad Draws From Eleven States

Ten other states other than Illinois will be represented on the 1926 University of Illinois varsity squad this year, as follows: Indina, 3; Michigan, 2; Missouri, 2; Ohio, Minnesota, California, Oklahoma, Montana, Idaho and Rhode Island one each.

Marines To Stage Snake Dance Here If Gene Triumphs

Gene Tunney, the fighting marine, will have the support of more than 200 of his ex-buddies in Atlanta and vicinity when he goes into action again Jack Dempsey at Philadelphia on the night of September 23. While the fight is in progress, the Marcus W. Beck, Jr., detachment of the Marine Corps league will meet at the recruiting office at 59 South Forsyth street and receive the returns of the fight direct from the ringside at Philadelphia.

Many of the members of the local detachment were buddies of Tunney, having been with him at Paris Island and later in France. Captain J. M. Swinnerton, commandant of the detachment, states that in the event of a victory on the part of Gene the detachment plans a snake dance through the principal streets of Atlanta so that people could see just what happens when the marines land.

Maxwell Has Good Definition of Amateur

The late Tiny Maxwell, who earned enough football letters with various varsities to spell out the Gettysburg address before he settled down to become a sports editor and a cherished landmark in Philadelphia, used to remark that an amateur was a guy who wouldn't take a chance.

Three Ex-Pana High Stars Are Now Illini

Pana, Ill., will send three former high-school stars to the 1926 University of Illinois football team. They are A. J. Nowack, 196-pound tackle; W. B. Nichols, guard, and E. W. Brown, end. Nowack is the outstanding sophomore candidate for tackle.

Zuppke Has Veteran Wingmen at Illinois

Robert C. Zuppke, football coach at the University of Illinois, will have a couple of veteran ends this fall in Captain "Chuck" Kassel, of Melrose Park, and "Art" D'Ambrosio, Chicago, wingmen from the 1925 team. Kassell, all conference end last year, will play his third season of football.

OVERLAND IN STRONG BID FOR SECOND PLACE

Speculative interests inside the motor car industry, commenting on the price reductions made by Willys-Overland last week on both the Overland six and the new Whippet, agree that it presages a move on the part of the Toledo manufacturer to step into second place among the four leading automobile builders in this country, excluding Ford in this consideration.

At the present time the bid is between Willys-Overland, Hudson-Essex, Dodge Brothers, and General Motors, with no great difference separating the first three.

The Toledo company is in an exceptionally good position to make a strong bid for this important place. Production ranked fourth for 1925, excluding Ford. The capital structure of the Willys-Overland organization ranked second excluding Ford and General Motors and the Toledo company held the same position as it related to working capital. The plant investment is low which is an important advantage at the start of a strenuous sales campaign. Earnings for the first half of this year have been satisfactory despite the fact that within the past eighteen months the organization has put four entirely new models on the market. The entire development costs for the two new models introduced in 1925 were written off in that year.

All of the four new models have met with a highly satisfactory reception and the monthly sales volumes have held up in a strong manner so that any move which might be made at the present time would be based on a strong foundation.

The sales record of the Whippet, the European type light car which was introduced in June of this year, has broken all previous sales achievements for new model in its first few months, and the position occupied in the light car field by this automobile is exceptionally strong.

The Overland six stepped into second place among all light sixes in its first year of production and is holding its position in a strong manner this year.

Dealer representation throughout the country has been materially strengthened during the past several months largely because of the complete scope of the Willys-Overland line which now covers better than 90 per cent of the entire price range in the industry.

It has been known for some time that Willys-Overland have been making rapid advances in the equipment of new plants to take care of a materially enlarged output and that the present equipment is the most modern that engineering design can afford.

The success of the Willys-Knight model "70" which was introduced in January of this year has been one of the outstanding features of the automobile year, and this car, coupled with the Willys-Knight great six, is furnishing a strong entry in the quality car field.

With this strong line, plus the manufacturing and financial strength of the organization, Willys-Overland can be looked upon at the present time as being in a position to force the issue toward any goal to which it may be aiming.

Values such as those which are being offered in the new prices just established by Willys-Overland should be a strong force at the present time.

PUSH COMPLETION OF PONTIA'S NEW PLANT

A bulletin from the Oakland Motor Car company states that work on the new $7,600,000 Pontiac Six factory is slightly ahead of schedule and that according to all indications production capacity of 1,000 cars daily will be available at the beginning of next year.

More than one-half of the entire foundation for the 30 acres of floor space that will comprise this mammoth new plant has already been laid and by the end of the month the entire foundation will be in. Excavation has been practically completed.

The scene of the construction resembles the building of one of the mammoth, far-flung cantonments that came to be such a common sight during the late war. The foundation for the assembly plant alone extends a quarter of a mile into the distance—built upon a nine-acre-of-floor-space basement.

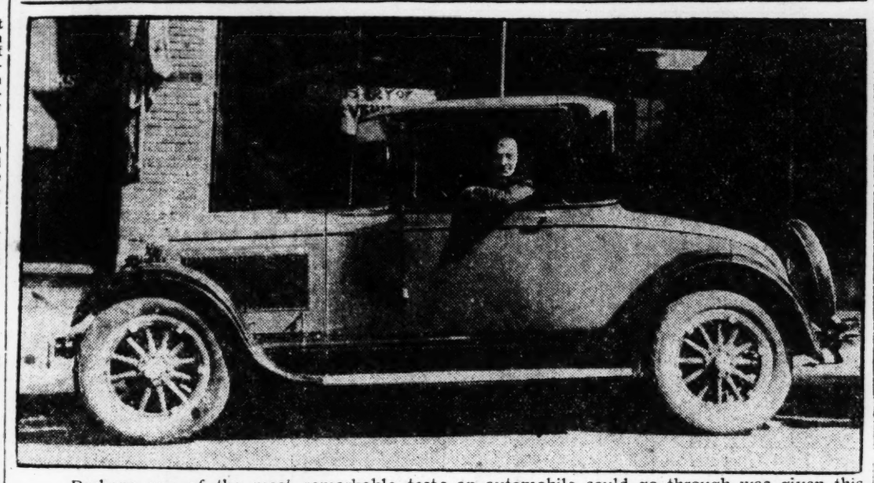

While 1,000 men are now engaged in the construction of this new factory—the maximum that can be profitably employed—this force will be recruited up to 2,000 men before the end of October. Every type of dirt removing machine known in construction is being employed. A 78-inch storm drain, large enough for the needs of a small city, is being installed to take care of the rain that will fall upon more than 1,000,000 square feet of roof, and for other needs of the factory. Already two car tracks have been built into the factory to help in construction, but when the factory has been completed there will be nine miles of trackage under roof to bring in raw material and carry out the finished product.

That there is need for this new factory may be gleaned from the fact that more than 18,000 Pontiac and Oakland Sixes were built during August and that during this month the 100,000th car was turned out for 1926.

To build this number of cars has required the largest working force in Oakland's history. In fact, the present force is more than twice as large as ever previously employed.

The total at the present time is more than 6,500. Early in February the force was slightly more than 2,500 but practically 500 men were put on each month since until at the present time peak facilities of the present factories have been reached. The biggest jump in employment was from May to August, though since that time approximately 1000 persons have been added each week.

Remarkable Run Made by Fred Raymond, Jr., in His Hupp Six Coupe

Perhaps one of the most remarkable tests an automobile could go through was given this Hupmobile Six coupe, sold to Fred Raymond, Jr., local stage favorite by the Thompson-Cauthorn Motor company, local Hupmobile distributors. At the end of Atlanta's summer season Mr. Raymond started on a trip through the New England states, and according to his report to Mr. Cauthorn, so far has covered 1,378 miles and has consumed only 79 gallons of gasoline for an average of 17 1-2 miles per gallon. Mr. Raymond states that even after his long trip he was not the least bit fatigued and attributes this to the smoothness of the Hupmobile motor. The above photo was made in Lowell, Mass., upon Mr. Raymond's arrival there.

J. J. BROWN HITS HIS 'BETRAYERS'

To those who "conscientiously" voted against him in his recent race for reelection for commissioner of agriculture, in which he was defeated by Eugene Talmadge, of McRae, J. J. Brown declared Saturday he bore no ill feeling.

"But to those whom I had trusted and who brutally betrayed me, I will say that I hope God will have mercy on their souls," Commissioner Brown said.

In his statement he reviewed his record, thanked his friends for their support and expressed hope that the work of cooperative marketing will continue under his successor.

Commissioner Brown's statement follows:

"To the people of Georgia: As the smoke of battle clears away and complete returns from the recent primary have been compiled, I take this opportunity to thank the people of Georgia for the support and confidence that have shown me by electing me as commissioner of agriculture for a period of ten years.

"During this period our country went through the trying ordeal of the world war, and there is no one in our state or nation who kept up with events during the trying period in which we were involved in war, who does not know that the farmers of Georgia and the nation brought up the last great line of defense in winning this great conflict for our nation and our allies. After the victory came the reconstruction and the deflation that cost the American farmer more than anything that has happened since the founding of the American government. Agriculture is still struggling, not only in our own state, but throughout the country in a determined effort to overcome the losses caused by deflation and to rebuild our farms. The small part that I contributed during these years as commissioner of agriculture of the great state of Georgia is a matter of record. Amid all these duties devolving upon me, being human, I made my mistakes, but at all times I tried to do the right as God gave me to see the right, ever mindful of the fact that he who guides the plow feeds and clothes the world. And to those who till the soil I was ever anxious to see that justice was done to the end that agriculture, the bedrock of our nation's prosperity, might receive its just proportion of the wealth it produces. To this end, we inaugurated within the department of agriculture in our first administration a system looking towards a better and more profitable distribution of farm products along the lines of a state bureau of markets and a general system of cooperative marketing.

"In retiring from the department of agriculture at the expiration of my present term, I do so without ill-will towards any one and with the profound hope that the work of cooperative marketing will continue until all farm products will be sold at a price of cost plus a reasonable profit to the toiling millions who produce them. To those who honestly and conscientiously voted against me in the recent primary I have no ill feeling, but to those whom I trusted and who brutally betrayed me, I will only say that I hope that God will have mercy upon their souls. To the thousands of those loyal, true and tried friends who fought gallantly to the last ditch, I owe a debt of gratitude that is eternal and everlasting. I shall cherish as one of the fond memories of my life their unprecedented loyalty and hope to live long that I may show my gratitude. In retiring from the department of agriculture I shall not lessen my interest in the welfare of agriculture. Many misunderstandings had full sway in the recent campaign; many truths were crushed to earth—temporarily, but truth crushed will rise again. To the thousands of friends who have written me letters since the primary, I take this opportunity of thanking one and all for the kind expressions contained in their letters and to say that it will be a physical impossibility to answer all of these letters promptly.

"With bitterness toward none and with best wishes for the advancement of every industry of our state, I am respectfully

"J. J. BROWN."

MAN FOUND DEAD IN POLICE CELL WITH THROAT CUT

C. J. Scott, 41, of Austell, was found dead Saturday afternoon in a cell at the police station, his throat having been cut with a safety razor blade, according to police reports.

The body was found upon the cell floor at 1:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon by turnkeys who at once notified Station Lieutenant T. D. Shaw. Investigation revealed that Scott had two razor blades in his cell.

Scott was brought into the station house at 3 o'clock Saturday morning by Lieutenant Charles Allen, and was listed as a "sleeper" while officers investigated his condition, which police said was that of an apparently demented person.

Scott is survived by one brother, D. V. Scott. The body is at the funeral home of Harry G. Poole, awaiting arrangements. The funeral and interment will be in Austell.

NEW EQUIPMENT TO BE PURCHASED BY G. & F. SYSTEM

James A. Perry, chairman of the state public service commission, expressed much gratification Saturday over the action of the interstate commerce commission in approving a plan under which the Georgia and Florida railroad will buy $750,000 of new equipment.

The commission gave the road authority to issue equipment trust certificates for the new cars and locomotives to be purchased.

This road has been in the hands of receivers for five years, with John Skelton Williams as receiver, and its recovery in this period has been remarkable, Mr. Perry said. It has grown to be an important artery of commerce through Georgia running north and south from Augusta to Madison, Fla.

He is honorary president of the Christian World Brotherhood, with headquarters in London.

A committee to secure a home for Bishop Beauchamp here is meeting with success in its endeavors and it is probable he and his family will be citizens of Atlanta by October 1, it is said.

During his visit the bishop will be the house guest of Rev. and Mrs. L. M. Twiggs, at the parsonage of St. John's Methodist church on East Georgia avenue. For a part of the time he also will be entertained in the home of the Rev. and Mrs. L. Wilkie Collins, of St. Paul's church. Cadillac Business Principles Protect the Used Car Buyer

With the Cadillac dealer, the used car is neither a "problem" nor an "evil". It is a business, conducted according to sound business principles having to do with the reliability and the value of the merchandise.

Many dealers regard the used car as an "evil", because they lose sight of used car values in desperate efforts to make new car sales.

The tendency in every such case, is, of course, to ask the used car prospect to pay back to the dealer the unjustified high price for the used car, which the dealer has allowed the man who traded it in.

The universal recognition of Cadillac as not only the finest of fine cars, but also the greatest value in the fine car field, enables the Cadillac dealer to allow for a used car a price that is fair—and to sell it at a price that is equally fair.

When you buy from a Cadillac dealer, you know that these sound business principles are operating in your favor.

DODGE BROTHERS MOTOR CARS

A NEW SPARK PLUG COMPANY FOR ATLANTA

Believing in the future growth of the south and likewise believing in Atlanta as the logical place from which to distribute a manufactured product, the C-R Spark Plug company, incorporated, have recenly completed and moved into their factory building and offices at 555-557 Marietta street. The latest and most modern machinery and equipment has been installed and one unique feature of the machinery is that each unit has an individual electric motor, this eliminates all unsightly and dangerous overhead shafting and belting and will prove a most economical feature in the future.

They manufacture a very exceptional spark plug which is fully protected by United States letters patent, this patent being the invention of Carl Rentz, an Atlantan by birth, who has had nearly 20 years of practical experience in the spark plug game and who has been granted many patents on spark plugs in the past, all of which he has sold to other companies.

When he devised his present spark plug, which is simple in construction and which can be manufactured and marketed at an economical price, he decided to market this plug himself and in seeking a name for it decided that his own initials would be very adaptable and therefore named his new spark plug the C-R plug. He subsequently organized and incorporated a company under the name of C-R Spark Plug company, for the manufacturing, marketing and distribution of the plugs.

The C-R Spark plugs embody a patented jump-gas feature placed in a simple manner underneath the cap on the plugs, which feature does not detract from the appearance of the plug in any way and which jump-gap feature increases the voltage at the firing points of the plugs by around 40 per cent, which means a quicker starting motor and likewise means an immediate noticeable increased amount of pep and power in a motor. The C-R spark plugs will prove themselves a boon to an old worn motor which happens to be pumping surplus oil, and the C-R spark plugs burn this oil and practically eliminate fouled out spark plugs.

The company reports most gartifying results with the C-R spark plugs in every territory they have visited and report the whole-hearted support and cooperation for their product on the part of the southern dealers and garagemen.

A substantial company has been organized to conduct the business and a wonderful future is predicted for it since it manufactures a very superior spark plug, which as every one knows is an absolute necessity to perfect combustion in motor vehicles. Figures compiled show nearly 300,000 licensed motor vehicles in the state of Georgia so far this year and since spark plugs are used in many other types of combustion motors which do not come under the registration laws, the number of combustion motors are beyond comprehension in Georgia alone and of course Georgia is but one of the 48 states in the union.

Carl Rentz, president of the company, possesses an unusual sales ability and is well liked by every one with whom he comes in contact, he will be in charge of the sales and distribution of the company.

L. F. Phillips, vice president and treasurer of the company, will be in charge of the office and factory and is well experienced in manufacturing lines. Mr. Phillips adopted Atlanta as his home nearly 20 years ago, during which time he has been successful and made a host of friends both in the business and fraternal world, he being at the present the president of Yaarab temple "million dollar" Shrine band, which stands out as a paramount musical organization on the entire continent of North America.

HISTORY OF OLDSMOBILE COMPANY PUBLISHED

Wooden saw horses formed the first "production line" of the automobile maker who introduced quantity production into the industry and changed the automobile from a rich man's toy to a commercial reality. Oldsmobile is credited by Mark Sullivan in the first volume of his historical book, "Our Times," with being the car which pioneered these vital achievements which have made possible the great growth of the industry.

Mr. Sullivan's book, which has just been published and is one of the "best sellers," is a real human-interest account of the march of important events of the present century. In it Mr. Sullivan says:

"In 1900 the Olds Motor Works erected in Detroit what was then the largest automobile factory in the country." (Oldsmobile also had a plant in Lansing, at which all activities have been centered since 1902 after a disastrous fire in the Detroit factory.) "They concentrated their entire equipment and abilities on a single model—and that was a fundamental step in developing the theory and practice of quantity production. For the first time in automobile history, parts were ordered in thousand lots; 2,000 sets of transmission gears from Dodge Brothers; 2,000 motors from Leland & Faulkner.

"They sold the car first for $600; then for $650. The first year they made 400 machines; the second 1,600; the third, 4,000. The capitalization of the firm was $350,000, but $200,000 was all the cash that ever went into the company. The first two years they paid out 105 per cent in cash dividends. That was the indisputable demonstration that the automobile could be more than a rich man's toy. This event, in 1900, was the birth of the automobile as a commercial reality."

There are men still employed at the Olds Motor Works who recall when quantity production methods were first introduced, and when these large orders were given which assisted the two Dodge Brothers and Henry M. Leland to later enter the field as automobile manufacturers. These veteran Oldsmobile employees have witnessed the development of quantity production from the first crude methods to the present rapid but highly accurate system.

Fred Sanders, who has been with the company more than a score of years, recalls when two wooden horses formed the production line. On these horses a crew of men assembled each automobile, each man having no specific duties but when finished with one operation, took up the next job that came to hand. Today each man on the Oldsmobile assembly line has but one operation to perform, doing his work as the chassis or unit being completed is slowly passing him on a moving conveyor.

In those days 36 cars a day was a record production and 36 cars a day was doing well, when it is considered as typical of this early "quantity production" system, that all bolts, nuts and washers to be used on a day's production were dumped into one pan, carried to the assembly room and then sorted out by workmen.

Charles Blades, who helped build the first Oldsmobile more than 28 years ago and who has been with the company ever since, likes to talk of those days when every automobile worker was practically an engineer. "He had to be," says Mr. Blades, "for he was likely to be called upon to perform any or all operations connected with the manufacture and assembly of the car.

"Every part was hand fitted and machined, the men working direct from blue prints. Today," and Mr. Blades waved his hand in a sweeping gesture at the great batteries of machines in the Oldsmobile axle plant where he was standing, "today they have a machine to do everything.

"Times and methods are as different now as are the present powerful six cylinder cars different from the little 'one lungers' we used to make by hand in 1900."

Mr. Blades holds the undisputed laurels of being the oldest automobile factory worker, in years of service, in the industry.

Judge Watkins' subject will be "Juvenile Delinquency."

New Home of the General Tire Service Company

To take care of an ever increasing business the General Tire Service company found it necessary to seek larger and more adequate quarters. The above photo shows their new home located directly across the street from their former building located at Spring and Cain streets. This new building is especially equipped with all of the latest modern tire service station machinery. The entire second floor is to be used as a warehouse, giving them one of the most complete stocks of tires and tubes in the south. At the top, left insert is Ed Ripley; right, Gene McElroy. These men are real pioneers in the tire business here and since their appointment as distributors for the General line of tires have built a business that is recognized as among the leaders in the south.

SALES RECORDS MADE BY NASH COMPANY

The month of August, according to E. H. McCarty, Nash general sales manager, swept total Nash sales and production for the first eight months of 1926 to a figure considerably in excess of the total sales and production achieved by the entire year of 1925, which was the banner Nash year in point of business heretofore. "All of the Nash plants," states McCarty, "are now in big production on the recently announced new models and some idea of the speed at which Nash sales are traveling upward may be gathered from the fact that all conservative estimates indicate that September Nash sales and production will break all past records for September business. Furthermore, September will again take up the continuous stream of record-breaking Nash sales months which were interrupted in November, 1925, due to arbitrary retardation of production to bring new models into manufacture, and again in July and August of this year in order to allow us to introduce the new light six series, new special six series and new advanced six series. In fact, September will be the 25th consecutive month—with the three exceptions noted above—that Nash sales have surpassed the high mark set by the same month of the previous year. With all three new series now powered with the seven-bearing crankshaft motor, Nash today occupies the unique position of being the only large scale manufacturer in the world with all models powered by a sevenbearing crankshaft motor which engineers regard as the ultra modern six-cylinder motor design because of the vastly superior smoothness and quietness of its performance. At the time of our recent new model announcements stocks in our dealers' hands were at an extremely low point and this in conjunction with the great reception accorded the new cars makes it certain that Nash will be hard-pressed to meet the rising demand even though production is being advanced as fast as possible."

The vatican in Rome, the Tuileries in Paris, and the Winted Palace in Petrograd required centuries for their construction.

NIMBLE! EASY TO DRIVE- TO STEER-TO PARK

Woman Driver Amazes . . . Seattle Crowd . . .

"Mrs. F. E. Griff, driving an Oldsmobile DeLuxe Coach, surely 'showed 'em' what a skillful woman of 14 years experience, and a good judge of distance can do with a car that can spurt, brake quickly, steer easily and turn 'on the edge of a dime.' In one of three obstacle races . . . the one in which cars of 110 to 125-inch wheelbase contested in Seattle, the length of a long block, Mrs. Griff amazed the crowd during the one minute and 36 seconds in which she won. Boxes, barrels, packing cases, etc., were placed so as to leave a winding trail, barely wide enough to pass through.

"Afterward two men tried to beat what Mrs. Griff and her Oldsmobile had done. Both came to grief."

—Motor West, June 15th.

BUSY YEAR AHEAD FOR AUTO INDUSTRY

"In the automotive industry, records are made only to be broken," said Sid Black, vice president and general sales manager of the Chandler-Cleveland Motors corporation, yesterday.

"The increasing importance of the motor car in American business and social life augurs well for the continued growth of our remarkable industry," he continued.

"1925 was a record year with over 4,000,000 cars and trucks produced. Of the more than three and three-quarter million pleasure cars produced, over 56 per cent were closed models. Everyone now admits that the preference for closed cars is growing, and that 1926 figures will show an even bigger percentage.

"In our own production, this fact has become increasingly apparent. We are now at a point where closed models run more than 88 per cent of our entire production.

"The introduction of the new 1927 Chandler models during the latter part of July has increased our August domestic sales 60 per cent more than any other August in the history of the company.

"This healthy degree of increasing business is assured in even greater volume for the future, for we now show more unfilled orders on our books than at any period since the company's inception early in 1912.

"The Chandler distributing organization reports that sales are being made to thousands of people who have always owned the higher priced cars. This is a direct tribute to the engineering and designing ability within our organization, and their creative talent as expressed in our 1927 models.

"More than fifteen months ago we recognized that the great American public had a preference for lighter weight, sturdily built, high powered cars of beauty and distinction. Price was then, is now, and always will be an important factor in the number of cars any company can produce and sell profitably.

"We felt the time was present to introduce two new chassis styles, replicas in every way of the deservedly popular Chandler six, which had the distinction of being America's first light six.

"The usual mid-summer dullness has been happily absent in the automotive industry this year. Building construction in almost every great city is increasing in large volume. Iron and steel output is unusually active. Employment in America for the majority of urban centers is good, with high wages. Credit conditions continue easy and agricultural prospects are excellent.

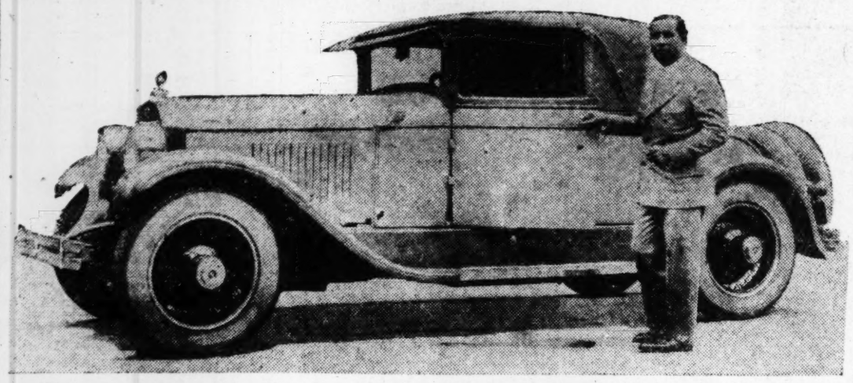

"Business economists agree that no drastic change in conditions will take place during the remainder of this year. In fact, it is claimed by many that most of the barometric indications of business conditions, including car loadings, building construction, steel output, automobile production, bank clearances, and electric power consumption will establish new high records.

"The automobile industry also continues to set new records in export sales month after month. The increasing record making activities of our industry is due, I believe, to the inherent appeal of the motor car itself.

"Daily, increasing thousands of people are finding that the motor car is a necessity and not a luxury in their business and social lives. It may be hard on the shoe manufacturers, but it is the finest sort of encouragement that the automotive industry has ever had."

A recent traffic survey in Cleveland showed that one out of five shoppers came to stores in private automobiles.

Walter Hagen, World Famous Golf Champion, Appears With New Cadillac Convertible Coupe

Walter Hagen, who at one time or another has won nearly every golf championship of importance, has just added to his many laurels the winning again of the western open golf championship at Indianapolis. He is called the world's best dressed golfer and is as particular about his car as about his dress. He is appearing at the various golf clubs this year with a new Cadillac custom-built convertible coupe. CHAMPIONS WIN IN EUROPE AGAIN

Champion spark plugs, through being in Charavel's winning Bugatti at the Grand Prix of Italy, at Monza, September 6, made a clean sweep at every important racing event throughout Europe, both for 1926 and for the third consecutive year, as well. The Italian Grand Prix climaxed European racing for the 1926 season. Champion equipped cars scored clean sweeps this year in the Grand Prix of Europe, England, France, Belgium, Spain, Germany and Italy, in addition to dozens of other European road and track events.

Almost simultaneously, Ralph DePalmer, America's famed veteran of the roaring ovals, set a new world 10 mile dirt track record over a mile track, when he averaged 81.01 miles per hour in his Champion equipped Miller special at Syracuse, N. Y. Labor day. In the same series of events, DePalma, racing against time, made a mile in 41.38 seconds—an average of 86.98 miles an hour—shattering Milton's former mark of a mile in 42.28 seconds, made with Champions in 1923.

Champions also annexed another clean sweep at the Harmsworth Trophy races on the Detroit river, and assisted in retaining that historic trophy for America, when Gar Wood and his brothers drove Miss America V, Miss America IV and Miss America III to victory over the French challenger, Excelsior-France. The 48 Champion plugs in the winning Liberty 12 cylinder engines gave perfect service. Carl Fisher's Rowdy, winner of the 150-mile sweepstakes, was also Champion equipped, as were all other boats to finish in this event. Aaron De-Roy's Lady Helen II, victor in the junior gold cup race, also used Champions. The extremely high compression, heat and engine speed caused a tremendous strain on spark plugs throughout the annual Detroit water events, causing many boats to lose out before the events were scarcely more than started.

Charvel, in winning the Italian Grand Prix, was compelled to average 130 kilometers (80.78) per hour to win this 600 kilometer road event. Champions also secured a clean sweep in the Grand Prix of Italy for for light cars, taking all five places.

FIFTEEN 'GENERALS' IN FRANKLIN ARMY

Having accomplished in a little more than six months what was considered a year's job, 15 salesmen have been promoted through the ranks to generals in the Franklin army in the Franklin Automobile company's anniversary selling contest. The generals follow: Ray E. Drew, Aurora, Ill.; Phill Orr, Hollywood, Calif.; Wallie Wilcox, Providence, R. I.; H. F. Godfrey, Portland, Me.; U. S. Grant Scott, New Rochelle, N. Y.; L. L. Toepfner, Columbus, Ohio; W. B. Ward, Jersey City, N. J.; F. W. Schumacher, Canton, Ohio; C. M. Trostle, Harrisburg, Pa.; E. J. Walker, Jr., Flushing, N. Y.; E. P. Zinn, Youngstown, Ohio; A. B. Chapman, Johnstown, N. Y.; Paul G. Murray, Lancaster, Pa.; F. F. Geisel, Wausau, Wis.; F. W. Knebel, Asheville, N. C.

The entire national Franklin sales force is organized along army lines, divisions being formed according to sales potential in the various territories. Salesmen are graduated through the ranks, rookie, non-commissioned and commissioned grades, similar to those in the United States army.

Every week the company publishes a bulletin showing the progress of its salesmen; which is based on numbers of cars delivered. Attainment of generalship, the highest rank in the Franklin army, is rewarded by a cash prize.

In July all delivery records for the month were broken. Records show a steady increase in the number of motorists buying Franklins for the first time. Company officials see in this a reflection of the public interest in air-cooling aroused by the rapid introduction of air-cooled motors in aviation service.

Considerable interest is being manifested by the salesmen in the selling contest. While they are vieing for honors in the national organization n many cases keen races have developed between individuals.

UNIQUE STUNTS FOR WHIPPET CARS HERE

A pint jar filled with gasoline is attached to the windshield post of the Whippet and the public is invited to drive the car and show their driving skill by seeing how far they can go with one pint of fuel. The results are given in miles per gallon by multiplying the speedometer reading for the test by eight.

Record made by each driver is kept and the winner each day is given a $25-dollar prize in the form of a credit on the purchase price of a new car. Local papers will announce the prize winner every day.

No restrictions are placed on the driver other than ordinary restrictions of traffic. The same person may make one test or a dozen, but only one prize will be awarded to any one individual. Women drivers are especially invited to try their skill.

In order that every contestant may have the same opportunity to win, a selected course has been laid out and every contestant uses the same course. A great deal of interest has been aroused among automobile drivers of Atlanta over this unique contest. All the ingenuity and tricks of driving are being brought into play in their effort to win the attractive prize.

See tomorrow's paper for full details of this contest.

COMMISSION TO HEAR TELEPHONE RATE PLEA

The Southern Bell Telephone company's petition for permission to revise its rates on station to station calls made between 8:30 p. m. and 4:30 a. m. will be heard by the state public service commission at its session Wednesday it was announced Saturday.

Proposed increases in these rates range from five to ten cents a call in this class of service between distances of from 36 to 80 miles. The company will ask that station to station call charges can be reversed.

The company proposes to reduce rates on station to station calls made between 7:30 and 8:30 o'clock p. m. These rates under the proposal of the company would be one-fourth lower than day rates. Under the proposed schedule the night rates are to be 50 per cent of the day rates on station to station calls.

Tuesday the commission will hear a petition filed by Georgia carriers for permission to revise rates on iron and steel. The commission will hold a conference Tuesday with lumber and log dealers relative to the fight the commission is waging before the interstate commerce commission for reduced rates on logs between Georgia and Florida points.

The Georgia commission Wednesday will take evidence for the interstate commerce commission in the petition filed by receivers of the Macon and Birmingham railroad to abandon that line.

AUTO AND MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATIONS TO MEET

The Atlanta Automobile association has joined forces with the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association in staging a mammoth membership meeting the evening of September 23, at the city auditorium, which has been planned particularly for sales people, regardless of the trade line in which they are engaged. This meeting has been arranged because both associations realize that in dealing directly with the consuming public, regardless of the trade line or industry involved, everything depends upon the efficiency and courtesy with which the employees serve the public.

The crowning feature of the meeting will be the address by A. P. Haake, who is being brought to Atlanta from New York city specially to address the meeting. Mr. Haake is in charge of advertising and sales promotion work for one of the largest manufacturers of the country, was formerly at the head of the department of commerce of the University of Wisconsin, and is an outstanding success in his own business. He is a splendid speaker, and presents his address in a language that is easily understood by all persons at all interested in the subject of salesmanship and sales methods.

It is estimated that fully 1,000 sales people, department heads and executives will attend the meeting, which will open from 6 to 7 p. m., with the service of a buffet supper in Taft hall, followed from 7 to 7:30 by an entertainment; then Mr. Haake's address, and winding up with a social dance from 9 to 11 o'clock for those who care for this kind of recreation.

Tickets at 50 cents each admit to everything, and can be secured from the executive secretary at 1308 Citizens and Southern Bank building. A number of dealers have already indicated their intention of bringing to the meeting their entire sales forces.

NEW HUDSON ECONOMY ATTRACTING ATTENTION

Although the new and improved steel Hudson coaches have been on the market here only about a month, and most of them in the hands of owners have not yet exceeded their breaking-in mileage period, reports of their high gasoline economy already are beginning to flow into the Goldsmith-Becker company, distributors.

That the new Hudsons, considering their high speed, abundant power and other fine car characteristics have an amazing quality of gasoline thrift, is the assertion of owners.

The greater fuel mileage noted on the new cars is thus explained by C H. Becker, vice president.

"By an improvement in the intake manifold, the engineers for Hudson have made possible a better distribution of fuel. By getting the maximum of power from every drop of gasoline, much better fuel mileage than even the excellent mileage made with former Hudsons is now secured."

Duco finished bodies with striping, steel construction in the coach, improved upholstery, nickeled radiator shell, a rounded rear quarter and other refinements characterize the new series Hudsons, it is stated; refinements which have caused an immediate demand throughout the entire country, and an especially heavy rush in the territory of the Goldsmith-Becker organization.

GENERAL TIRE SERVICE CO. IN NEW HOME

Removal of the General Tire Service company into new and more spacious quarters at 133 Spring street, directly across from the former location, is announced in today's Constitution.

The inspection of the new quarters by the general public is cordially invited by Ed Ripley and Gene McElroy, who, as distributors of the popular General Tire for the past four years, have experienced a phenomenal increase in business.

The new home of the General Tire Service company at 133 Spring street has every known piece of modern machinery and other equipment for the proper repairing of tires and tubes and there is ample space for carrying a complete stock of all sizes of tires and tubes. Because of this fact, the company stands ready to take care of any order regardless of the specifications.

As a matter of convenience for tire customers, the company has installed gasoline pumps and garries a full line of leading high grade oils, and, as in the past, will still maintain its efficient road service.

Messrs. Ripley and McElroy are real pioneers in the automobile tire business in and around Atlanta, having had twelve years' experience in both retail and wholesale sides of the business. Both of the company heads said that their new quarters are especially designed to meet many different requirements which have come to their attention since their entrance into the business and they are offering the automobile buying public the services of one of the finest tire plants in the south and further state their entire personnel is composed of w experienced tire men which offers t public prompt and efficient service all times.

Hupmobile's August sales were th largest for any corresponding mon in its history. Factory shipments fo the month exceeded those for the be previous August by 19 per cent, a cording to O. C. Export shipments gained 68 per cen over those for August, 1925.

That continued record business i in prospect for the company and it dealers is shown by the fact that th company carried over, on September orders for more than $3,000,000 wort of cars. These include orders for mor than $1,000,000 worth of Hupmobil Eights and nearly $2,000,000 in Hu mobile Sixes.

"Prospects for an unusually goo autumn business are especially goo in this section," said T. E. Cauthorn of the Thompson-Cauthorn Motor Co. Hupmobile dealer, commenting on th outlook. "We expect both Septembe and October materially to exceed thos months of last year. They will, as matter of fact, probably more than double September and October, 1925."

A Decade of Development at EMORY

Entrance to Law Building

The Campus

In ten years the Emory University campus has become an outstanding show-place of Atlanta.

The architectural rendering of the fourteen permanent, fire-proof buildings along lines of the Italian renaissance, with the distinctive finish of colorfully veined Georgia marble, is as beautiful as it is impressive. It has no counterpart on any University campus in the world.

The 165 acres of magnificently wooded land, on which the University is located, as well as the environs surrounding for several miles toward Atlanta and Decatur, have undergone almost magical improvements during the last decade. The campus, once almost inaccessible in rainy weather, is now reached by miles of interlacing concrete streets with hundreds of attractive residences.

Yet everywhere on the University grounds the native scenic beauty has been as carefully preserved as the construction work would permit. Many spots of tangled wildwood can yet be viewed from the driveways or from the spans of picturesque bridges, carrying one over bosky dells of azaleas, dogwood, honeysuckle and rhododendron. Visitors from other sections of the United States, widely traveled people, have remarked that Emory's is potentially the most beautiful campus in America.

Do all Atlantians realize and appreciate this fact? A most cordial invitation is extended at all times to residents and to visitors to make Emory an objective point; to see the extensive improvements in progress, and incidentally to learn first hand just what Emory means to Atlanta and to the whole South.

Looking Ahead for Old Emory!

In September, 1916, just ten years ago, Emory University first opened for students on the new campus in Atlanta. The School of Medicine, the School of Theology and the School of Law began operations here at that time, the College of Liberal Arts continuing on the old grounds at Oxford until the necessary additional buildings were ready in 1919.

The growth and development of the University since that first epochal opening are truly the result of an inspired enthusiasm in the promotion of its iterests. In this advancement the generosity of its benefactors, the loyalty of its Alumni, the public-spirited pride of the people generally, and the unswerving devotion of its faculty, have combined to make possible Emory's present high standing in the educational world.

Symbolical of these intangible achievements in a scholastic way is the great Library building recently completed and occupied, the crowning marble glory of the decade's building activities. In all, there are now fourteen permanent structures on the new campus.

While as many more buildings are in contemplation as have already been built, (some indeed planned in every detail because of the immediate needs), constituting a continuance of the expansion program for the ensuing ten years, vision alone will not develop them nor the endowment necessary for their support. The need of a firm and sustained loyalty on the part of Emory's friends, in rounding out the recurring quotas in the pursuit of established purposes, is ever present.

What has been made possible for Emory within the last decade by far-seeing men and women, can and will be surpassed during the next ten years. The "Ten Million in Ten Years" Expansion Program is an ambitious undertaking, but the greatest inspiration for it is the comparative data set forth on this page.

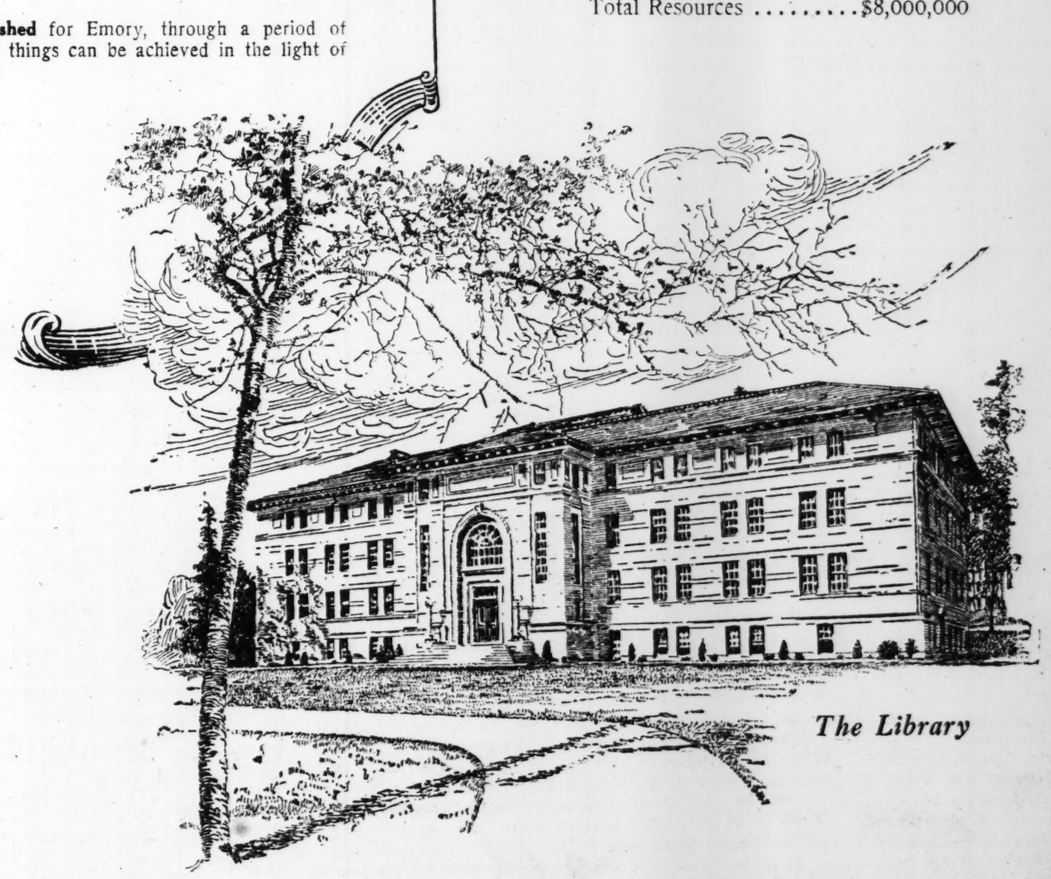

If so much has been accomplished for Emory, through a period of post-war readjustments, what greater things can be achieved in the light of present and prophesied prosperity!

BOOMS FOR EARLY BIRDS.

All hands agree that the presidential campaign of 1928 is to be one of the most important of the century so far. More sharply than since 1876 are republican party policies to be dissected and debated. The two latest republican administrations will be remorselessly reviewed and their sins be ruthlessly paraded to the public eye.

The national atmosphere already has "the feel in it" that the stars in the political firmament are ranking over the democratic lines. They presage that democratic sanity, harmony and unity, if they happen, will be the trinity to produce a sure national triumph..

So well convinced are many alert politicians that such a victory is probable, they are this early setting out exotic booms for their favorites for the democratic presidential nomination.

It is risky tactics in either party at any period. Premature births are most frequently fatal, and yet there are instances in our history when the man who ran longest eventually ran strongest. On this wide continent and among its more than half-hundred million voters, man must be well advertised in advance to command winning support. It is that fact that is impelling the early boomers to their busy endeavors.

But the stronger signs of the times are that militant issues of national policy rather than personal charm and popularity are to dominate public thought and decisions in 1928.

The democratic party will face the opportunity of a century to stand once more four-square upon the Jeffersonian fundamentals that gave it birth, virility and winning power. The cardinal principles of democracy are as true and vital to the American system of self-government as ever in the past and there is a great and growing longing in the popular heart to restore them in administrative action. Men, in 1928, will be secondary to the measures of definite democracy.

REFORMING A REFORM.

It is becoming more certain daily that prohibition is growing into a political issue and that the acutest ingenuity of party leaders will be required to subordinate it in the platforms and campaigns of the immediate future.

Only the foolish and fanatical will deny that the question, "What to do about prohibition?" is burning in the minds of millions of people. They are insisting, whether prohibitionists or anti-Volsteaders, that the nation shall be put upon some prohibition policy that will appeal strongly to the sanity and law-respecting patriotism of our people.

Over and above all debatable questions of how, when and where prohibition is enforced or nullified, rises the paramount conviction that the present laws for the carrying on of the eighteenth amendment are ill conceived, loosely adjusted and impossible of general public approval and satisfactory enforcement.

Of what value is experience in government if it does not lead to the betterment of administration, to the correction of plainly discovered errors and the undoing of wrongs under the sanction of law? In all ages the wise and just statesman has been willing to readjust imperfect legislation to satisfy public sentiment and restore government to workable bases.

The season for fanaticism and superheated moral enthusiasm over prohibition is about ended. A growing mass of the people, as anxious to abolish drink evils as any Wheeler or Upshaw, are calling for a solemn, sensible review of what has resulted from the past seven years of Volsteadism, and that, upon the facts, there shall be such a recasting of legislation as will conserve the good effects and abolish the evil fruits of present conditions.

SOUTHERN INVESTMENTS.

The Southern railway is carrying an advertisement in many southern newspapers under the caption, "The Southern Railway Should Be Owned in the South."

The point is this great railroad that operates entirely in the south and serves the south should be owned in the south. That is to say, its securities should, as nearly as practicable, be in the hands of southern investors.

This is true—strikingly true. And should not the south generally invest in its own securities? The Manufacturers Record handles the subject at length editorially. Among other things it says:

"The south should invest more freely in its own securities. It should be a heavy investor in its state and municipal bonds in order that the interest on these securities may be retained at home. Much of the profit made by many enterprises in the south goes outside of the south, whereas if it could be retained at home a vast increase in the wealth of this section would follow."

It should not be construed to mean that the south does not seek and invite outside capital. It is imperative. Its great waterpower developments, textile industries and development of natural resources, so outstanding in the south above all sections, must have outside capital. It gets outside capital most liberally because of the opportunities, and capital seeks safe, profitable opportunities wherever they may be located.

But while we ask outside capital to come into the south should we not ask inside capital to stay in the south? That is the whole proposition.

The Record again makes the point that—

"Hundreds of millions of dollars are annually sent out of the south to investors in other sections out of profits and dividends and interest on securities of southern enterprises, including railroads. If this money could be retained at home to a larger extent than at present, it would add heavily to the floating capital of this section and hasten the rapidity of its development."

The point has been made that the rates of our outside securities are higher than in the south, generally speaking. Investments that are entirely sound, and relieved of all of the elements of speculation, bear about the same rate of interest everywhere. There are more speculative securities in other sections, as a rule, than in the south, and of course the lure of speculative securities is the promised high rate of income. Speculative securities are usually always dangerous. The investor of real money may find opportunities in the south equal to any, and it would be a richer country and a richer south if we emphasized the importance for southern people to heartily support southern investments.

GET OUT THE VOTE!

The "get out the vote campaign" inaugurated jointly by several trade and civic organizations in Atlanta deserves the heartiest commendation and support on the part of every citizen.

It is doubtful if any city in the country has drifted more to minority government than Atlanta. In the recent state-wide primary Fulton county, which is mostly Atlanta, polled less than 13,000 votes. The registration was almost twice that figure and the registration was less than half the potential voting strength of the same territory—that is, if eligible citizens of both sexes took enough interest in government to assume a voice in it, as is their sacred right and duty.

Under our one party system the primary is the election. The general elections are merely legal ratifications, except in national election years, and in passing upon proposed amendments to the constitution submitted by the general assembly.

Nothing strikes a heavier blow at popular government than indifference to the election franchise. With a small fraction of the people voting, and with organized blocs and political groups too often seeking to take advantage of that fact people government becomes an utter sham, and democracy—upon which our institutions of government are built—fails.

The Atlanta organizations are doing a splendid service in arousing the people to their duties in this matter. More than a year ago the City club began a systematic campaign, following a most exhaustive survey made by a committee of leading citizens.

The Constitution has always urged the people to vote, not only in Atlanta, but in the state, and in the south generally. None of the states in the south show the interest in voting that the states of the east and west show. And all the more reason too, because of the general lack of party contests in state elections, and making campaigns between individuals necessary.

The city election will be held in five days. Let it not be said that a great majority of her citizens had no more interest in it than to remain away from the polls. The business of government is too important and strikes too closely at the hearthstones of all for this to occur.

THE PENNSYLVANIA FIGHT.

There is something really startling in the announcement of Senator Norris, republican, of Nebraska, that he will go into Pennsylvania and 'stump the state in behalf of William B. Wilson, the democratic nominee for the senate.

The startling feature is one for Mr. Wilson to appraise—that is, that Norris probably will do the democratic candidate more harm than good.

He is an independent thinker and voter. He is closely allied with the radical insurgents. He has been a bitter antagonist of the present administration—and is just as bitter against the republican national organization which is dominated by the old guard. He thinks that Vare should not be elected because of the developments in the slush fund investigations.

But the people of Pennsylvania—the republicans whose consciences have been aroused to resentment, the old stand-patters who acquiesce in the Vare auction-block victory, and the democrats—are all aware of everything that Norris can possibly tell them. He has no new facts to disclose. He is not particularly a great orator. He is of the Borah type, but less able.

It is probable that both Vare, of Pennsylvania, and Smith, of Illinois, will be denied seats in the senate should they be elected. The decision of the senate in such cases is unappealable, except to the people back home. The constitution says, "Each house shall be the judge of the elections, returns and qualifications of its own members."

The majority of senators, both republican and democrat, are men who cannot command hundreds of thousands, even a million, of dollars to secure, two years and four years hence, the renominations they will covet. To condone the extravagant expenditures disclosed in Pennsylvania and Illinois would encourage their opponents to buy their seats from under them. In self-defense they must agree to discourage future repetitions of the Vare and Smith campaigns by telling the world that no man paying the highest money price for a senatorship will be allowed to sit tight with the goods.

Such action by the next senate will have a wholesome effect upon senatorial politics and enhance public respect for that august body.

ROBERT JEMISON, SR.

The news of the death of Robert Jemison, Sr., at his home in Birmingham Thursday evening causes genuine sorrow among his large number of friends in Georgia.

Moving to Birmingham a generation ago, he entered actively into the development of that city and community at a time when Birmingham began to grow phenomenally on account of the expansion of her steel industries.

Mr. Jemison acquired great wealth, and became an active figure in banking and industry, and especially in railroad development.

His son, Robert Jemison, Jr., inherited his father's great development ability, and many years ago became the head of one of the largest real estate operating corporations in the south. He developed many of the larger residential sections of that city.

Birmingham owes much to the Jemisons, and the death of Robert Jemison, Sr., takes one of her pioneer developers, and one whose absence will be an irreparable loss. The son is a worthy successor to the father whose name and capability he inherits.

GEORGIA DAIRY EXHIBIT.

Georgia is to have another exhibit at the National Dairy show to be held in Detroit October 6-13. This event is an international classic of its kind, and the Georgia association, which has been responsible for Georgia's magnificent showing in the past, and will sponsor this year's exhibit, is preparing the largest and most representative yet set up. Fact is Georgia is taking a new and deep interest in balanced agriculture, is unusually prosperous at this time, and in the balanced program live stock has taken a definite place.

It is expected that 200,000 farmers and breeders from all parts of the world will visit the Detroit show and those in charge of the Georgia exhibit and who have been planning for months are making every effort to put Georgia's best foot foremost as an empire rich in opportunity for the dairy and poultry and general live stock farmer.

Since the date of the National Dairy show coincides in part with the dates for the Southeastern fair in Atlanta, officials of the Georgia association wish to make clear that they are not urging attention to the Georgia exhibit at the National Dairy show in any sense as competitive with our own great southern live stock exhibit in Atlanta and other state and county fairs.

On the contrary, it is pointed out that but for the educational effects resulting from the liberal patronage of our own Georgia expositions we would doubtless not have a dairy industry developed in Georgia up to the point where we may successfully bid against other sections for high-class breeders and producers of live stock; that our ability as a state to make such exhibits as is planned for the Detroit show is in a large sense a by-product of our remarkable expositions for many years in Atlanta and other Georgia points.

NEW YORK DEMOCRATS.

As had been generally predicted—although he had refrained from any definite statement—Governor Al Smith, of New York, will again offer for the democratic renomination. This is in spite of personal and financial sacrifices, and a consistent desire, often expressed, to retire to private life. His great record as a constructive executive has been and is indorsed wholeheartedly by democrats, and by a great number of republicans, even by some of the New York city republican newspapers. That he is perhaps the most popular man who ever offered for public office in New York state is attested by his great vote at each recurring election, rolling up generally from one to three hundred thousand votes more than his ticket. In making the sacrifice therefore to run for governor again it is only fair to him to say he becomes a party patriot, for certainly nothing but patriotism could influence him to do so.

There is not the slightest possibility that Governor Al Smith will ever become again a candidate for the democratic nomination for president. Talk to that effect comes from sources influenced by ulterior motives and for appealing to prejudices. In the meantime as the outstanding democrat in the east he can be of inestimable service in the plain, practical problem of winning, provided there is a nominee who can command the confidence of the east and unify the democratic vote.

According to the tentative democratic ticket agreed upon by New York leaders, Supreme Court Justice Robert F. Wagner will be the candidate for the United States senate. In this capacity he will oppose Senator Wadsworth, republican incumbent. The latter is a strong figure in the senate, a son-in-law of the late Secretary of State John Hay, who served during the McKinley administration. He has unlimited wealth. In Judge Wagner, however, he will have a formidable foe who is a close political ally of Governor Smith, as well as one of his closest personal friends.

It is practically a foregone conclusion that Governor Smith will be relected, and it is entirely possible that New York democrats may win the one republican seat in the senate from that state. Senator Copeland, democrat, is the junior senator.

THE FERGUSON PROBE.

The overwhelming vote—104 to 22—by which the Texas legislature ordered an investigation of the administration of service departments of the state under the Ferguson regime shows first the whip-hand held by young Dan Moody, the nominee for governor, and, second, with an appropriation of $25,000 for the probe, the rapidly declining political power of "Jim" Ferguson, once governor, subsequently impeached, and then the winner of a sensational "comeback" through the election of his wife to the governorship.

It will be recalled that Dan Moody, attorney general, won his great popularity by a fight made on the Fergusons through alleged irregularities in the letting of highway contracts. It was charged that favoritisms were shown and that Ferguson personally had inerests in some of the businesses of successful bidders.

The investigation, under the house resolution, will be conducted under the incoming regime of Governor Moody, hence no quarter may be expected from that source. It is expected the new governor will practically conduct the probe—and possibly serve as prosecutor.

In this proceeding young Moody has taken a desperate political chance. If the Fergusons should be found guiltless of any wilful wrong it will seriously disturb Moody's future political fortunes. Perhaps he knows his ground. At any rate, the legislature is giving him an almost solid backing.

What Is the School Trying To Do?

BY M. ASHBY JONES.

Of course the obvious answer to the above question is, the school is trying to educate. But like most answers, this only calls for another question—what do we mean by education? There are always as many answers as there are students of the question. It is not my purpose to attempt the impossible by adding a new definition to education. The question I raise is—does any school have the consciousness of a definite purpose, out of which a definition of education can be made? Take almost any school, for example, primary or college, and ask the question, what are you trying to do for the boy?

Whether rightly or wrongly, I am beginning to have this kind of picture of the average college course: A boy passes for four years through different class rooms in a series of different roles. One professor views him as a student in biology, the next as a pupil in Latin, the next as one who is to be taught chemistry, and so on throughout the college curriculum. My point is that each teacher views this boy from a different standpoint, and that standpoint is the particular subject which he teaches. For this reason his primary interest is in the science, or the language, which he is teaching, rather than in the boy who is to be taught. His faith is in the efficiency of the learning which he is administering, rather than in the possibilities of the human nature with which he is dealing.

An Educational Creed.

Speaking with the consciousness of the fact that I am an amateur, I am convinced that the primary need of all of our educational institutions is a clear and definite purpose on the part of the trustees and faculty, as to what it is they intend to do for the boy or girl. Certainly there should be an agreement as to whether the school is to teach science, language, and philosophy, or whether they are going to teach the boy. Is chemistry a means or an end?

I insist that the time has come when we must place a little child in the very center of our educational thought, and say to every school, as you are to a little child so you are to be valued in the spiritual kingdom. The supremely important thing about the school is its childhood creed. What does the school believe as to the stuff out of which childhood is made? Of course this involves the whole question of human capacity. Is a child a vessel to be filled with something, or is it a seed which can grow?

Without argument, my own view is the seed idea. A child is a bundle of limitless possibilities. A baby is something that can grow. There lie sleeping within, life powers which may be awakened by voices from without. Once awakened these powers may be used in a vast variety of ways, and for different purposes. To my mind the school is the one organized social effort to awaken these latent powers, and to point the pathway for their development.

Have we not a right to demand that the school should choose some type of personality, which it deems to be the best, and definitely strive to develop its pupils into that type? I am trying to say that it is the business of a school to develop a high ideal of manhood, and that its curriculum of studies, and its system of discipline, should be a means to that end. I insist that the purpose of the school should be, not to make scholars, but to develop good citizens.

An Educational Purpose.

It is from this standpoint that I would view the entire curriculum of the school. Primary to my educational creed is the belief that we can add nothing to the pupil but only develop that which is already latent within the personality. For this reason, geography, mathematics, literature and science are to play the same part in soul culture that the plow plays in agriculture. The mission of the teacher is not to tell the boy what is true and what is false, but to arouse his appetite for the truth, develop his reasoning powers and send him out into life to search for his own truth. The means to be employed is to lift the horizon of his knowledge, revealing to him something of the vast area to be explored, and thus by multiplying his interests, to give him the inward urge of intellectual curiosity.

So the task is not to tell the pupil what is beautiful, imposing upon him conventional standards, but rather by leading him into the world of beauty, to develop his sensitiveness to harmony and proportion, and having aroused a hunger for the beautiful, send him out to translate into form the visions of his own spirit. So primarily it is not the task of the school to teach what is good and what is bad, but to develop in the pupil a sense of bligation to others, and to encourage him to rear his own standards of right. We need to face the fact that the moral worth of each man is only equal to the value of the highest sense of "ought," which rules within his own spirit.

The insistent demand of today that we should teach morals and religion in our schools, reveals, to my mind, the same fallacy as the faith which men have in the teaching of any other particular subject. It is an exaggeration of the value of "imparting knowledge." There is an abstract science of ethics, like that of pure mathematics, which certainly has its place in the curriculum of higher education. But to hope that this kind of teaching can make boys and girls good, is to lean upon a broken reed. Education primarily, is not to teach morals, but to develop moral beings.

LOOKING AND LISTENING

Some Salient Facts About the Farm Conditions in Georgia

BY SAM W. SMALL

As usual during state-wide and national campaigns we heard recently much about the travails of our most valuable friend, the farmer.

All the politicians wanted to "do something for the the farmer" and then the farmer rose upon election morning and "did something for the politicians by voting for less politics in business and more business in government!

There are always, of course, some farmers and some farm areas, whose conditions call for commiseration and relief measures. The evolutions of nature bring here and there disheartening drouths, disastrous rains and tearing-down tornadoes. Boll weevils, army worms, grasshoppers and crop-eating fleas, for whose arrivals and appetites the farmers are not responsible. But in the long run, there are no risks or losses in farming greater than in most other lines of the world's business. Factories fail, fires ravage cities and ships go down at sea.

Georgia Farms Are Fewer.

In 1920 there were 310,732 farms being operated in Georgia, but in 1925 the number had fallen to 249,104, which is a loss of 61,628 in the five years.

In 1920 there were 102,123 owners of farms and in 1925 only 88,686, or 13,437 fewer.

In 1920 there were 206,954 tenant croppers and in 1925 there were but 159,011, or 47,954 fewer.

The managers of farms for others were 1,655 in 1920 and only 1,407 in 1925, a loss of 248.

Those figures, to the casual looker-on, would indicate signal depression of the farm industry and the exodus of a large army of cultivators from the farm lands to the towns and cities.

* * * *

The Shield's Other Side.

While all the above facts are official and the trek to town has been marked, there is another side of the shield whose face bears that seeming bar sinister.

The land in farms in Georgia decreased in the decade by 1,500,000 acres, but the value of all farm properties went up in the meantime by some $776,000,000, or more than three-quarters of a billion dollars.

Measured by the decrease of the number of actual farmers, above given, the decrease of acreage in farms averaged less than 25 acres to each farmer who threw up his job; which argues that most of the abandonments were by renters and croppers who "petered out" and went to town for easier work.

Our Swelling Mortgages.

The alarm bell was raucously rung from the stumps that "our Georgia farms are mortgaged to the point of confiscation!"

It is true that over the ten-year period reported by the census the farm mortgages in Georgia rose from $10,988,409 to the eye-filling figure $37,671,385.

But those increased mortgages are not "meat mortgages." They were not given to keep the family in bacon and meal, but to make those modern and handsome improvements that have been growing upon the farmsteads of the state for the past decade.

Practically every such mortgage has added far more than its sum to the value and attractions of the farms of the state, and are profitable investments instead of burdens.

More intelligence employed in farm methods and better equipments are giving to this basic industry of our people a new power and outlook. The state ranked in 1924, eighteenth among all the agricultural states of the union in the value of her farm products.

So let us not yet "hang our harps on the willows and sit down to mourn" over our farm poverties.

His faith is in the efficiency of the learning which he is administering, rather than in the possibilities of the human nature with which he is dealing.

An Educational Creed.

Speaking with the consciousness of the fact that I am an amateur, I am convinced that the primary need of all of our educational institutions is a clear and definite purpose on the part of the trustees and faculty, as to what it is they intend to do for the boy or girl. Certainly there should be an agreement as to whether the school is to teach science, language, and philosophy, or whether they are going to teach the boy. Is chemistry a means or an end?

I insist that the time has come when we must place a little child in the very center of our educational thought, and say to every school, as you are to a little child so you are to be valued in the spiritual kingdom. The supremely important thing about the school is its childhood creed. What does the school believe as to the stuff out of which childhood is made? Of course this involves the whole question of human capacity. Is a child a vessel to be filled with something, or is it a seed which can grow?

Without argument, my own view is the seed idea. A child is a bundle of limitless possibilities. A baby is something that can grow. There lie sleeping within, life powers which may be awakened by voices from without. Once awakened these powers may be used in a vast variety of ways, and for different purposes. To my mind the school is the one organized social effort to awaken these latent powers, and to point the pathway for their development.

Have we not a right to demand that the school should choose some type of personality, which it deems to be the best, and definitely strive to develop its pupils into that type? I am trying to say that it is the business of a school to develop a high ideal of manhood, and that its curriculum of studies, and its system of discipline, should be a means to that end. I insist that the purpose of the school should be, not to make scholars, but to develop good citizens.

An Educational Purpose.

It is from this standpoint that I would view the entire curriculum of the school. Primary to my educational creed is the belief that we can add nothing to the pupil but only develop that which is already latent within the personality. For this reason, geography, mathematics, literature and science are to play the same part in soul culture that the plow plays in agriculture. The mission of the teacher is not to tell the boy what is true and what is false, but to arouse his appetite for the truth, develop his reasoning powers and send him out into life to search for his own truth. The means to be employed is to lift the horizon of his knowledge, revealing to him something of the vast area to be explored, and thus by multiplying his interests, to give him the inward urge of intellectual curiosity.

So the task is not to tell the pupil what is beautiful, imposing upon him conventional standards, but rather by leading him into the world of beauty, to develop his sensitiveness to harmony and proportion, and having aroused a hunger for the beautiful, send him out to translate into form the visions of his own spirit. So primarily it is not the task of the school to teach what is good and what is bad, but to develop in the pupil a sense of bligation to others, and to encourage him to rear his own standards of right. We need to face the fact that the moral worth of each man is only equal to the value of the highest sense of "ought," which rules within his own spirit.

The insistent demand of today that we should teach morals and religion in our schools, reveals, to my mind, the same fallacy as the faith which men have in the teaching of any other particular subject. It is an exaggeration of the value of "imparting knowledge." There is an abstract science of ethics, like that of pure mathematics, which certainly has its place in the curriculum of higher education. But to hope that this kind of teaching can make boys and girls good, is to lean upon a broken reed. Education primarily, is not to teach morals, but to develop moral beings.

Some Salient Facts About the Farm Conditions in Georgia

BY SAM W. SMALL

As usual during state-wide and national campaigns we heard recently much about the travails of our most valuable friend, the farmer.

All the politicians wanted to "do something for the the farmer" and then the farmer rose upon election morning and "did something for the politicians by voting for less politics in business and more business in government!

There are always, of course, some farmers and some farm areas, whose conditions call for commiseration and relief measures. The evolutions of nature bring here and there disheartening drouths, disastrous rains and tearing-down tornadoes. Boll weevils, army worms, grasshoppers and crop-eating fleas, for whose arrivals and appetites the farmers are not responsible. But in the long run, there are no risks or losses in farming greater than in most other lines of the world's business. Factories fail, fires ravage cities and ships go down at sea.

Georgia Farms Are Fewer.

In 1920 there were 310,732 farms being operated in Georgia, but in 1925 the number had fallen to 249,104, which is a loss of 61,628 in the five years.

In 1920 there were 102,123 owners of farms and in 1925 only 88,686, or 13,437 fewer.

In 1920 there were 206,954 tenant croppers and in 1925 there were but 159,011, or 47,954 fewer.

The managers of farms for others were 1,655 in 1920 and only 1,407 in 1925, a loss of 248.

Those figures, to the casual looker-on, would indicate signal depression of the farm industry and the exodus of a large army of cultivators from the farm lands to the towns and cities.

* * * *

The Shield's Other Side.

While all the above facts are official and the trek to town has been marked, there is another side of the shield whose face bears that seeming bar sinister.

The land in farms in Georgia decreased in the decade by 1,500,000 acres, but the value of all farm properties went up in the meantime by some $776,000,000, or more than three-quarters of a billion dollars.

Measured by the decrease of the number of actual farmers, above given, the decrease of acreage in farms averaged less than 25 acres to each farmer who threw up his job; which argues that most of the abandonments were by renters and croppers who "petered out" and went to town for easier work.

Our Swelling Mortgages.

The alarm bell was raucously rung from the stumps that "our Georgia farms are mortgaged to the point of confiscation!"

It is true that over the ten-year period reported by the census the farm mortgages in Georgia rose from $10,988,409 to the eye-filling figure $37,671,385.

But those increased mortgages are not "meat mortgages." They were not given to keep the family in bacon and meal, but to make those modern and handsome improvements that have been growing upon the farmsteads of the state for the past decade.

Practically every such mortgage has added far more than its sum to the value and attractions of the farms of the state, and are profitable investments instead of burdens.

More intelligence employed in farm methods and better equipments are giving to this basic industry of our people a new power and outlook. The state ranked in 1924, eighteenth among all the agricultural states of the union in the value of her farm products.

So let us not yet "hang our harps on the willows and sit down to mourn" over our farm poverties.

Placid Satisfaction of Many Voters Strongest Factor for Nomination Of President Coolidge for Third Term

Washington, September 18.—(Special Cor.)—President Coolidge, returning this week from his eleven weeks' vacation, came to a Washington that is silent beyond the custom of recent years. Not more than five senators are here. Carter Glass, of Virginia, has spent some of the summer in Washington consulting documents to verify data for a book he is writing, a book which will reply to certain allegations made in the recent literary adventure of Colonel E. M. House. (Parenthetically, this forthcoming book of Senator Glass should supply a good deal of interest, as well as some meticulously exact information to the American public. Senator Glass, as a member of Woodrow Wilson' cabinet, and as a friend of Wilson who has maintained his loyalty, knew quite as much about the Wilson administration as Colonel House did; and his views differ from Colonel House's about the relative elevation of House and Wilson. Add to this equipment the fact that Senator Glass is a better writer than Colonel House—that Senator Glass indeed is exceptionally distinguished as a performer in the literature of indignant controversy—and the public will be justified in expecting an extremely interesting book.)

In addition to Senator Glass, another democrat has been here, Senator Ashurst, of Arizona, studying the testimony taken about republican political expenditures in Pennsylvania and Illinois; arriving at the conclusion that one of the marked signs of republican prosperity is the rising cost of republican senatorial nominations; and equipping himself to resist the admission of Vare, of Pennsylvania, and Smith, of Illinois, when and if they present their credentials to the senate.

These two senators and some three or four more off and on constituted about the whole of the present senatorial population of Washington as President Coolidge returned from his vacation. This condition of official vacuum—excepting the presence of Mr. Coolidge and his cabinet—will continue for about eight weeks. During that period, until the election on November 2, the various campaigns throughout the country will consume political attention.

When President Coolidge left Washington for the Adirondacks eleven weeks ago, it was stated in this correspondence that practically all the active republican politicians entertained the desire—more than the desire, the intention—to prevent Mr. Coolidge having another term; that their hope was to ease Mr. Coolidge out, to create the condition known among politicians as "an open field," and in that field engage in a good old-fashioned contest to give the prize to one choice or another of their own.

That was the desire then. It is still the desire. But the expectation is not as confident as it was eleven weeks ago.

The rather subtle psychology through which the republican politicians arrive at the hope of preventing Mr. Coolidge from having another nomination rests chiefly on the basis of what is called a "third term" by those who don't want it to happen, or a "second elective term" by those who hope it will happen. Most of the republican politicians think there is just enough weight in the tradition against more than two terms to enable them to sidetrack Mr. Coolidge. If Mr. Coolidge's case were that of a president serving one term and normally expecting renomination for a second term, the politicians would not hope to dislodge him.

But they think there is just enough doubt about Mr. Coolidge's status to make it necessary for him to wait for the republicans politicians to tender him another nomination, if he is to have one. They think he cannot seem to demand another term, or even to request it, or to take it for granted. For Mr. Coolidge to exhibit an acquisitive attitude, so to speak, toward another term would seem like a deliberate flouting of the tradition. Consequently, the republican politicians, think, Mr. Coolidge must wait to have another term thrust upon him. In that situation, as they view it, the republican politicians set their opportunity. They say they will not thrust another nomination on Mr. Coolidge nor take any steps in the nature of tendering it to him. On the contrary, they will adopt an attitude of seeming to expect him to disavow another term, of taking it for granted he will abdicate.

The one answer to this reasoning—and the politicians themselves admit this answer—is that the tender of another nomination to Mr. Coolidge can come from a source other than the politicians. It can come from the people. If the people seem to wish to have President Coolidge continue in office the politicians will bow to this public psychology, and will thereupon solemnly aver that another term for Mr. Coolidge is what they, too, have always wanted.

What may be said in the name of the people, what may be described as the common state of mind of a population of more than 100,000,000, is an intangible things, about which there is frequently more confidence of assertion than the facts would support. One can safely say, however, that there is certainly no clamor for some one other than Mr. Coolidge.

Just how much weight is there today in the emotion, formerly familiar among Americans, against a president serving more than eight years? In former years the tradition was pretty powerful. It was enough to prevent a third term for General Grant; it was enough to cause President McKinley to make a public statement disapproving the urging of overenthuhiastic friends who thought he should have a third term; it was enough to cause President Roosevelt as he began his second term (the term that corresponded to Mr. Coolidge's present term) to make a public announcement that he would not seek or accept another nomination at the end of the term he was then serving.

Is there as much in this tradition today as there was in the times of Roosevelt, McKinley and Grant? The early origin of the tradition, going back to the time of Washington, who voluntarily originated it, lay in the fear of kings, dynasties. Even in Roosevelt's time there was still fear of the establishment of a dynasty in America. It seems grotesque now, but only 20 years ago leaders of America thought could work themselves into a sweat over the fear that Roosevelt would become an emperor and found a dynasty. The late Henry Watterson, then editor of The Louisville Courier-Journal, used to fulminate about it frequently. Today it seems a thing to smile at. One can hardly imagine young Theodore Roosevelt sitting in the white house as Theodore the Second. He may in time sit there on his own merits, but not as a crown prince. For the moment, the newest likelihood of a Roosevelt in the white house seems to lie in the possibility that the former presodent's oldest daughter, Alice, might arrive there as the wife of Speaker Longworth.

Since the time when people could get excited by fear of Roosevelt becoming an emperor and founding a dynasty, several things have happened in the world which have caused people to have less apprehension about the continuity of dynastic families. Kings and dynasties have come to be less a menace than they seemed. The great war, as William Allen White once expressed it, was the "time of the big wind for the king business." Since Roosevelt made his renunciation of another term in 1904, more than half of the area of the world and something like two-thirds of its population have kicked the dynastic idea into the scrap heap of discarded forms of government. The Manchu dynasty in China passed out 15 years ago. In the great war first went the Russian czars and afterward the Hohenzollerns of Germany and the Hapsburgs of Austria.

Certainly the fears of kings is not as potent to disturb the American people as it was when the tradition against a third term arose, when they were making what was almost the world's first venturesome experiment in democratic government, in a world filled with suspicious kingdoms and empires.

Are there any other reasons or emotions operating for the preservation of the tradition against a third term? Within a year or two we shall know. There is not only the state of mind of the American people. There is also the state of mind of President Coolidge himself. When a man arrives at such an elevation as the white house he is apt to begin to think about his place in history. A man completely without imagination could hardly arrive at the white house; and any man with the faintest amount of imagination must have occasional moments in which he surveys himself in his relation to eternity. To arrive at one of the two or three most elevated positions in the contemporary world is one distinction. The only distinction comparable to it, or greater than it, is concerned with a man's place in history.

Which would be the greater distinction: to be the first president of the United States to serve more than eight years; or to add one's self to that distinguished company beginning with Washington and reaching as far as Roosevelt, who placed themselves on record as faithful to one of America's oldest traditions? Inevitably, that question must rise itself to Mr. Coolidge in some of his solitary moods.

Apart from this agreement about a third term, conditions point toward another nomination of Mr. Coolidge by the republicans if he wants it. One can realize this by asking the question: If not Mr. Coolidge, who? Can anyone name a republican leader likely to take an affirmative step to contest with Mr. Coolidge for the nomination? Can anyone name a community of any extent in which the republican voters as a whole are either so displeased with Mr. Coolidge, or so pleased with someone else, that they would take the initiative of combat? Iowa, pretty clearly, is displeased with Mr. Coolidge for a single reason, namely, his resistance to a specific type of farm relief that much of Iowa wanted. A few states, principally Wisconsin and North Dakota, have for 20 years or more been opposed to every conservative republican president, or candidate for the presidents, of the type that Mr. Coolidge is. In California Senator Hiram Johnson, in spite of misleading reports about the result of the recent primaries there, is probably again in command of the republican organization in that state.

But can any or all of these make headway against Mr. Coolidge for the nomination? The answer lies in the state of public feeling. Any competent judge of popular emotion would say that, as of today, an announcement of opposition to Mr. Coolidge would strike the public as queer, uncalled for, as something amounting almost to an impropriety of taste and to be resented. If opposition to President Coolidge is to arise the occasion for it, the causes

The common popular point of view about Mr. Coolidge's presidency is one of placid satisfaction. It is clearly short of the exalted favor that was enjoyed by Wilson and Roosevelt during portions of their respective presidencies. But it is a contentment, an ease, a lack of disturbance, which people prize, and about which they could become excited if any one should undertake to break it up. Practically everybody is busy with his own concerns, and pleased with the way they are going. Nearly everybody is pursuing profit or pleasure, or both. Any politician or faction that should start to make a change in the white house would be looked upon as rocking the boat. There may be no excited enthusiasm for Mr. Coolidge, but there is the latent material for excited defense of the status quo, if any one should undertake to disturb it.

There is more than a little thoughtful criticism of Mr. Coolidge's presidency, but it is criticism about what he fails to do; and that kind of discontent is not dynamic enough to generate real opposition. It expresses itself in words which frequently say that he takes no action until it becomes imperative, and makes no statement until the occasion for it is forced upon him.

It is said of President Coolidge that he does not take command of the republican party with sufficient energy. Plainly, he does not try to direct his party as other presidents have done, and some definite consequences are going to arise from the fact. If one wanted to state it sensationally, one almost might say that the republican party is disintegrating under the uninterested eyes of its titular leader.

Law enforcement is clearly a republican policy. Law enforcement, meaning enforcement of the prohibition law, is a specific republican policy.

Hardman, the Man, Revealed

NEWSPAPER MAN GIVES INSIDE LIFE STORY

In Interesting Interview

BY MARK ETHERIDGE.
Macon Telegraph Staff.

(The following interesting story of Dr. G. Hardman, revealing his boyhood days nd his life up to the present, appears in oday's issue of The Macon Telegraph.—Editor's Note.)

The first reaction of many Georgians fter the primary of September 8, hen returns showed that the surgeon f Commerce had whittled the Goliath f Georgia politics down to his own ize and whipped him, was to exlaim: "Upon what meat hath this aesar fed?"

It was a natural question. Here as a man of whom many—and we lush along with the rest—had said e had no chance in this race. They, e we—have it your way—had said hat his campain manager was a armer and not a politician. We had aid his campaign was being managed y a bunch of novices. And we said hat Dr. Hardman himself was no olitician.

We admitted that he was an able usiness man, a surgeon with southide reputation before he gave up the ractice, a farmer of conspicuous suc ess—well, we admitted almost everyhings except that he had a chance n this election.

Politicians Fail Him.

There was Mr. Holder, gathered bout him the ablest politicians of he state. Hub Dean, from Hall ounty; Thomas Hardwick from aurens, Sandersville, Atlanta, and Washington, D. C.; Major Cohen, naional committeeman; Sam Olive, of richmond and Fulton counties; Tom Hamilton, veteran of the McAdoo ampaign; J. J. Brown, master politician—these clustered around Mr. Holder were the wiseacres of Georgia olitics, his board of strategy, his ounsel, his advisers. With such a ombination, the politicians did not see ow Holder could fail to win.

Returns began to come in. Dr. Hardman started off like a jack rabbit nd from 6 o'clock in the evening, until o'clock the next afternoon—when he Jefferson precinct, Mr. Holder's own—reported a majority for Mr. Hardman he was never behind.

How did he do it? I went up to Commerce to find out something about im; to take him apart, as it were, o see what made him stick; to learn, f that were possible, the source of uch strength as would knock down he political card houses the politicians and the ringsters had dealt for he people.

Until a few years ago, Commerce was Harmony Grove by name. Dr. Hardman, as a member of the legislature, had it changed. I asked him why he ever picked such a name as Commerce, which is not by any means as attractive as Harmony Grove, which is redolent, if you stop to think about it, of all-day dinners and singing on the ground, of family picnics and family reunions. Commerce, on the other hand, is a bare, stark word, symbolizing traffic signals and subway rushes and too many policemen and apartment houses and all that sort of thing.

Talks With Newspaper Man.

As I asked the question, Dr. Hardman became the typical chamber of commerce member. "Well," he replied, "I changed it because this town is the leading commercial city of all Northeast Georgia above Athens."

This leading commercial center, which sits astride the railroad tracks, is reached from middle and south Georgia one or two ways. The visitor can go through Atlanta and take the main line of the Southern to Lula—probably the inspiration for the song, "If You Knew Lula Like I Know Lula"—and the branch line down to Commerce. Naturally fine highways stretch both toward Atlanta and Athens. Jackson county is the home of Mr. Holder, as well as the home of Dr. Hardman.

I spent a day in Commerce, riding around through his farm lands and through the rest of the county; in his home, in his office, in and out of the business houses and through the streets, talking with his friends and his neighbors. I do not know yet the source of his strength. I know only that in Commerce there is the greatest impatience with the rest of the state because it has not known Dr. Hardman before now. There is an aggravated impatience at Commerce that Mr. Holder should have run even as close as he did to Dr. Hardman, so great is the love of these people and their admiration for him. A mustachioed farmer, with whom I talked, jumped up from his seat on the running board of an automobile in response to my question, "Are you people going to elect Dr. Hardman this time?" and almost shouted "Yes, daggone it, he's going to carry this county and if the people of Georgia want a real governor, as they say they do, and they've got any sense, they'll elect the Doc."

Neighbors Resent Stories.

I repeated to them stories that have been circulated over the state about Dr. Hardman by his enemies—stories of his reputed coldness and selfishness, the only things his enemies have advanced against him—and heard them countered by actual stories, the narration of which would embarrass a modest man. The attitude of his neighbors is summed up in the words of Mrs. Mattie Carrington, who has been his secretary for 22 years—and it is quite a tribute to have kept the same secretary 22 years. Mrs. Carrington said: "These people, with few exceptions, worship Dr. Hardman. If you will find one who has said anything against him I show you that man's name on the old credit books the doctor kept. Those who haven't paid him are the only ones who do not like him—and yet, if he has ever entered suit on a past due bill I do not know. He literally gave away thousands of dollars worth of his time and services as a doctor.

"I'll tell you this," she continued, and her brown eyes snapped with fire, "if I were half as good a woman as Dr. Hardman is a man I wouldn't worry about my soul's salvation."

From his neighbors I inquired of the early days of the country doctor who will become governor. He was born directly across the street from his present home. His father was W. B. J. Hardman, a country doctor, who ministered to the people of the eastern part of Jackson county, while a young country doctor, Crawford Long, by name, was visiting the homes of the people on the other side of the county. They were friends, Hardman and Long. As a memorial to that friendship a white shaft stands in the public square at Jefferson, contributed by Dr. Hardman in commemoration of the discovery of ether by Long and its first use on James Venable under the mulberry tree at Jefferson. In Dr. Hardman's early years the father moved down to a farm about a mile out of Commerce and there reared his family.

Life As Young Man.

Young "Lam" Hardman—his name is Lamartine Griffin Hardman—attended the schools of Commerce and was graduated. His father sent him to the medical college a Augusta and there he graduated with honors. He studied later at Bellevue Medical school, attached to Bellevue hospital in New York and at Johns Hopkins in Baltimore. Many years later, when he had accumulated sufficient money, he made the trip to London and sat at the feet of Gay, the noted London surgeon, in Gay's clinics.

When he was about to return from New York, his medical education completed, C. W. Hood, a friend of the doctor's father, wanted to do something by the boy and gave him a plot of ground, 60 feet by 90 feet a short distance out of town. Lumber and labor being both plentiful and cheap, Mr. Hood erected young Hardman a combination office and sleeping house. It was a cabin, much after the manner of negro shacks. In the front room, the doctor installed his two or three medical books and his kit and called it an office. In the back room, he had a cot. At first, he and his father had a sort of joint practiced. In a few years his father entered the Baptist ministry and left his son's flight to his own wings.

How far and how well the young man whose first office was a cabin, has gone any one who cares to know may learn from his neighbors at Commerce. I found him president of almost every other business in Commerce and owner and operator of (it seemed to me) half the farm land in northeast Georgia.

More than that, I found him to be the anomalous combination of an eminently successful business man and a confirmed sentimentalist. It is a paradoxical combination, one that is rarely found. Evidences of that sentimental streak in him, which he would disavow and probably doesn't know he has, stick out all over him. On the first farm his father owned, under a gnarled oak tree, there stands a log cabin, daubed with mud.

Studied Under Father.

In that cabin he studied medicine under his father before he went to the medical school, while he was attending the school and afterward he and his father read medical journals together. The cabin was across the road from his father's place. It and the oak tree stand in incongruous solitude amidst a cotton patch now. Dr. Hardman is preserving it because of the sentimental attachment for it. I saw another evidence of the quality that makes him something more than mere business or professional man. When he became affluent, he purchased acres around the old place where his own first office, the gift of Mr. Hood, stood and built on it the finest residence in northeast Georgia. Expert nurserymen and gardeners fixed the ground, but at the rear of the house, sticking out amidst the handsome surroundings like a wart on a beautiful woman's nose, is the shack in which he had his office and in which he slept. Dr. Hardman is preserving it, because of the attachment he formed for it in his early days—because it is a memento of the days when he struggled with the world for the boon of success.

In his early days as a doctor he rode all over the eastern section of the county. As time went on, he rode all over the county. When he was in his forties and fifties he was riding all over northeast Georgia in his practice. Impatient at having to send his cases to Atlanta because of the absence of sanatoriums in northeast Georgia, he built one at Commerce more than 20 years ago—the first to be erected in a city smaller than Macon, or Augusta, for instance. To it he drew practice from all over north Georgia, until it became the most lucrative practice in north Georgia.

Success Begins Early.

Dr. Hardman early took leadership in his profession in the state. An examination of old medical society programs reveals his name as the chief speaker or as presiding officer as far back as 25 years ago. He and his brother, Dr. Will Hardman, were constantly being invited to appear before medical societies to dilate upon their experiences in surgery.

If there is one characteristic the doctor has, it is not a single-track mind. He appears to be interested in more and more diverse interests than any man in Georgia. All the while he was rising in his profession of medicine he was making investments here and there, acquiring little dabs of land and experimenting with scientific farming; buying cotton mill stock and bank stock. A few years ago his business interests became so great that they pressed too heavily for his time. His brother died and he was alone in his medical practice in the sanatorium. It became too much for him and he closed the doors of the hospital. The instruments are in the place; the X-ray room is fully equipped; the institution could be opened tomorrow, with a little touching up. Dr. Hardman had rather practice medicine than do anything else on earth, he says, but he has no time for it.

In a corner of the sanatorium building he has his office. From that he directs the Northeastern bank, of which he is president, and his brother-in-law, Mr. Hood, the son of his early benefactor, is the cashier. He is also a director and large stockholder in the First National bank. This office is the nerve center of Commerce. He picks up the telephone with a justly proprietary air, since he owns the telephone company, or most of it. He took it when it was $20,000 in debt, pulled it out and is putting it into a new building at Jefferson just now.

Loved Old Name.

I spoke just now of his being a sentimentalist. When he changed the name of Harmony Grove to Commerce he couldn't quite relinquish the old name. Instead of letting it pass into oblivion, he secured a flag station on the Southern for his orchards and called it Harmony Grove. He has peach, apple and pecan orchards. This year he shipped something close to 300 cars of peaches. The manager of his peach farm pointed out trees in the orchard that were 21 years old. I told him there were no such trees. He spelled it out—t-w-e-n-t-y - o-n-e—so there would be no mistake. Dr. Hardman's science was responsible for the long life of the trees, he said. One of them produced four crates of peaches this year.

Dr. Hardman has farms in White, Banks, Barrow, Madison, Jackson, and half a dozen other counties in northeast Georgia. On each of them he has a manager. Each farm is run as a unit; each occupies its place in the ledger in Dr. Hardman's office. Each manager makes requisition for his supplies and notes each expenditure. At the end of the growing season and the beginning of the harvest, the farm begins to come out of the red. Each cent it produces is credited. Dr. Hardman knows exactly how he stands on each farm and knows how each farm stood in years past. His neighbors say that he is one man who has made money out of his farms even in the past few years. His managers have been with him for many years. L. W. Eberhart, manager of a farm in Jackson county, has been with him 20 years and has sent a son to the University of Georgia; G. K. Keisler, of Nicholson, has been with Dr. Hardman more than 30 years; C. W. Crisler has been with him 20 years; D. C. Westmoreland, manager of his farm in the Nacoochee valley, has been with him 25 years. In the Nacoochee Dr. Hardman has a rice and rye and wheat mill and a fine dairy, from which he ships products to Macon, Atlanta and Augusta. The butter on his table is from Nacoochee; the wheat grain biscuits were from wheat grown in north Georgia and milled at Nacoochee.

Success as Farmer.

His methods of farming have been strictly scientific. He was perhaps the first farmer in Georgia to use tile draining to get the proper moisture for his land. He always employs his knowledge of chemistry in soil work. When he purchased the farm in the Nacoochee valley, the farmers of the mountains told him it was "dead" land.

"Well, I can't bring anybody back to life, but I'm a doctor and I can sometimes help those who are sick," he answered. "I believe this land is just sick, not dead."

He began an analysis of it. The first year he planted corn on a little patch of the 450 acres. The end of the season saw a fully-matured, fully-grown stalk 12 inches high. Dr. Hardman found the soil had been killed by toxic acids that had formed from the mineral compositions washed down from the mountain sides. By treating the land, he restored it and the following year he grew corn 18 feet high. The land is known as the best corn farm in north Georgia.

At each of his farms he has planted walnut, pecan, peach, plum, pear, apple and fig trees and grape arbors for the tenants. He has no trouble keeping labor on the farm, because he sees to the comfort of his tenants. He has churches and schools for their communities. His neighbors say that out of his own pocket he pays parts of the salaries of at least four or five pastors.

Attracted Attention.

Several years ago—in 1916, to be exact—The New York Herald sent a staff man to Commerce to write a series of articles on Dr. Hardman's work in agriculture—particularly in the culture of English walnuts and in tile draining. Two or three years ago a Cornell professor came down to Georgia, secured a bushel of his walnuts and exhibited them at Omaha. This professor went all over Europe and wrote to Dr. Hardman upon the conclusion of his visit that he had seen no finer walnuts anywhere than in Georgia. The Country Gentleman carried an article four years ago and used Dr. Hardman as the example of the successful, scientific farmer. He could hardly be anything else, since he has the experimental turn of mind, the explorative turn. He tries the new thing out for his neighbors. If it works, he tells them about it so they may try it. For a great many years he has served as a member of the board of trustees of the Georgia Agricultural college and is now its chairman, it is one of his early loves. In it he has a pride that asserts itself as he speaks of "the college at Athens." There is no mistaking the college t which he refers. He gave the college Hardman hall.

On his farm near Valdosta, in southern Georgia and northern Florida, he raises blooded live stock. In the winter he spends much of his time at that farm supervising the marketing of blooded live stock, swine and poultry.

Life as Business Man.

Enough of him as a farmer. He is also an expert textile man. The Harmony Grove Mills, of which he is president, paid a 10 per cent dividend for the first half of the year and put $75,000 in Liberty bonds as a reserve fund. In two years, 1923 and 1924, the mill paid out in dividends to its stockholders the sum of $250,000, which was equal to the amount of the capital stock.

I talked with J. R. Toney, bookkeeper, who had come up from the card room of the mill; Ben Hood, cotton buyer, who had come up from a machine. Mr. Hood drew me aside.

"In some of these other campaigns," he said, "they have charged that Dr. Hardman didn't pay his labor anything. You tell 'em for me it's a lie."

"And tell 'em for me," said Mr. Toney, who had joined us, "I've raised 10 childen and none of them has starved."

Mr. Hood pointed to a combination gasoline filling station, store and restaurant across the street. Above the door was a sign, "H. W. Williams." The proprietor was an employee of the mill.

"I bought that out of my wages," said Mr. Williams. "I haven't starved in this mill."

Keeps Labor Full Time.

Mr. Hood said that in the last 10 years, when other textile mills were curtailing to four and five days a week, Harmony Mills had run six days a week, with the exception of two weeks three years ago when new boilers were being installed.

One of the ugly stories that was put out in the campaign was that Dr. Hardman had refused to aid a school at the mill. I investigated the story and find that as a matter of fact, Dr. Hardman as chairman of the board of education at Commerce, had insisted that the mill children have all educational advantages and that one of them was honor graduate at the Commerce High school last year.

Dr. Hardman is responsible for two hydro-electric developments in northeast Georgia, one at Nacoochee, where his dairy and his roller mill and his farm operations use up the power that is generated. The other development is at Hurricane Shoals, in Jackson county. Dr. Hardman conceived the idea of developing the shoals to give employment to the people of Maysville, in the northern part of the county, who had been pretty hard hit by the drouth of last year, and the consequent commercial failures. The generators were being installed when I was in Jackson county, the wires were being strung. As we rode into Maysville, where I caught the train back, Dr. Hardman pointed to a group of buildings that were idle and said he intended to put a mill in them. Also there was a church that he was going to have painted and lighted up with electricity as soon as the current to Maysville was turned on.

Is Not a Politician.

He does not say these things boastingly, nor in the manner of the politician. One would not call him politically minded. On the other hand, he has the naivette of the professional man and he is free from bunk, which is fairly well typical of the doctor, since the profession is not only one of the so-called learned, but also one of the enlightened.

Dr. Hardman's activities have been multitudinous. He has owned hardware and mercantile stores, drug stores—every other kind of store in northeast Georgia. Out of all of them he has made money, because he is a business man. He has found time amidst all of this, to be fuel administrator for Georgia during the world war as one of the dollar-a-year men. In a frame at his home is a letter from Secretary Garfield, attesting the high quality of his work as Georgia fuel administrator. Singularly enough, Georgia's record as to proportional economy, was the best in the nation—singularly, because it is in complete consonance with Dr. Hardman's reputation as a man of large affairs. He has also found much time to devote to the Georgia Experiment station at Griffin to serve as trustee of the W. B. Hardman Trust fund at Mercer, with his brother, John Hardman, to be a trustee of Shorter college at Rome and to administer a scholarship fund at that college! and to serve as a trustee of the Southern Baptist Theological seminary at Louisville, Ky. He has also been active in the lay affairs of the Baptist church in Georgia.

Service to Public.

On top of that all, he served for many years as representative and senator in the general assembly from Jackson county and the 33d district. His record in the legislature was notable. He introduced the measure creating the state board of health; he introduced the bill providing for the free treatment of child suffering with diphtheria, tuberculosis and hydrophobia. Although he was not the father of the Alto sanitarium idea, he introduced the bill providing for the erection of the sanitarium. By introducing the bill that provided for the registration and regulation of trained nurses in Georgia, he won the undying friendship of the nurses, since he made of their work a profession and gave it standards that it had not had. He introduced the bill providing for the state highway board and the first vital statistics bill in Georgia.

In 1908, while serving in the senate he collaborated with Judge W. A. Covington, then of Moultrie, and W. J. Neel, of Cartersville, in writing the bill that gave Georgia her prohibition law. It later was made more rigid, of course, but the Hardman-Covington-Neel bill had the effect of illegalizing whisky in Georgia.

I said in the beginning that Dr. Hardman is a sentimentalist. An incident of a year ago emphasizes it. Besides one of the scenic highways that wigds through the mountains of north Georgia on its way to the Carolinas, there is a group of springs at Cleveland, Ga. Dr. Hardman conceived the idea that these springs should always be preserved to the weary wayfarer. His inspiration came from the tenth chapter of Matthew, the 42d verse: "Whosoever gives these little ones a cup of cold water, shall not lose his reward." He dedicated, from the sentiment of that verse, one of the springs "to all babies now born and unborn." The other springs he dedicated to Jennie Sue Hardman, a young woman relative who died in her 22d year, and Martha Frances Williamson, a 12-year-old Commerce girl.

Dr. Hardman's immediate family consists of Mrs. Hardman, who was Miss Griffin, of Valdosta, and four children, Lam, Jr., 17 years old, a freshman at the University of Georgia; Josephine Staten, 15; Sue Colquit, 13, and Emmia Griffin, 7.

Ambitions Revealed.

As I talked with Dr. Hardman I attempted to find the mainspring of his ambition to be governor. Beyond the natural desire of any man to receive the highest honor in the gift of the people of his state, Dr. Hardman is moved chiefly by an intense desire to demonstrate that he can run Georgia's business as successfully as he can his own. The business man in him summons him to become an efficiency expert; the medical man in him summons him to the operating room for the removal of Georgia's useless vermiform appendage—the jobholding politicians. I believe his desire to show what he can do as a business administrator amounts almost to an obsession.

Happily, he is not an eagle screamer. If he becomes governor of Georgia, the state will not be afflicted by the eloquence of a Fourth of July orator and the sense of "style" in state papers that drove poor Mr. Harding to overadmiration for his own works. Dr. Hardman rather loses himself on the platform. His young daughter, Sue Colquitt, had never heard him speak until he filled an engagement at Athens during the first campaign. He stamped his feet and waved his hands and sputtered English right and left. At home, she had known him as an even-tempered, mild-mannered man who had never shown his dander. They say around Commerce that he never has shown it, except when he heard how the returns at Jefferson had been handled. This young daughter returned home, nestled up to her mother and remarked, "Mother, as long as I've known daddy, I never knew him before to stamp his feet." The next day the young daughter was stamping her feet in irritation and excusing it on the ground that "daddy" had done it.

From Old Family.

I said Dr. Hardman was a sentimentalist. If he is elected governor he will be the fourth member of the Colquitt family to have been so honored. A distinguished Georgian of that name was governor and senator. One of the counties in Georgia is named for him. Texas elected two other members of the family to the governorship. Dr. Hardman's mother was a Colquitt, a descendant of the Colquitt governors of Georgia and Texas.

If the signs in the heavens are right—the signs in which the Commerce people believe—Georgia will have as her next governor not only the paradoxical and quixotic combination of business man, scientist—the University of Georgia conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Science—and sentimentalist, but also the second Colquitt.

On the Virtue of Gratitude

BY DORIS BLAKE.

Among the stories told of President Lincoln is one that illustrates the beauty of gratitude, the virtue a noted divine recently said if cultivated more generally would relieve the world of half its woes.

The honorable Thaddeus Stevens called upon President Lincoln one day with an elderly lady who was in great trouble and whose son had been in the army but for some offense had been court martialed and sentenced either to death or life imprisonment. After a hearing, the President proceeded to execute the paper granting him a pardon. The gratitude of the mother was too deep for expression save by her tears and not a word was said between her and Mr. Stevens until they were halfway down the stairs, when she suddenly broke forth in an excited manner with the words, "I knew it was a copperhead lie!" "What do you refer to, madam?" asked Mr. Stevens. "Why, they told me he was an ugly looking man," she replied with vehemence. "He is the handsomest man I ever saw in my life."

There is on my desk at the moment I write a letter from a broken hearted mother. Through the influence of a girl, the son of late has been showing a marked change in deference to this parent whose life since the boy's birth has been one long sacrifice. The ungrateful boy argues that children owe their parents nothing. They did not ask to be born. Perhaps the mother's indulgent way with the boy was not the right way. But would he not be a better man, a better citizen, a better husband if there were gratitude in his heart for the many blessings his parent provided him? Would he not be a happier individual if there were in his soul the kindness that is born of gratitude?

Selfishness Breeds Ingratitude.

There is an old saying that if you underestimate a blessing you lose it and if you overestimate an evil you increase it. Gratitude is a blessing that none of us can well afford to lose for the simple reason that it is a powerful factor in winning that personal happiness upon which we are all bent and because it does have a worthwhile influence in our affairs with the world.

At no time has the world stood more in need of it than right now. It is commonplace to hear sons and daughter disclaiming obligations to parents in the light of the "live-for-yourself" propaganda current. Wives claim they owe their husbands nothing and husbands switch the old mate for a young one because there is no real gratitude in their hearts. There are parents without gratitude toward children who devote to them their best years.

The individual, in overestimating the possessions of another, forgets to count the blessings that are his. And this more than any other feature is answerable for the discontent in homes and in the expressions on countless numbers of faces.

Dr. Arthur Vos, writing in a health publication, stresses the importance of the cultivation of gratitude from the health point of view. As a remedy for the grouch who sees nothing about him but pessimism, and the "glum," the neurasthenic, and the petulant, the sullen, churlish, and morose, he recommends a changed heart. Wrong habits of thought we know to have a deleterious influence on the health of the body.

Kindliness and Health.

"It is true," says Dr. Vos, "that the cultivation of a spirit of appreciation and gratitude has a vital influence in neutralizing the reflex effects which a pathological condition or an organic disease may produce in the mind and disposition of the patient. Every true and honest effort in displacing such harmful, pernicious, and detrimental feelings and emotions is a wellspring of energy pouring out its refreshing and healing waters into the very life of man. Such efforts must be inspired by repeated resolutions, by determination, by an act or repeated acts of will, and constitute what is known as self-control and poise.

"You may not see instantly what effect your resolutions and determinations may have upon the subconscious mind and its expressions, but if you will continue to persist in cultivating a kindliness of disposition, a spirit of gratitude and of appreciation, it will not be long before a new series of sense memories, concepts, ideas, and emotions will become dominant in your consciousness. And as these gradually take form in the mind, new cells are generated in the brain and new faculties are established by the subconscious mind for their exercise and perpetuation. The office of the subconscious mind, let it be remembered, is not only to preside over all the cell producing and creating functions, but to regulate and control the chemical changes and activities as these affect the secretory and excretory fluids of the body engaged in the process of nutrition and elimination. Hence its possibility of creating new cells and new areas with their corresponding faculties.

"When the subconscious mind is discouraged by an act of will, which it is if the choice of feeling, emotion, or attitude is not made in harmony with its own nature and modes of operation, the physical processes of the body will be gradually depressed and ill health will sooner or later ensue."

Ingrate Has Small Soul.

This, contends Doctor Vos, is the process of disease production from wrong mental attitude which is well illustrated in the fact that no ungrateful person can ever be perfectly well or happy.

"All noble natures instinctively recoil from expressions of ingratitude, for they intuitively feel that selfish motives are destructive and not creative in their influences. The ingrate, not having received the joyous and bounding feeling that can only arise from an appreciation of the blessings that life affords, has no song in his heart and cannot be loved by those with whom he comes in contact."

Gratitude and thankfulness of heart, instead of arising from a weak and timid mind is, on the contrary, the most eloquent evidence of greatness of character and nobility of soul, says Vos.

There is nothing good a person may possess, whether it be of the mind or body, character or health, chattels or landed properties, friendships or acquaintances, fame or reputation, which may not be lost if not appreciated.

Such being the case, let's begin today cultivating a spirit of thankfulness for the many blessings we have. We have them—many of them. Heretofore we've been so busy with envy and jealousy, cultivating selfishness abominably that we simply haven't taken the time to count the things we could be grateful for.

LIGHTS OF NEW YROK

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

THE MORNING'S DIARY OF AN OCCASIONAL COMMUTER.

New York, September 18.—If the usual daily morning of a commuter averages up anything like one this scribe put in yesterday the howling against the monotony of the suburban wage slave's sheep driven existence would decrease and in its place would arise a fervid appreciation of the exciting delights waiting to assail the languid gaze. Maybe because I don't get up early very often and emerge form the green Jersey hills to rassle with the rabble pouring in upon the city, I can still get a kick from being occasionally an eager atom among the bored commuting horde. Then again maybe the entertainment offered the other day was of rather a rare variety and inclined to quicken even the most jaded Jersey pulse. I'm inclined to think it was in spite of bearing a sweet, ancient grudge against that part of our neighbor adjacent to New York for its red mud, corpse blue street lights and overwhelmingly insolent traffic cops. New York's own are sassy enough but the New Jersey variety (Newark and Jersey City style) make Manhattan's look like so many college presidents working a shy plutocrat for another endowment.

Anyway, on this particular morning things began to happen soon after we left, at a ghastly hour, a quiet little town snuggled tightly in what some people jokingly refer to as the Orange mountains. Western people always get a giggle when natives pompously refer to the undulations of ground northwest of Newark as mountains. Wise residents refer to them more properly as just "The Oranges." They are pretty, though, and verily I say unto you they may not be jagged, high, or picturesque but they are studded with gold. Their residents, the miners themselves, prefer to do their prospecting in a nearby town and seek their dust on the granite rocks of Manhattan. Of such did the passengers on our early morning express consist. Gold miners all. Men, the serious diggers, the daytime toilers and girls, the frivolous daytime diggers but night blooming serious moilers for the precious metals. Stenographers discussing plans for the evening's prospecting—and arranging to meet on the owl after theater or dance when the gold would have been located, brought to the surface, and spent all in one evening.

Three stations down the line there was a grinding stop not called for on the time table. Passengers pushed aside knee boards holding playing cards, lush details of the Hall-Mills classic, cross word puzzles (known as the commuters curse) and lipsticks to gaze out upon the battered remnants of what was once a Ford and a tarpaulin covering the two bodies of its late occupants. A loud window conversation with a laconic conductor revealed that the flivver, skidding across a grade crossing had impacted itself on the cowcatcher of the locomotive dragging the train preceding ours. Both were going about 40 miles an hour and the Ford lost the decision. Why our train stopped is more or less of a mystery unless it was to afford those on board a chance to vary the humdrum journey cityward with the vicarious thrill offered by a snapshot of death's keen hand. Any doubt that the railroad was not in a magnanimous mood that morning as far as tendering the customers an inside view of the bizzarre and unusual was dispelled by the sight further on down the line, almost in the yards leading to the terminal, of an enormous five-star mogul engine with its nose buried in the gravel four feet away from its proper place on the track.

All around where the monster had taken its header the track was ripped up. Official appearing gentlemen were gathered about the hissing engine, shrugging their shoulders and appearing extremely ineffectual. Least concerned of all was the engineer, puttering about the side and poking his long nosed oil can into its vitals. He reminded me of a nearly drowned man I once saw being given violent first aid treatment while his brother hovered around, and once when he thought no one was looking hastily straightened the unconscious fellow's necktie.

Gliding by this little vigette of a distressing scene liable to occur even near the best regulated of round houses we slipped into the train shed and I was face to face with an ever acute problem that should confront all leisurely and occasional commuters. Tube or ferry? Regulars in a hurry don't hesitate—they know where they are going and that they have to get there quickly so, giving romance the air, they disappear into the dank fastness of the stifling under the river railroad. We who know better and aren't really in much of a rush start to gloat with the knowledge we are bound for a boat— a nice, friendly, but jammed, ferry boat and are bound for adventure on the Hudson. There is always something stirring on the river; this particular morning there were special items ready to glut our sense of the spectacular.

Hardly out of the slip we could see the rotting remains of the "Washington Irving," once pride of the Hudson river day fleet—the boat that was sunk near her pier a few months ago. Divers could be seen about her side ready to go down and retrieve valuable paintings and equipment lost in the wreck. A derrick boat bobbled around nearby. Further out in the stream came the "216" and the "295," twin thrills—beautiful sleek destroyers pacing each other and each swerving to clear our bow. Our skipper felt jubilant. We honked—and got an official recognition from the navy in the form of two throaty blasts apiece from the destroyers that all was well and that Captain Lawrence had not died in vain.

As they swept majestically pass we slowed up just in time to let the "Berengaria," biggest of the Cunarders, slowly proceed along her way to her dock on Fourteenth street. The former "Imperator" was in no hurry, seemed just a trifle imperious, and kept growling low rumblings from her whistle—just to warn all lesser craft, and this meant everybody, to please keep out of the channel and let a real lady get by.

After this came the usual whistle duels with tugs and even smaller fry, raucous assertions of the right of way, and a swinging with the tide until we docked on Manhattan island. Clanking of gangways, frantic spinning of the wheels that catch the hawsers, and the enormous, pungent ferry house smell. There is nothing anywhere remotely like it. A sort of combination of brine, horses, driftwood and West street. Enormously appetizing but nothing compared with the prodigious arrays of fodder exhibited by the wholesale provision dealers fringing West street and nearby streets running into the river front thoroughfares. Every imaginable food is arrayed on the curb, and it can be seen in the dim recesses of the warehouses fronting the streets. Whole beeves, pigs, sheep and various smoked delicacies lie waiting for the delectation of the retail butcher, and passersby.

Vegetables, fruit and poultry. Everything eatable. How commuters can pass these vast stalls morning after morning without reaching their offices positively ravenous is a mystery to me. On a truck some men were unloading slim boxes that claimed my gluttonous attention. Stamped on them appeared the legend intriguing enough to drive a hungry man insane, "Golden West Fatted Fowl." I made a mental reservation that at lunch I would demand fatted fowl and make sure it was the golden west variety, too.

SUNDAY HEALTH TALKS

BY WM. BRADY, M. D.

THE CANCER QUESTION.

A correspondent writes from the wilds of Wyoming:

Being somewhat interested in health tall in perusing the same S-7-1, I note that a certain "Yarb Doctor" John Doe, "an herbist," assumes to treat and cure cancer.

John Doe is a stranger to me. But to the point: The idea of curing cancer seems to be ignored as a deceptive fake. However, I have treated and cured the said malady for over thirty years, and to prove my ability, you need not take my word, but you send cases that you pronounce cancer in its first stage, external, to my office, submitting them to my treatment, and if I don't cure them, then you can pronounce me a fraud, a deceiver and a skip-jack. Or if more satisfactory to you I will come to your city and open an office under the same terms and if I give satisfactory results you are to recommend me. Or I will turn the remedy over to you on stipulated terms. Proof of the pudding is in the eating of it. Kradly reply either by letter or in your health department.

The cure of external cancer in its early stage is an every day accomplishment of the ordinary everyday physician. To boast of such cures is the usual method of the quack. I should like to accept this one's challenge, were it not for the trouble it would give my conscience to "send cases" to such a person.

External, skin cancer (epithelioma) is a very different disease from internal, organ cancer (carcinoma). We do not know as yet whether these are two forms of the same disease or two distinct diseases. Then there is quick cancer, galloping cancer, flesh tumor cancer (sarcoma) which occurs in persons of any age and is the most rapidly developing and most malignant form of cancer. For all we know these may be three distinct diseases with nothing in common.

Ordinary caustic pastes or applications often cure the comparatively slow-developing and non-malignant skin cancer. Many of these have been cured by burning with a sun lens—focusing sunlight upon them with a reading glass. Every physician cures some cases of epithelioma by excising the lesion, provided the patient submits to the little operation before neighboring lymphnodes have become involved. Thousands of cases of epithelioma have been cured by x-ray treatments alone.

If I had such a cancer I should prefer to have it neatly and painlessly excised, cut out, under local anesthesia or general anesthesia, as soon as the suspicion of cancer arose. I might not get a better result from this than I would get from the application of a caustic paste, but I'd suffer none at all compared with the inevitable pain I should endure under the caustic paste treatment. Then, too, even radical excision of a cancerous mass would probably produce less disturbance and cause less inflammatory reaction and terminate in less scar than the blind destruction caused by a caustic is likely to set up. I prefer to remain comfortable, safe and pretty. But then, I don't believe in ghosts, spirits, charms or superstition.

As for internal organ cancer (carcinoma), only the regular medical quacks purport to have cures for that. There is one just now making a great noise about his secret serum, and he has quite a list of more or less shady doctors or near-doctors about the country pushing the phony cancer cure. There are always a certain number of renegade doctors who, for soft money, will get behind a bit of chicanery like this and exploit it among their patrons. In some instances these doctors are themselves bemused by the master quack's plausible pseudo-scientific arguments, but always there is the fat fee which the unfortunate victim of the wonderful new treatment pays the exploiting doctor. I know how easy it is for a doctor to be taken in by high pressure salesmanship; I fell for such a thing myself once—not a cancer cure, but an alleged remedy for something else; I am quite sure I would not have found the arguments so plausible had there been no roseate outlook for nice, fat fees for my services as local shover of the remedy. Thank heaven I never perpetrated the treatment on a patient.

We know neither the cause nor the nature of the disease or diseases we call cancer. We have never found any cure for them. The only hopeful remedy for any form or type of cancer today is surgery, early and radical. Included under the head of surgery is, of course, the application of any form of destructive treatment, chemical, physical, radium or x-ray. Anybody who has a cancer or a suspicion of cancer developing should beware of dallying with alleged cures, for remember, cancer waits for no monkeyshines and procrastination in seeking proper advice and treatment is generally a fatal mistake.

Old Blood and New.

I have Ben Told that when cousins marry and have children the children will be deformed or weak-minded. My husband is my cousin. We are both well and happy. It there any reason why we should not have children? (Mrs. R.)

ANS.—If there is no reason why a couple should not marry there is no reason why they should not have children. If there is no taint of degeneracy—that is, no marked deviation from normal mind or body among the forebears, there is no particular reason why cousins should not bear normal children. Any heritable defect, however, has a double chance in such a union. It is better to bring new blood into the family, if it is good blood.

Placid Satisfaction of Voters Strongest Factor For Coolidge Nomination

Prohibition itself is a tacit republican policy.

Considering this, the present spectacle in New York state is strange. In that state a distinguished republican senator of long experience, James W. Wadsworth, Jr., is about to be renominated by his party on a personal platform which consists specifically of a demand for the repeal of the prohibition amendment and the adoption of the Quebec system of selling all kinds of liquor of all percentages of alcoholic content through government dispensaries. Implied in this personal platform of Senator Wadsworth and expressed in his public actions is a policy of encouraging the state of New York to refuse to enforce the existing national laws about prohibition. Because Senator Wadsworth is a man of strong personal determination the republican party in New York state is not only going to renominate him for senator but seems actually in all respects about to accept this personal platform as its party platform.

Wherein does this insurgency against the national republican party differ

Lyon Plays Leading Role In Kane Film

"The Great Deception" Sees Likable Star in Role of Hero Aviator.

A great deal of the interest which local theatergoers will find in "The Great Deception," the Robert Kane production for First National which is to be shown at the Metropolitan theater this week, will center in the fact that Ben Lyon is the leading man in the cast.

Mr. Lyon has been attracting an unusual amount of attention during the past few months. No actor has had a more rapid rise toward the cherished goal of stardom and for few actors or actresses is the future more rosy. This development of a star through successive photoplays is frequently more interesting to movie fans than the picture featured on the screen.

In "The Great Deception" Mr. Lyon has a particularly heroic role. He is cast as a young Englishman who chooses to serve his country during the world war in the capacity of a member of the British secret service. As an expert aviator he flies a high-powered plane, called "The Yellow Dove," back and forth between England and Germany, carrying messages and information of such importance that his life is constantly in danger. A final close call, during which he escapes from behind the German lines amidst a storm of bullets from anti-craft guns, provides the big climax of the photoplay.

Mr. Lyon has appeared in a number of pictures released through First National and in two productions made by Mr. Kane prior to his work in "The Great Deception."

Aileen Pringle plays opposite Ben Lyon in "The Great Deception." Others in the cast are Sam Hardy, Basil Rathbone and Charlotte Walker.

Enrico Leide and his Metropolitan orchestra will head this week's musical program with Suppe's "Light Cavalry Overture." The theme for the feature photoplay is "If You Would Say I Love You," written by Frank Woodruff and George L. Hodge. The latest Broadway song hits will accompany the showings of the other screen features. Other special numbers on the program will include a rollicking comedy subject, "The Heavy Parade," and the latest issue of the Metropolitan News and Views.

"_____," says Bert Lytell to Billie Dove while Thomas Ince smokes his pipe complacently. We don't know whether Tom's the lady's husband or not; but they appear at the Howard theater this week in "The Lone Wolf Returns." The next scene is from "The Great Deception," at the Metropolitan theater, starring Ben Lyon, of Atlanta, and Aileen Pringle. Next is shown scene from "Compromise," with Irene Rich, at the Alamo No. 2, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The boy who is fixing to shoot up the bad, bad Injuns is Jack Holt, who is starred in "Forlorn River," at the Rialto this week. On the lower left is shown Rudolph Valentino, who co-stars with Alice Terry at Loew's Grand this week. The lady who "just won't" is Peggy Joyce, the lady of many husbands, who stars in "Skyrocket" at the Palace theater. Next, is scene from "The Fighting Stallion," starring Yakima Canutt, at the Tudor theater Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Next, is scene from "The Desert Healer," at the Cameo theater. Antonio Moreno and Marion Davies are starred at the West End theater in "Beverly of Graustark," Monday and Tuesday.

Fourth Anniversary.

Louise Fazenda is having one of those interesting anniversaries that spell history in her career. Four years ago today the comedienne followed her last Sennett comedy, "Bow Wow," in which she played opposite Teddy, the big Dane, with her first straight role in "Beautiful and Damned," for Warner Brothers. It meant her introduction to serious drama.

Bert Lytell Featured As "Lone Wolf"

Louis Joseph Vance Film Stars Lytell and Billie Dove.

One of the fastest adventure melodramas of the season, "The Lone Wolf Returns," featuring Bert Lytell and Billie Dove, will be shown at the Howard theater this week. The story, which is an adaptation of the famous Louis Joseph Vance's novel treats of the reformation of the master crook, Michael Lanyard, through an accidental meeting with Marcia Mayfair, a New York society girl, while he loiters behind portieres in her boudoir in an effort to evade the authorities.

It will be remembered that Bert Lytell created the character of the "Lone Wolf," a circumstance that resulted in an especially fine interpretation of the role in the current production. No truer protrayal of this difficult character could possibly be given than that otfined by Mr. Lytell in "The Lone Wolf Returns." The element of mystery, the spirit of adventure, the romantic and, in fact, pictures qualities of the story are grippingly projected in this master productoin of a great author's work.

The beauty spot of the picture is, of course, Billie Dove, whose gentle wholesome personality fits perfectly the role of Marcia Mayfair, who converts Michael Lanyard from a toy of circumstance into a man with a longing for a life of respectability. Miss Dove's performance in this production is one of which she and her director may well be proud. She is a ravishing type of beauty, and in "The Lone Wolf Returns" wears clothes of extreme elegance from a lavishly equipped wardrobe.

The direction of Ralph Ince is superb. He shows a remarkable sense of dratmatic values in his ability to create suspense and an atmosphere of tenseness.

A real circus, but without the usual hard seats, sawdust, peanut shells, pop and crackerjack—this is what is promised the patrons of the Howard this week when Frank Cambria's "Circus Week" will be presented as the leading stage attraction. Quite a feat, say we, to see a circus from a comfortable, cushioned seat in a handsome theater!

Joseph Littau and his Howard Symphony orchestra will present "Southern Rhapsody" as the overture for the week. Melvin P. Ogden will feature "In a Little Garden" at the Mighty Wurlitzer.

RUDOLPH VALENTINO AT LOEW'S GRAND

Rudolph Valentino, the classic lover of the screen, takes the leading role in "The Conquering Power," one of the greatest pictures in which the late lamented star ever appeared, which will be the feature picture attraction at Loew's Grand theater this week.

Since the death of this great actor people have manifested wonderful interest in his pictures and a study of his work has demonstrated beyond question that he was one of the ablest and greatest of all stars who ever appeared in pictures.

Loew's Grand theater was fortunate in booking several months ago "The Conquering Power," which has been stamped as one of the masterpieces of this actor.

With Valentino will appear beautiful Alice Terry, and through their efforts has been created one of those pictures which will live long in the memory.

Rudolph Valentino was a real artist and a wealth of this artistry is found in "The Conquering Power."

The story is a pure romance with a sufficiency of dramatic intensity about it to sustain the keen interest of the spectator until the last moment.

John Roche Idle.

John Roche, after 15 weeks' steady work in two Fox productions, "The Return of Peter Grimm," and "My Wife's Honor," has come to his first pause this year. The actor is scheduled to do more of the pictures in technicolor, but whether he will do one first before a feature, has not yet been decided.

Miljan Plays "Menace."

John Miljan finished his tenth picture of the year with "The Yankee Clipper" for Cecil B. De Mille in which he plays the "menace." His role runs all through the picture. He is first glimpsed as the traveling merchant who knows the orient like a native. He is the one who first intrigues the heroine and furnishes the obstacle—when the hero appears. Mr. Miljan has been in pictures about a year and a half, making his first bow in "Love Letters" for Fox. His picture work followed a number of profitable years on the stage when he made a name as one of the most versatile of actors.

Palace Theater.

Peggy Hopkins Joyce and Owen Moore open the week at the Palace theater in Inman Park carrying the feminine and masculine leads respectively in "The Skyrocket." There is probably no actress in the world who has been given more publicity than Peggy Hopkins Joyce. The star herself is a great attraction to this film. With a really good play directed by Marshall Neilan for her vehicle and Owen Moore as her co-star, she has made "The Skyrocket" a big success. The picture will show Monday and Tuesday.

Wednesday only comes Gloria Swanson in Paramount's great picture, "The Hummingbird." All the superb talent of Glorious Gloria is given opportunity in this picture and the result is a typical Swanson success. A play with excitement and romantic interest that fills the keenest expectations of the most critical film fans.

Thursday and Friday one of the screen's most popular young comedians, Douglas MacLean, comes to the Palace in a screamingly funny farce comedy, "That's My Baby." This picture which is typically MacLean, swings along at a mad and merry pace keeping audiences keyed up to fever pitch with excitement and roaring with laughter. Those who believe the picture play's greatest function is to provide laughter and care-free amusement will thoroughly indorse this film.

West End Theater.

A very well balanced bill of fare is offered the patrons of the West End theater this week with Marion Davies, Norma Shearer and Jack Holt in leading films of the week.

For Monday and Tuesday, Marion Davies will return in one of her best-known pictures, "Beverly of Graustark." In the film Miss Davies is seen as the youthful impersonator of the Prince of Graustark and her characterization is truly delightful. Antonio Moreno heads the supporting cast for this popular blonde star.

On Thundering Herd." "The Vanishing American," and "Wild Horse Mesa." The photoplay on Saturday will be "Hearts and Fists."

On Wednesday for that day only, Norma Shearer will be starred in "A Slave of Fashion." This picture presents a human story exceedingly well told and beautifully produced. It is entertaining from start to finish and it is keyed at a tempo that keeps your interest strained to the maximum all the way through.

Thursday and Friday will see at the West End screen a Paramount masterpiece, "Born to the West," starring Jack Holt and Margaret Morris. This is without a doubt the finest western that the Paramount organization has ever made and a statement of this kind reaches true value only when one considers that it was the Paramount company that made "The

Zane Grey's "Forlorn River" At Rialto

Jack Holt and Arlette Marchal Starred in Grey Film.

Zane Grey's "Forlorn River," with Jack Holt, Arlette Marchal and Raymond Hatton as the stars, is the feature picture for the program to be offered at the Rialto theater this week.

It is accompanied by the educational comedy "Who Hit Me?" Pathe news, and a musical score under the direction of Frank Turner. "Forlorn River" is a picture of thrilling adventure and warm romance.

The ingredients from which the prolific Mr. Grey has fashioned his latest brain child includes one outlaw, one heroine, one rival, one tramp, and a choice assortment of cattle rustlers, ranch owners and a sheriff's posse.

The clash between the cattle rustlers and the sheriff's posse is productive of an abundance of gunplay, horsemanship thrills, daredevil action and excitement. The love affair between the outlaw and the rancher's daughter is complicated by the former's loyalty to his rival, who has saved his life. Here, then, are the two parallel threads of the story, with some excellent comedy thrown in for good measure by the tramp who turns cowpuncher.

The acting is uniformly good, which was to be expected from a cast boasting of Jack Holt, Raymond Hatton, Arlette Marchal and Edmund Burns. As the hard-riding, gun-fighting outlaw, Holt runs through his entire western repertoire in his usual finished style. Hatton contributes a delightful bit of foolery with his inimitable portrayal of the ragged cowboy. Arlette Marchal carries off the feminine honors. This charming French actress possesses youth, beauty, personality and talent, and that's a hard combination to beat. Edmund Burns is admirably effective as the square-shooting rival.

In the role of Diane, Miss Florence ll have further opportunities to show r magnificent self in intricate and eresting parts. In her two pre- ous plays at the Forsyth she has monstrated marked versatility and r popularity is growing by leaps and unds. It is probable that no other tress would have secured such a firm ip on Atlanta fans as Miss Florence s in such a remarkably short pe- od.

Playing opposite her this week will James Coots, as Chico, a never-to- forgotten character. In the under- ing theme of the production, human rage, Mr. Coots will find a real st for his wide ability and range of ting—because the role is a most ficult one.

Mr. Forbes, Miss Wilck, Mr. Hul- y, the fine comedian; Mr. Devitt, iss Seymour Hicks, Bessie Warren d others will all have excellent parts. "Seventh Heaven," is recognized as e "perfect play," a story of the ms of Paris and is gripping through- t. It is something that will e on in the minds of theatergoers d is certain to create a furore in cal theater circles all this week. arry McRae Webster, director ex- ordinnaire, will be at the helm as ual.

Cameo Theater.

On Wednesday and Thursday the ameo offers the picturization of E. . Hull's latest story, "The Desert ealer," a drama of far-reaching pow- , the story of a man who returns ome to find his wife faithless, and o goes off into the desert where e becomes known as a healer, only ter to find the man who stole his ife, with a woman whom he had nce married, mistreating her, and f this desert healer who takes the oman. A powerful love story is un- olded in the picture, which has in its ast Lewis Stone and Barbara Red- ord.

Friday and Saturday brings to the ameo the dashing Ben Lyon as a odern Bluebeard, who divorces his ives instead of beheading them, of is flashing from obscurity to nation- l prominence, and the girl who rought him back to earth. "Blue- eard's Seven Wives" is the title of he picture, which is a wonderfully elightful comedy.

On Monday and Tuesday the Cameo resents the return engagement of the otion picture version of Sinclair ewis' great story of the flaming lapper who invaded the north woods with her smiles and wiles, "Mantrap," ith Clara Bow, Ernest Torrence and ercy Marmont. In the picture Tor- ence portrays the role of a trapper ho ventures to a big city where he eets a new type of woman, a flap- er, and wins her.

No Cooties!

It has remained for James B. rainger, general manager of Fox ilms, to cap all that has been said bout the realism of "What Price lory."

Mr. Grainger was talking to an ex- ibitor about the merits of the war icture. "It has love interest, comedy, ragedy, sex, scenery . . ." he was aying, when the exhibitor broke in with:

"Has it realism?"

"Realism!" exclaimed Mr. Grainger. Why, it has everything but casual es and cooties."

Mrs. Ashby Lectures.

"Mental Telepathy, and Intuition, will be the subject of a lecture in ractical psychology, by Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby Sunday afternoon at :30 o'clock, in the mahogany room of the Ansley hotel.

MYERS AND HANFORD RETURN TO GRAND

Those two comic "cup-ups," Myers and Hanford, "The Arkansas Valentinos," will appear as the headliners on the new vaudeville bill which will be offered this week at Loew's Grand theater.

"Pee Wee" Myers and Ford Hanford scored one of the biggest hits last season ever scored by comedians in Atlanta when they appeared at Loew's Grand.

Hanford's burlesque ballad singing has won international fame for him while the eccentric dancing of "Pee Wee" always wins enthusiastic approval. They take an ordinary carpenter's saw and play a regular operatic program on it.

The new bill contains other acts of exceptional merit, one of them being the comedy skit starring Harry Coleman, late star of several metropolitan musical comedy productions, assisted by Gladys Hart and Bert Payne. The skit is entitled "Love As Is."

The four Rubini sisters, musicians of rare talent, who also have won favor in Atlanta on several previous occasions, will present their miniature recital of songs and music. Harmony singing will be featured by the Wyoming Trio, a popular male team, in a pleasing program of the latest popular song hits. Florence and Arnold, two stars from the English music halls, offer a comedy skit with singing, dancing and novelties.

Chattahoochee Valley Schools Open With 3,500 Pupils Enrolled

West Point, Ga., September 18.—(Special)—With the opening of the West Point public schools all educational institutions of the Chattahoochee valley swing into full operation on the new year's schedule. Headed by the same superintendents who have administered the affairs of these schools for many years and with many former teachers returned to their posts together with some new ones, this promises to be the biggest and most successful session that these schools have ever enjoyed.

Approximately 3,500 students have enrolled in the six towns and this number will be increased by at least 500 within the next few weeks, it is said. Professor E. I. Oliver, superintendent of the school at Riverview, Ala., reports the enrollment of some 200; at Fairfax, superintendent P. C. Ramsey announces 700 enrolled.

Prof. W. T. Draper has in the Langdale school 600 pupils and Shawmut, through Superintendent W. T. Harrison announces a like enrollment. Professor C. E. Lunceford, head of the Lanett school had on the opening day 1,075. According to past records this enrollment will be increased to at least 1,500 in a short time.

The opening exercises in West Point schools were attended by many visitors and a number of members of the senior class of last year. The personnel of the various faculties and the usual enthusiasm shown by the students would indicate that the six towns of the Chattahoochee valley are entering upon an unprecedented era of educational achievement.

Tudor Theater.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday the Tudor will present for the first time in Atlanta the latest picture of the wonder dog star, Rin Tin Tin, in "Below the Line." Numerous thrills are recorded in the story of "Below the Line," which is that of a wonderful dog, reared for the brutal life of the fighting pit, lost from a train in transit, and found by a man who introduced into his life kindness, and of the dog's reaction to the new treatment and his subsequent adventures.

The action of the picture leads up to where a criminal robs a woman of a fortune in jewels and attempts to kill the dog's master, and Rin Tin Tin attacks the brute and saves the man who had befriended him. All in all the picture is a whirlwind of action and speed, and is one of the most notable attractions booked at the Tudor in some time.

In addition to "Below the Line," the Tudor will present on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday International News, and "What, No Spinach?" a Blue Ribbon comedy.

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday the Tudor will show Yakima Canutt, champion of the saddle, in "The Fighting Stallion."

Can't you just hear the piping of that old calliope? This week is "Circus Week" at the Howard theater and they have everything from the calliope to the wild man from Borneo. Ford Hanford of the celebrated team of Hanford and Myers is shown next. This comedy team appears as headliners this week at Loew's Grand. On the right is shown a scene from "Seventh Heaven," which is the offering at the Forsyth theater this week.

GLIMPSES OF HOLLYWOOD

Los Angeles, September 18.—Estelle Taylor, who recently returned from the eastern training camp of her famous husband, Jack Dempsey, is enjoying the delights of her new Los Feliz home to the full. The training camp was hardly the most luxurious quarters in the world for a woman and Estelle says that she had no idea of how beautiful her home was until she returned to it. "Jack and I spent weeks waiting for a cheap grass rug that had been ordered for the living room of the training quarters, but it never did get there and we had to use one of the bedroom rag rugs for the floor." As she spoke she poked one dainty toe, encased in a red kid boudoir slipper with white fur top into the handmade roses of one of her own living room hooked rugs.

The new home is of English style, set far back within a terraced garden and broad lawn with towering eucalyptus trees forming a setting for the lofty gables of the gray stucco home. The whole house carries out the idea of the dwelling of an English country gentleman. A broad flagged veranda surrounds the living room with its long glassed doors opening in pairs. English chintz in shades of brown and rose in floral pattern, form the hangings and the simplicity of the large fireplace is inviting. Wrought iron furnishings of the plainest sort stand ready for the winter's fire while a large oaken chest with a ship's model above it on the wall stands at the opposite wall. The gray carpeting of the floor is relieved by the deft placings of the old-fashioned hooked rugs with their quaint colorings. The dining room shows the same tasteful simplicity with the oaken furniture contrasted by a large and golden tinted painting of an English landscape with a flock of sheep in the foreground.

The boudoir of the dainty Estelle herself is a beautiful setting—a pale almond green forms the coloring of the woodwork and the draping of the canopied bed and dressing table and filmy curtains with their ruffled overdrapes of taffeta. One large room on the second floor Estelle has left uncompleted to be the den of Jack Dempsey when he returns from his bout in the east. Estelle confesses that she has no desire to see Jack fight as she is sure that she would be overcome with the excitement. Jack also does not wish her to be present. Worry over her and how she might be taking things would be a strain on him, they both feel. Estelle will hear the news round by round over a specially arranged wire.

Meanwhile worries of her own are occupying the attention of Estelle. She was to have played with Valentino in his next picture based on the life of Cellini, the famous goldsmith and artist and her fate, pictorially speaking, now hangs in the balance. She is under contract to play in the picture and since $100,000 has been spent on it some disposition will have to be made of the story. Schenck, of United Artists, is of the opinion that putting any other actor in to do a role Valentino was to have done might offend public taste in which case the picture will not be made for some time. Estelle had given up the idea of playing Mary Magdalen with DeMille in his "King of Kings" because of the five-year contract she would have had to sign with him following it and now the picture she did choose is held up indefinitely. About Hollywood there is talk that John Barrymore may make the Cellini picture, or that Fairbanks may. Meanwhile, Estelle is doing her best to erase any hint of dull care from her brow by a new beauty recipe, that of using pure strained honey for her complexion. The honey is spread on the face and then patted gently. The skin of the face sticks to the hand on account of the honey and the resultant pull is more stimulating than a massage and yet is gentler than the regular rubbing.

Elinor Fair and her husband, William Boyd, have recently returned from their voyage aboard the clipper ships Indiana and Bohemia, which were used for filming scenes off Point Concepcion, in the "Yankee Clipper." It will be Elinor's last appearance before the camera for some time as an heir to the fortunes of the Boyd family is expected in the early winter. Elinor and Bill Boyd fell in love while both were working as the hero and heroine in "The Volga Boatman" and were married at the completion of the picture.

Marie Prevost, who used to be one of the lively dancing figures at the Hollywood cafes and parties, seems to have had about enough of that particular form of entertainment recently for the dance floors see her no more. The reason is easy to understand. She is working at the Metropolitan studio in a picture that requires her to play the role of a taxi dancer, one of those girls who dance with partners for 10 cents a dance. After seven or eight hours a day shooting this sort of stuff she loudly proclaims her preference for a show as the evening's entertainment where the fretting dogs may be put at ease under the seat of the man ahead.

DeMille, the man who made bath rooms socially acceptable, is outdoing himself in the gorgeousness he is using on the scenes for Mary Magdalen's home in "The King of Kings." The home of Magdalen, who is presented as a gorgeous courtesan of the time of the apostles, is a spacious palace with pools of water in the great reception room on which swans float gracefully among the vari-colored water lilies.

The walls above the fluted columns are extraordinary. They are totally covered with genuine gold leaf attached in small squares with one side fluttering free and the constant motion of the air makes the walls appear to tremble like quivering molten gold.

Magdalen herself is represented as a gorgeous creature clad mostly in jewels, black chiffon and quantities of auburn hair. A battle between a man and a leopard is staged in the palace to amuse the Magdalen. The jewels worn by her are numerous and magnificent, in elaborate settings. The bystander counted 13 rings on one hand.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer proved to be the scene of some strife this week, according to reports. Greta Garbo and Jack Gilbert are playing in "The Flesh and the Devil." Greta, who is nothing if not temperamental, became quite angry at something—at the studio it was agreed the prominence accorded Jack in the filming of several scenes was the cause of her outburst. Anyway, Greta was so angry that for three days she refused to work and sulked. The hard headed heads of the studio decided that if Greta didn't want to play in the picture someone else could be found.

Betty Compson was being given film tests for the role when Greta decided that perhaps Jack wasn't such a bad fellow after all and came back to work like a good little girl.

On Friday the two were working on such perfect terms of friendship that they slipped out the door of the set for a friendly little tete-a-tete. A passerby inadvertently glimpsed a perfectly good closeup of warm reconciliation that the camera was missing entirely and Jack and Greta seem to be great pals now since Beatrice Lillie is taking herself back to England and her titled English husband.

Hollywood has begun its insidious work on the personal habits of Lars Hanson, the Swedish actor, who played with Lillian Gish in "The Scarlet Letter." Hanson has no use for the demon nicotine and has had considerable difficulty in his European roles in nearly every one of which he has been obliged to puff something. When he played the puritan minister with Lillian Gish he was tickled to death because obviously he wouldn't need to smoke. But, alas, they brought out the smokes again for him and now he is sadly puffing his way through a carload of coffin nails in "The Flesh and the Devil."

Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton have made themselves up a joke that they are springing on all the fall-guys they can find. It goes like this:

Q. When is a rope not a rope?
A. When it's a board.
Q. Aboard what?
A. Aboard a ship, for then it's a line.

* * * *

The charming lyric of the A. E. F. with a mention of some article on the menu for every day in the week was forcibly called to mind this week on the Universal lot. Tuesday seemed eating day for on four adjoining stages the viands were being passed around simultaneously. Otis Harlan was eating an enormous meal in a racetrack restaurant in "Down the Stretch."

Charles Puffy was making a comedy just around the corner in which he was devouring a delicatessen lunch including watermelon, Swiss cheese, pumpernickel and such.

Edward Laemmle, directing his picture, was having mouthfuls of cold lunch between megaphone remarks.

Joe Murphy playing "Andy Gump" was devouring some of Min's biscuits on the last scene noted and then the visitor left, headed for the studio lunchroom.

HOWARD OFFERS FRANX CAMBRIA'S "CIRCUS WEEK"

That great American instution which is the delight of all, young and old—the circus—will be glorified by Frank Cambria's "Circus Week," which is the leading stage attraction at the Howard theater this week It is promised by Publix theaters, that "Circus Week" will eclipse Mr. Cambria's "Taka-Chance? week show, which scored such a tremendous hit with the Howard audiences a few weeks ago.

"Circus Week" is described as an abridged edition of the mammoth three-ring "World's Greatest Show," Jimmie Dunn cracking the whip as ring-master. In addition there will be a pony ballet, brass band, clowns and all the other adjuncts of a real, sure-enouzh circus. The performance starts with a parade before the footlights, with the main part of the show staged in two scenes, one showing the outside of a circus tent, with Jimmie Dunn as the barker and the other the arena under the big top.

Black Butterflies

Dorinda Maxwell had been repressed all her young life. But at last, as this new Constitution daily serial starts, she begins the pursuit of happiness --- with a vengeance. And she has the money to carry out her wild program.

So we find Dorinda doing nearly everything that a nice young lady is supposed not to do---the night club at midnight, the fountain bath in the garden at dawn, the roadhouse for breakfast, the wayside police station on the journey home. Dorinda leads a reckless pace for the Black Butterflies ---and wonders a little why some of her old friends neglect her.

A fascinating story, with action and romance --- hilarious parties, speeding, daring, dancing and drinking---and then love--- the greatest adventure of all. You'll be interested in the unique method this heroine employs to continue her gayeties without scandal, and the unexpected consequences.

Read this story of youth and freedom. The first chapter appears on this page and will be reproduced in Monday's Constitution. It will continue with an enticing chapter every day thereafter. Elizabeth Jordan's last daily serial in The Constitution was one of the most popular of Constitution daily serials. This story is even more charming.

....Again the four drinking companions had been cabareting... "I dare you take bash in fountain your fron' lawn," Chad had said unsteadily...Brilliant inspiration!—Dorinda, flimsy frock flying, had gaily carried out the dare. Such was hilarity among the "Black Butterflies" —it was great talk for the town ....

INSTALLMENT I.

A PASSIONATE DEFENSE.

Orson Hatch, senior member of the law firm of Hatch, Fuller and Kimball, relaxed in his swivel chair, rubbed his pink chin with the forefinger of a puffy hand, and turned a kindly eye on his client. He was grateful to her, for he was digesting an excellent luncheon, and as yet the demands of her business affairs had not been exacting enough to interfere with the process. Mr. Hatch had reached a stage in his development where meals held an importance in the scheme of things that lessened his zest for other matters. This noon he had eaten a wild duck with fried hominy and plum jelly, and he had resented the necessity of immediately thereafter discussing stocks, bonds, percentages, and the highway of life with a young person of whose conduct he strongly disapproved. He now admitted, however, that Miss Dorinda Maxwell, despite her temperament and her reputation, was making his task as simple as she could.

Her attitude was one befitting the feminine mind in the presence of its masculine superior. She listened to his exposition with a patience heretofore lacking during their interviews. She made it clear that her faith in him as her business adviser was absolute.

Being human, Mr. Hatch responded to the flattery of this position. He was even tempted to omit the delivery of an edifying address he had prepared, and which was designed to show his caller the error of her ways. To start in on that now would certainly interrupt the placid tenor of the present interview. It would disturb Miss Maxwell, it would disturb him, and it might even disturb the duck. Better, much better, end the audience on its present harmonious note.

Then, most annoyingly, the alarm clock of his conscience went off, and Hatch, who was an honorable man as well as an indolent one, recognized the call for what it was. He remembered a promise he had made to this girl's father. The job he had undertaken must be properly put through. He sighed, rubbed the bald place on his head with the pink finger, smoothed the white fringe that guarded the spot, and wearily squared himself to the necessary effort. The client facing him was a mere infant of twenty-two, and she was alone in the world. Her father and mother had been dead less than six months, yet already she had got out of hands. The town was humming with gossip about her. Members of its various circles were rolling scandalized eyes. Yes, he must talk to the girl—but how should he begin? He smiled at her quizzically, and though she had not intended to do so Miss Maxwell returned the smile. She understood what his hesitation had meant. She knew and dreaded what was coming. But when he smiled like that, she reflected, her lawyer looked like an embarrassed baby.

"Don't go yet, Dorinda," he said kindly, observing her restless movement. "The business talk is almost over, but there are several personal matters we have not touched on. For instance—am I right in believing that you are still living alone?"

"Yes, if you don't count two or three old retainers," his visitor lightly admitted.

"Old retainers?" The round, pink, smooth shaven face of Hatch took on a soft radiance. This was a relief! "You mean old servants—your father's housekeeper, for one?"

"Mercy, no!" The girl looked at him with the expression of one who has said farewell to patience. Clearly she was in for a sermon and a cross-examination as to her way of living—a subject of interest these days to every one who knew her.

"The old lot went several months ago," she hastily admitted, anxious now to make the inevitable explanation and be through with it. "You know father left Jane and John Kelly, our cook and butler, three thousand dollars each—they had been with us twenty years—so they started a roadhouse and cabaret near Hastings. They have made it very attractive," she earnestly added. "You ought to go there for dinner some time. The cooking is wonderful, and they have a splendid floor, and the best music within twenty miles. A lot of us—the Black Butterflies, you know—went out there the other night and danced till breakfast time. The Kellys would be glad of your patronage. Of course, I'm helping them all I can," she virtuously ended, and settled back in her chair with a contented smile.

After that, of course, the deluge. She had cleared the way for the lawyer by admitting all the charges that were in his mind, and she flattered herself she had done it thoroughly. Now, let him rave!

"That brings me to something I must say to you," he began seriously, while his listener inwardly grimaced. "Of course you realize that to go to a roadhouse at any time and dance all night with such a group as the one that calls itself the Black Butterflies"—he mentioned the name with distaste—"is a questionable performance. To do it within six months of your parents' death is really a shocking instance of bad taste. You won't mind my mentioning it——"

"O, but I do mind!"

His client, who had been lounging back in her chair with her knees crossed, revealing a surprising length of flesh colored silk stockings, now sat up straight and looked at him with hard, bright, gray-green eyes. "I mind it very much indeed. And—I'm going to be frank, too—you're simply wasting your breath."

Hatch flushed a deep pink and rubbed a white eyebrow.

"I must remind you——" he began.

"You needn't remind me of anything. I know my father left instructions for you to keep me in leading strings. It's just the sort of thing he would do. He had kept me in leading strings all my life, and he would jerk me about from his grave if he could. As he can't, he left the strings to you. But I don't intend to be pulled by them any longer."

At the look on the lawyer's face she stopped and leaned forward, speaking with a change of manner that included a certain dignity.

"Let's have this out for once and for all, Mr. Hatch," she suggested. "You know the kind of a man my father was, don't you?"

"Why, I——"

"You know perfectly well that he was the hardest, most contemptible, most hypocritical, most sanctimonious old fraud in the whole region—and that he hadn't a friend in the world. Don't you?"

"My dear Dorinda!"

"He broke my mother's heart. Years ago he made her an invalid. Six months ago he killed her as surely as if he had done it with an ax. He had a frightful temper under that pious look of his, and when he got angry he acted like a maniac. He raged into her room that night and bellowed at her for letting me go to Norma Davis' birthday party. It was the only party I had ever been asked to. Norma is one of the nicest girls in town, and she was the only friend I had—the only girl who dared to come near me. But father hated her because he hated her father. You know, Judge Davis had shown him up several times," she interrupted. "My heart was set on that party," she resumed, as Hatch did not reply, "so mother took the risk of letting me go, though she knew it would mean a terrible scene. I suppose it was the one brave act of her married life. She hadn't much spirit, poor darling. He had taken all that out of her."

She stopped, but Hatch was too wise to speak. The girl's defense was what he wanted, and at last it was pouring out with a passion that amazed him.

Originality - Exclusiveness in Wedding Stationery

Our customers are assured that they will find among our samples fashionable and artistic styles of engraving which have been adopted by the most critical purchasers. We say this with confidence because we know of no other engraving house in this country which originates designs and manufactures the master letters used in its work.

We have always manufactured the alphabets used in the production of our wedding invitation and card work--even in the conventional Script, Old English, Roman and Block letters and during recent years when a desire has been manifested for new styles, we have always designed and manufactured these master alphabets in our own factory. Our Script has an elegance of proportion that distinguishes it from others and the same remark applies to other styles.

"STEVENS TEXT" recently designed in our own artist room is our latest creation in artistic lettering for Wedding Invitations, Reception and Visiting Cards. Samples furnished upon request.

Our fifty years experience as Society Engravers has enabled us to carry out original methods in perfecting our work to a degree that makes these advantages of value to all of our patrons. J. P. Stevens Engraving Co., 103 Peachtree Street, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. Turman Sends Message To Ward Leaders and Members

"Vote, vote, vote and sign, sign, sign, on September 22" is the only thought for the next four days with members of the League of Women Voters.

Mrs. R. L. Turman sends this message to all ward leaders and members: "The work of the league is to serve the city of Atlanta in the most constructive way possible and during the next four days we have an opportunity to help in the two pieces of work that the league has stood for from its organization in 1920."

That is in the get-out-the-vote campaign, and in the charter campaign. The first explains itself. The second is a matter of the council manager charter for Atlanta.

As it has proved impossible to secure a vote on this charter at a time unconfused with other issues at the polls, it has been decided to raise a petition under the initiative clause in the present charter. This means that when 10 per cent of the registered voters sign a petition for an election on the charter, such an election must be called within the 30 days after the petition is presented to council.

The plan of the league is to have the petition near every polling place in the city on September 22. The question now is not whether one believes in the charter for this can be decided when the election on the charter takes place. The question now is whether or not the people of Atlanta are to be given their democratic right to vote on the council-manager charter unconfused by other issues at the polls.

All workers at the league booths are to meet at league headquarters, 356 Candler annex, at 3:30 o'clock on Monday, September 20, for the last instructions.

The workers at the booths will also give information to new voters as to the procedure of voting and the rules of the primary. They will welcome women who may not yet be registered but who desire to register at some future time and to inquire into what is necessary and to visit the polls.

O. E. S. Chapter Will Hold Rummage Sale.

Georgia chapter, No. 127, Order of the Eastern Star, will hold a rummage sale soon. All members having rummage will please communicate with Mrs. Strickland, Dearborn 1557-W; Mrs. Ivey, Main 3096-W, or Mrs. Hays, Main 0656-W.

Annual Bazar Will Be Held November 22, 23, 24

The date for the great annual bazar of the Atlanta Woman's club was announced Friday for November 22, 23 and 24 at the enthusiastic meeting of the central committee at the clubhouse, when splendid plans were developed for the work to go forward.

Mrs. John R. Hornady, general chairman, presided over the meeting and appointed committees which will begin at once their activities to make this the biggest and most successful exhibition of articles for sales ever displayed at the club.

Those appointed as chairmen for the state booths, a feature entirely new and one which will attract much attention, are Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, chairman for the North Carolina booth; Mrs. J. A. Carlisle, Alabama; Mrs. E. M. Helbig, Ohio; Mrs. Seth Mellon, Kentucky; Mrs. Lester Coffin, New Zealand. The state booths will not infringe upon the booths held by the departments and divisions of the club, because no member working actively in the departments will be expected to contribute to the state booths.

Prizes will be offered for the most attractive department or division booth as well as the most beautiful state booth exhibited.

Mrs. Norman Sharp will act as chairman for afternoon concerts, which will be a feature of each day's program and will be given by some of the leading artists of the city in music, art and dramatics.

Mrs. George Ripley is secretary for the committee and Mrs. George L. Turner, who is experienced in newspaper writing, has accepted the direction of publicity. Mrs. T. G. Delph has accepted the chairmanship of booth construction.

Many other committees have been appointed for booths, besides the departmental and divisional chairmen, who present artistic booths each year.

Garden Division To Meet Thursday.

The garden division of the Atlanta Woman's club will meet in palm room of the clubhouse Thursday morning, September 24, at 10:30 o'clock, Mrs. Joel Hunter, chairman, presiding.

Mrs. Fred Creswell will be the speaker of the occasion and will give a talk on Peonies. Mrs. Creswell has had wide practical experience in the culture of Peonies, and, as personal experience passed on to each other by members of the club, forms the basis of their plan of study, Mrs. Creswell's talk will be instructive and helpful. Mrs. Creswell exhibited the prize winning Peonies at the flower show held in May.

Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, president of the Atlanta Woman's club, announces that on October 11 the garden division will be hostess to all the Garden clubs in the fifth district, which on this date will stage a mammoth flower show. Mrs. Oscar Palmour is general chairman on arrangements for this afafir and is busy working out the details and extending invitations to the garden clubs.

Announcing A Message of Great Import to All Our Patrons

The Strike in the Coat Industry Enters Its 14th Week!

Undeniable facts and the unvarnished truth about the activities of J. P. Allen & Co. in maintaining its prestige as Atlanta's dominating style-value institution.

25% of the coat manufacturers in New York, producing 40% of the normal supply, have settled with the unions and are now working. Among these firms are the most outstanding show rooms in America. In no other city is there a strike existing in the coat industry. Since 20% of the entire coat production is made outside of New York, we have 60% of the normal flow of coats available for our purchasing.

You can rest assured that we will secure sufficient coats of high character from this production without increasing prices this season. In previous years, we and every other good merchant purchased the greatest share of our fall coats during September, for the simple reason that the coat volume does not reach its peak until the month of October.

It is also true that the coat industry had an overproduction of 25% to 50%. In face of these facts, we are buying coats in the New York market on our regular basis of operation and have no fears about supplying the demands of Atlanta at exceptional values.

You are assured that when the time comes that you need a new coat—you will find the newest styles here at the most reasonable prices. There will be no increased prices here. Neither will you find coats poorly made of inferior fabrics or carrying deficient fur sets and trims.

However, we have made a thorough research of every coat market away from New York such as Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and other centers where there is no labor trouble. We have purchased in these centers more coats than usual—but not at advanced prices, our New York affiliation being the greatest individual power in the industry is securing coats for your need. Hence there is no reason why women of Atlanta need have any doubt about the values this year.

It is also well worth knowing that the fall coat styles are not determined until early September as the authentic Paris openings are not held until the last of August and the first of September. Every coat now being purchased follows the newest tendencies of the new season, whereas coats purchased previous to the strike are styled after last year's models. There never has been a time when J. P. Allen & Co. could not supply the demands of Atlanta and today is no exception.

J. P. Allen & Co. assures Atlanta that there will be no advance of early season prices at this store! New Coats are arriving every day and they will arrive in increased quantities as the season advances. . . . .

The Rev. Dr. William H. Faust, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony in the presence of relatives and friends.

The church was artistically decorated with palms, ferns and lovely foliage plants. The pulpit of the church was banked with palms, and the choir loft garlanded with southern smilax. Beautiful white gladoli were used in white baskets, and arranged among the greenery. White tapers burned in cathedral candelabra at intervals among the palms and ferns.

A musical program was rendered before the ceremony. Miss Mammie Florence sang, "O Promise Me" and "I Love You Truly."

Wedding Party.

A groomsman and bridesmaid entered singly down each aisle. The groomsmen were Samuel Horton, C. P. McMurray, and Dr. Roland R. Stoker.

The bridesmaids were Miss Lucile Moon and Mrs. Ernest G. Thompson. They wore lovely gowns fashioned alike of pink taffeta, trimmed in ruffles with bouffant skirts. Their flowers were pink roses, tied with pink tulle.

Following her came the matron of honor, Mrs. J. E. Dawson, sister of the bride, who was gowned in orchid taffeta with an overskirt of tulle trimmed in ruffles and silver ribbon. Her flowers were pink roses and lavender asters, tied with orchid colored tulle.

The little flower girl, Clara Jane Lankford, came next. She wore a dainty little frock of blue georgette over flesh silk, and carried a basket of pink roses.

The little ring-bearer, Master Roy Thompson, preceded the bride, and carried the ring in a lily. He wore a suit of white satin.

Lovely Bride.

The bride entered with her brother, Paul E. Rusk, of Pittsburgh, Pa., who gave her in marriage. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Homer G. Cooper.

The bride was lovely in her wedding gown of white satin made with a basque waist, and circular skirt which was longer in the back and rounded up in the front. The waist was beautifully trimmed with a duchess lace bertha, and the skirt had inserts of the same lovely lace. Her only ornament was a diamond and platinum pin, the gift of the groom. The bridal veil was of white tulle. It was held to the head by a bandeau of rhinestones and pearls. The tulle was edged with silver lace, and trimmed with orange blossoms. Her flowers were a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley tied with white tulle.

Following the ceremony at the church the members of the wedding party were entertained informally at the home of the bride at 832 Highland avenue.

Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Morris left for a wedding journey to New York, Niagara Falls, Washington, D. C., and Canada. Upon their return they will make their home at 823 Highland avenue.

Miss Major Weds Mr. Cloud At Lovely Church Ceremony

A beautiful wedding of interest to their many friends was that of Miss Mary Major and William James Cloud which took place at the Druid Hill Presbyterian church, Thursday evening, at 7:30 o'clock.

The church was beautifully decorated with stately palms which formed a lovely background for the wedding party. On either side of the altar stood tall, white wicker backets filled with white dahlias. The pews for the immediate families of the bride and groom were marked with white satin ribbon, tulle, and orange blossoms.

Before the ceremony Mrs. E. Minor Forster rendered a beautiful program of nuptial music, the numbers including "Senta's Romance," and "Ritournelle." Mrs. Robert S. Bosley sang, "A Song of Thanksgiving," "God Touched the Rose," and "Because." During the ceremony "Bouquet to Julie" was softly played, the wedding march from "Lohengrin" being used as the processional and Mendelssohn's march as the recessional.

First to enter the church were the ushers, who acted also as groomsmen, William Childress, Joe Owens, Joe Haynes and G. B. Cassells. Next to enter was Mrs. J. Cosby Holt, a bridesmaid, followed by Mrs. Thomas Perry Fiske, another bridesmaid. The bridesmaids' dresses were fashioned alike of tan and bois-de-rose ming toy crepe with basque waists, half lace sleeves and full gathered skirts. Falling from the neck line at the back were black ribbon bows, which extended to the hemlines of the gowns. Their hats were picture models of black velvet and they carried large bouquets of piuk and white dahlias.

The bride entered with her brother, J. C. Major, who gave her in marriage. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, J. Cosby Holt. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Wade Hampton Boggs.

The lovely bride wore a three-piece suit of apple green crepe trimmed in bois-de-rose and embroidered with touches of silver. Her hat was a close fitting model of black with silver trimmings and she carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Cloud left for a ten days' trip to Washington, D. C., and Philadelphia after which they will be at home at 143 W. Tenth street, Atlanta.

Hungarian Artists Please Audience At Woman's Club

The Atlanta Woman's club presented in concert in the club auditorium two distinguished Hungarian artists, Madam Louise Varkomyi, dramatic soprano, and Dr. Bela Varkomyi, composer pianist, lately of the Royal State academy of Budapest and at present a member of the faculty of the Brenau College conservatory, at Gainesville.

The concert, a most artistic event, was given by Madam and Dr. Varkomyi as a compliment to the music committee of the Atlanta Woman's club, and was the first of a series planned for the coming year.

Seated in the boxes were the music committee of the Atlanta Woman's club, officers and executive members of the Atlanta Woman's club, the Atlanta Music club, the Fine Arts club, presidents and officers of the City's Federated clubs and members of the Brenau Alumnae association and a number of people from Gainesville, who are admirers of Dr. and Madam Varkomyi.

The special committee appointed from the Atlanta Woman's club included Miss Madeline Keipp, Mrs. Charles Chalmers and Miss Nana Tucker.

From the first sound of the first note of an aria from the orators, "The Seasons," until the last note of the aria from Opera Norma the audience was held spellbound by the exquisite interpretation of the musical program.

Madam Louise Varkomyi, who made her debut at the Royal Hungarian opera as Marguerite, in Faust, and Elizabeth, in Tannhauser, has a dramatic soprano voice, beautiful in tone and color, pure and flexible, combined with the power of interpretation. Her impressive stage presence and winning personality won the plaudits of the audience. The Rose, the Lily, the Dove, by Schuman, was a feat rendered with great effect.

The two numbers by Chopin arranged for voice and the charming songs by Dr. Varkomyi, gave the keenest delight to the audience. Dr. Bela Varkomyi, professor of piano and composition at the Royal State academy at Budapest from 1907 until 1923, has won recognition in Europe as a pianist and composer.

Dr. Varkomyi is a sympathetic accompanist, as well as a composer. His playing has the technique, tone and exquisite touch of the artist. His reading of the "Sonata Apassionata," by Beethoven, was very fine, especially in the second movement. His brilliant playing of the Luzt Rhapsody merited the applause which he received. At special request he played two of his own compositions which showed a distinct style. An invitation was given the audience at the conclusion of the program to visit the exhibition of the works of Mr. Murray, portrait painter, who is also of Hungarian nationality.

Mrs. Ottley and Mrs. Fitzpatrick Talk at Hapeville Club

Mrs. John K. Ottley and Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick talked to the Hapeville Woman's club Thursday afternoon on, "The Growth, Purpose, and Needs of the Tallulah Falls Industrial School." Mrs. Ottley and Mrs. Fitzpatrick presented the familiar story of the work which is being done by the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs at Tallulah Falls, in a way that is ever new and refreshing.

Mrs. Ottley, as chairman of the board of directors, and Mrs. Fitzpatrick, as a member of that body and as past president of the Georgia federation, have spent much time in the school and are familiar with all phases of the life, work, and needs of the pupils. They related many incidents of human interest, which showed a deep sympathy with the under-privileged children, of our own blood and breed, who have been shut off, in the fastnesses of the Appalachian highlands, from the opportunities which education affords and who are now being given a chance in life at the Tallulah Falls school. This school, as its name implies, not only provides academic training, but supplies instruction in manual arts, horticulture, handcrafts, home care, and the duty of an American citizen toward God and home and native land.

Mrs. Ottley stressed the fact that the need, now, is for a maintenance fund, rather than for further endowments for buildings. She pictured the greater Tallulah plant, as it now stands, with 30 acres of land and eight buildings, equipped with electric lights, sufficient to justify the name of "Light in the Mountains" (both lines and power, being a gift of the Georgia Railway and Power company), and all other modern conveniences, in contrast with its meager beginning in tribute to the memory of Mrs. Mary Ann Lipscomb, in the idea the school 1909, with one small school building and five acres of land.

Mrs. Ottley paid a beautiful little was really begun many years before in the heart of Mrs. Lipscomb, who encouraged her granddaughters, Mrs. Ewell Gay and Mrs. Joel Hurt, Jr., who were then Adgate Ellis and Virginia Lipscomb, to teach summer school in a little room under the jail, and, as a special inducement to teachers and pupils, served lemonade and cake, or other light refreshments, in the afternoon.

Musical and Social Program.

Mrs. Emma Moore, chairman Tallulah Falls committee, of the Hapeville club, secured the speakers of the afternoon and Mrs. S. E. Treadwell arranged a delightful musical program, which consisted of two vocal solos by Mrs. Emory Murck, accompanied by Mrs. Ida Bell Backus, "Come to the Garden," and "Goodby Summer," and a piano solo by Mrs. Backus.

The social committee, Mrs. J. Raymond Cathy chairman, arranged a social hour and served punch after the program.

Serious Illness of Mascot.

A general sadness pervaded the meeting on account of the serious illness of one of the little mascots, Elena Wells, the two-and-a-half-year-old daughter of Jere Wells, superintendent of the county school system and Mrs. Wells, first president of the Hapeville club. Little Elena is critically ill with diphtheria. A silent prayer for her recovery was requested and all friends of the Wells family, and of the club, will be glad to hear that, at the time of the writing of this article, there is hope of her recovery.

Miss Redmond Is Feted Bride-Elect.

A social event of Saturday was the bridge-tea given by Mrs. Roy England at her home on Callan circle, complimenting Miss Lelia Redmond, a bride-elect of October.

Among those present were Miss Ina Parks, Miss Rosalind Lunsford, Miss Eva Mewborn, Mrs. Emma Richards, Mrs. Leon Askew, Miss Inez Pergantis, Miss Eleanor Bracewell, Mrs. Mabel Hyer, Mrs. R. D. Robinson, Mrs. Margaret Montgomery, Miss Billie Mills, Miss Dorothy Ray, Miss Leslie Redmond, Miss Lelia Redmond, Mrs. Clifton Kemper and Mrs. England.

The new browns of this year—for the autumn will never be quite complete without reflecting its own colors in clothes—belong to a new and lively family. They run into rose-orange and rust and the fire-yellows, with the deep color of tete-de-negre for a base. Agnes, of Paris, gave them a story and a flavor when she used them in her new turbans and christened them "African colors."

THE mode of today calls for hats of velour, felt and antelope in many styles featuring the new high crown which can be draped to become the type of any woman. They are smart creations, distinguished by a rippled brim—tucks in the crown and finished with a matching or contrasting grosgrain ribbon.

At M. Rich & Bros. Company are blocks of hats unshaped in these materials for your choosing in all the most fashionable colors, including black, wild honey, Valencia blue, jungle green and chanel red, etc. They are unmatched for their versatility and smartness and are draped to fit your head. Individual effects can be had by draping and it is done by an expert in the art who studies your type and contour—the results are chic and distinctive, you may be sure. Have your fall hat made at Rich's and you can be assured of a chapeaux de style—becoming and smart.

Among the things nouveaux that Parisian couturiers are doing with fabrics this season, one of the most striking is the combination of velvet and dull crepes. Velvet trimming is especially effective against the completely lustreless background of crapella.

The idea of the bloused effect is everywhere. An all-around bloused line is very significant in both frocks and coats.

* * * *

DAME FASHION decrees that frocks for Milady this Autumn and Winter must be trimmed with fur in one way or another—but fur must be on them—mink, squirrel, seal and ermine, etc. It is ultra chic and adds a touch to any gown that is not to be obtained in any other way.

Snakeskin is much favored as a trimming, too, and is seen on the boulevards of Paris and on Fifth avenue in New York, in all of the smart shops. They are both le dernier cri this season in ornamentations.

Buckles! Buckles! Frocks must have buckles! Especially are the ones of rhinestones distinctive in beauty of design for afternoon, dinner and evening gowns. It would be difficult to conceive of a more complete or more beautiful array of rhinestone ornaments than are being displayed at M. Rich & Bros. Company. They will appeal to Madame and Mademoiselle of the most discriminating tastes. Whatever your requirements are, either in fur or snakeskin trimmings or ornaments of rhinestones, etc., for your new fall frocks they may be fulfilled at Rich's from their wonderful collection. There is not a more varied or complete assortment in Atlanta to choose from and the selection should be tres facile, too.

YESTERDAY while walking up North Forsyth street to keep a business engagement, I saw in front of the Rogers store windows at 29 North Forsyth street, a crowd gathered together. They were very much interested in watching the large white leghorn hen with her wings outstretched, in her nest laying the prettiest, whitest eggs you can imagine. Every minute a new egg is added to those already laid—a whole nest of them is there to attract you and tempt your appetite—eggs everywhere.

Rogers make a specialty of having in all of their 300 or more stores for you the largest, prettiest eggs that can be obtained anywhere. They are quality eggs and each of them is candled before being placed on sale, thus assuring you of their freshness and goodness. Not long ago I had the pleasure, and it was a pleasure, too, to be invited to make a visit to the tremendous warehouse of the Rogers stores out on Whitehall street to see the products of every kind and description as they come in to the warehouse—how they are kept by electrical refrigeration and how they are handled and delivered to their various stores about the city. The egg candling department especially interested me, because in the first place I like eggs, nice and fresh, cooked in any way whatever, and then, too, eggs are a necessity that every housewife uses more of than most any other article in preparing her menus. I was much impressed by the manner in which they were so carefully tested, and since then whenever I buy eggs from Rogers I enjoy them all the more. You can depend on them being fresh always.

The Rogers stores have a special price on eggs just now, at 39 cents a dozen. They are fine, so when you go there to do your marketing be sure to buy lots of them. They are wonderfully fine eggs and the price asked for them is astounding—so much goodness for such a small expenditure.

Usually when one thinks of breakfast they think of bacon and eggs—everybody likes both—they are so appetizing.

Speaking of bacon, just think of a full pound of sliced breakfast bacon with the rind off, for 39 cents. It will be delicious accompanied by eggs, cooked any style I never ate nicer bacon or with a better flavor than this bacon Rogers is offering you specially priced. When you are down town go by and see the hen sitting in her nest laying eggs every minute—it's interesting. And besides, it is a symbol of the freshness of all the eggs in all the Rogers stores. They are fresh laid, too, and gathered from the hen yard and delivered to the warehouse of the Rogers stores and candled and you get them as fresh as if from your own yard.

The return of black, long expected, has come with a rush. The black coat with silver fox, the black afternoon dress—demand a black shoe. Blues, from cornflower to navy, call for black as the only possible chic accent. The black shoe—all black, or touched with color—must be represented in the shoe wardrobe of every smart woman.

Ruth

THE WILL OF FASHION—

The chic Fall day is divided by three—and the first of the three is town. For street, the smart woman will be seen in sport ideas of kasha, jerseys, crepe and velvet; she will also be in French Repp, and Frost Crepes and will show dull satin combined with velvet very good. One important street line will bring together a front drape, the Dolman sleeve and a tight hip line. Be guided by these notes—for the woman so alined meets the will of Fashion—

For the afternoon chiffon is first among the favored; your Coat protects you in the wind, then doff at the cozy tea, chiffon is right. Transparent velvet is extremely good, and Elizabeth Crepe combined with velvet, fine! Romaine is also smart and metallic brocades for afternoon important.

for dance

Evening dances around the bouffant, the straight line and a whirling fringe! Morie often makes a partner of velvet; and a metallic cloth as soft and sheer as gay chiffon is coming out; there is a grandeur new to after six . . . with Bordeaux Red, Lido Blue, Crushed Strawberry, Eggplant, Black, and White the colors Fashion wills!

Mental Journey's Superceded By Atlantan's New York Trip

Miss Helen Ward Thompson, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Halsey Thompson, who returned last week from her initial trip to New York, marking the first time she had ever been outside of Georgia's boundary lines. She is the gifted author of "O Journey Again" and other poems. Photograph by Francis E. Price, staff photographer.

By Bessie S. Stafford.

Miss Helen Ward Thompson, Atlanta's illustrious 18-year-old poet, has made many mental journeys, but her first material journey carried her to New York in July, where her spirit of adventure had free rein, and the chains of imagination were let loose.

It was her first trip on a Pullman. She had never before boarded a train save to go from Savannah to Tybee island. Every time she left Atlanta she traveled in an automobile. And, strange as it may seem, Miss Thompson had never left Georgia, the state where she was born, until the choo choo train bore her to the metropolis.

It was the first trip alone for the author of "O Journey Again, and Other Poems," concerning whose poetic antics newspapers have published columns. Her big, heavenly blue eyes opened wider and wider, her expression glowed with animation, and her golden curls bobbed in fascinating rhythm, as she talked about the tremendous appeal of Greenwich Village, its historical background and the magic influence of its quaint little gardens flavored with romance. Poetry was forgotten. She was telling about her first journey in real life.

Loses Inferiority Complex.

She left her inferiority complex (something which has worried her terribly) somewhere in the famous village, declaring that contact with its people has made her more self-reliant, cosmopolitan and individual in her ideas and tastes.

The architectural beauty of New York's buildings and churches greatly impressed Miss Thompson, but the edifice which pleased her most was St. Luke's Episcopal church, built in Greenwich in 1822, and surrounded by a formal garden. She visited the site upon which once stood the house of Tom Paine, author of the "Age of Reason," at 59 Grove street, and admired the home of Edna St. Vincent Millay, who wrote the remarkable poem "Renascence." The tiny house turns one side to the street, and shuttered blinds protect the windows.

Her very being vibrated with the life of the village, and she had a great thrill out of the visit to the "Pepper Pot," a tea room where autographed pictures of famous people are tacked on the walls. Another thrill registered when she walked down the gangplank one evening into the "Pirates' Den" a cafe where the waitresses wore smocks, smoked cigarettes, and were members of the artists' colony residing in the village.

Scope for Imagination.

Chinatown afforded great scope for imagination. Its brass shops were entrancing and the reaction of the tour down Allen street has inspired Miss Thompson to write a poem on "Brasses." Before visiting Chinatown she had a fear of being kidnaped, but this feeling wore away once she was in the district, and with it came a broader understanding of its life and people.

A great desire to kneel and pray stole upon her on entering Trinity church. She was in the holy of holies. The church yard breathed an atmosphere of romance and mystery, with its half-erased lettering on the headstones, and she was particularly drawn to the burial place of Alexander Hamilton, the statesman, whose life upon this earthly sphere she admires, and the graves of the sea captains intrigued her, for she loves the majesty and kindness of the ocean, and quickly responds to its various moods. Under its powerful influence her one desire is to be a viking.

Romantic Flavor.

There's quite a romantic flavor to the New York trip which has converted this little Atlanta girl into a cosmopolite. Her escort, by day and night, during the length of her visit was a young journalist who had read her book of poems, and sought an introduction through these channels. She stopped at the Rayon school on Riverside drive, being next to the youngest girl there, and one of two southerners. She instantly became the pet of the place. Her objective in New York was to take a two-point course in art and environment at Columbia university. The studies required her to report for classes in the afternoon of every other day. Consequently, she could take delightful excursions around the city during her vacation periods.

Possessing a wonderful personality with the sunshine of her engaging smile radiating good humor, she might well be likened to the elves she feels akin to, for Miss Thompson believes strongly in fairies, especially those that help one to enjoy life. According to her theory, everybody has a personal angel to take care of them.

No tragedy has ever entered this charming girl's life, but she is easily moved to tears over another's sorrow. Her sense of humor is very keen, and she says luck plays a most important part in everybody's career. She is all British Isles, in ancestry, with the humorous Irish strain predominating.

The sea voyage from New York to Savannah via boat, rounded out the experiences of a perfect summer and so disdainful was the thought of sea sickness, that she gave her prevention pills away, and had no reason to be ill.

"Prince o' Dreams."

Miss Thompson, who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Halsey Thompson, began to write poems before she was 6 years old, and her second book, "Prince o' Dreams," is at present in the making, but will be ready for the press in about six months. She only has to copy and edit the poems. Already entered upon her sophomore year at Agnes Scott college, she is bent upon winning many merits.

Fashion Seems to Have Ushered in a New Reign of Elegance—the Raiment of Royalty—and Velvet Becomes the Outstanding Fabric at Paris Displays. Luxurious Velvets in All Their Splendor Accent the Opening Monday of

Keely's Famous Department of Better Silks

Velvet — the cloth of royalty — the pride of princes of church and state—the envied raiment of court ladies in the days of royal splendor—has come into first place again, and becomes the star of first magnitude in the galaxy of fine silks at Keely's.

Paris applauds — New York approves — Keely's brings them to you.

Velvets from world-famous weavers of France and Germany! Velvets from America's greatest producers of silks of elegance! Velvets that sound a new note in the symposium of fashion, and a sweet chord of harmony in the song of style!

Velvets of new texture. The quality, beauty and grandeur of former fabrics perfected with a richness, softness and lightness that gives it a luxurious draping effect for street, dinner, evening, formal and demi-formal costumes.

A gown of velvet will, more than ever, lend distinction, style and dignity to milady's wardrobe, and a dress of Keely's velvet is a certificate of smartness.

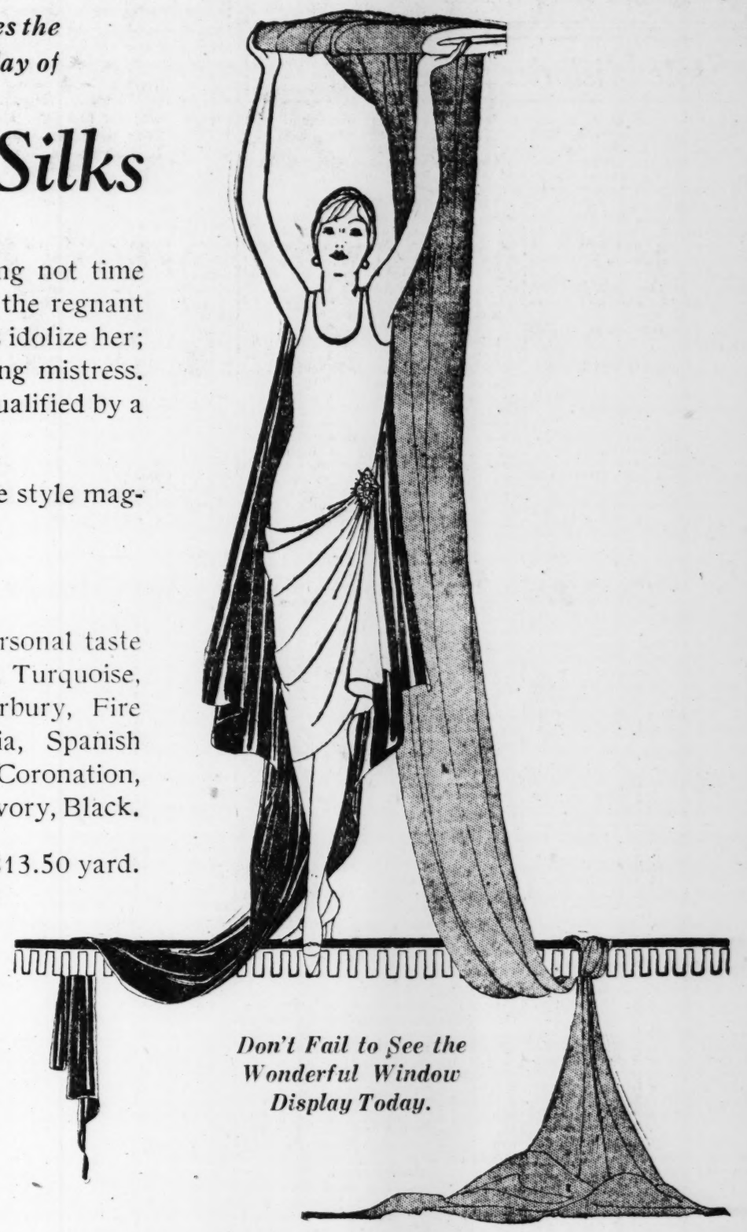

What is Style? Impalpable, elusive, knowing not time nor place, it springs suddenly on the horizon as the regnant queen of the hour. All bow to her; good dressers idolize her; beauty is her slave! Howbeit, she is an exacting mistress. Her devotees must be equipped with taste, and qualified by a sense of the beautiful.

Intuitively the smart dresser is drawn by the style magnet, and senses the canons of good taste.

Keely's velvets accent the highest styles.

The colors expressive of individuality and personal taste are here—Lapis Blue, Peacock Blue, Royal Blue, Turquoise, Sea Green, Jade Green, Jungle Green, Canterbury, Fire Weed, Lavender, Rose, Gold Senorita, Valencia, Spanish Gold, Ashes of Rose, Geranium, Conch Shell, Coronation, Putty, Gray, Rust, Chanel, Brown, Navy, White, Ivory, Black.

Widths, 40 to 41½ inches. Prices, $6.50 to $13.50 yard.

Multi-Colored Metal Cloths

With the soft regal richness of velvet you will want to combine the dash, sparkle and splendor of metal cloth whose multi-hued beauty in contrast is vivaciously appealing. For evening wraps and dresses it is also the choice of stylists. Numerous combinations of brilliant harmonious colors as well as plain gold and silver are shown at Keely's at $9.50 to $16.50 a yard.

Dame Fashion Is a Beauty-Loving, Youth-Adoring Mistress—Attest:

The New Party Frocks and Evening Gowns at Keely's

Party and evening gowns that will most correctly elevate milady to the highest plane of Fashion's exclusive realm will be sequinned and jeweled, and they will be elaborate and very chic. The soft colors of feminine tenderness, as well as those of vivacious charm, will be embellished with sequins, rhinestones, pearls, beads to give an uneven surface to the dress. The silhouette with a frankly expressed high waistline and an uneven skirt with a clinging, dripping hem is undeniably in favor. The blouse effect is very pronounced.

Several beautiful examples of sequinned gowns are shown in our window today, and these are but an index to the lovely creations that are shown in our ready-to-wear department on the second floor.

It is interesting to note that, although the stylists' art has been most appealingly rendered, our prices are remarkably modest. We invite lovers of beautiful apparel to this section tomorrow.

"You Just Know She Wears Them"

Stockings to match furs. Stockings to match hats. Stockings to match frocks. Stockings to match shoes—or, perhaps, quite the reverse! Stockings that must contrast harmoniously to create the effect so desired by the well-dressed woman. What a problem, this one of getting exactly the right shade, the right weight, the correct style for each costume, for each occasion. How impossible, for the woman who knows just what she wants in hosiery, to find it except among an assortment of the very widest range.

That is why fashionable women invariably select McCallum hosiery. And they have a delicate transparency combined with great tensile strength. What incredible craftsmanship in the myriad nigh-invisible silken threads? Shades? Why, there are more than the modest rainbow ever dreamed of showing.

The Corset-Style's Foundation

Your new gown, whether selected from the models shown in the shops or created according to your individual taste, should be fitted over a corset that will give your figure the slenderizing grace and charm that you expect your gown to effect.

Select a corset that has an elusive, clinging grace—soft, slender lines—and lends to your figure that jauntiness of irrepressible youth.

You can have it. We have just received the new models in wrap-arounds, step-in girdles, and back and front lace corsets, featuring "Madame Lyra" and "LaPremiere," in silk brocades, batiste and coutile, for every type of figure, for the growing girl as well as the sedate matron. They have six garters, two inserts of elastic, shoulder straps of elastic, and boned over the diaphragm to insure comfortable support.. Prices, $5 to $15.

We are also showing "W. B. Doublette" and "Nature's Rival" girdle brassieres and every type of corset brassiere to meet the stylists' demand for proper dress. Prices, $2.95 to $15.00.

And there are the bandettes and bust confiners in short, medium and long length, made of beautiful jerseys, all-over lace, striped batiste and satins. Sizes are 30 to 48, and prices 98c to $10.95.

Judging Her Style by Her Shoes

It's a long span from the days of the old cobbler with his lasts and leathers and square wooden pegs to the artisan of today who shapes into being the beauties of fashion!

Time was when milady chose her shoes merely from sizes of last, with very little left for her artistic judgment to decide. Today, at Keely's, she may gratify her taste, esthetic and discriminating as it may be, from a collection of more than fifty styles, each one an exclusive model, designed especially for Keely's.

The materials are kid, patent leathers and satins in new fall shades and black. Many have quarters and trims of contrasting colors, either solid or of reptilian skins. Prominent among the combinations are pumps of blond kid with cherry red patent leather quarter and cobra snake with dark brown patent leather quarter.

Heels are extremely high and toes modified.

Illustrated is "THE VOGUE," a seamless opera pump with square throat and high Spanish heel. It is shown in patent leather only, and is the style of the hour for afternoon and all formal occasions.

Whatever your choice, you'll find it at Keely's. Prices range from $10. to $15.

"The Vogue"

Buckles of rhinestone and cut steel at $2.50 to $15.

Rhinestone heels, some with motifs outlined with imitation rubies, garnets or sapphires, at $12.50 to $20.

Send News Direct To D. A. R. Editor.

Let me again stress the futility of sending any news pertaining to the D. A. R., direct to The Atlanta Constitution, as it will not be used. Everything thus sent is remailed to the D. A. R. editor, which causes annoyance and useless trouble to The Constitution force. Let us show our appreciation of the many courtesies extended by this paper to the D. A. R., by discontinuing this practice. The D. A. R. editor will be glad to handle any matter sent to her and always appreciates your cooperation.

School Pupils Write On "Study of Art."

Miss Lorraine Gregory, pupil of the seventh grade in the Hoke Smith Junior High school, was the successful winner for writing the best letter on "Why All Seventh Grade Pupils Should Take Art," Miss Gregory competing with a large number of seventh grade pupils for the honor. The following is a copy of Miss Gregory's letter:

"All seventh grade pupils should take art because it makes them appreciate the woods, the sunset, spring and all of nature's beautiful work more. The girls should take art because it helps them to select their dresses and hats. It teaches them what colors should go together. It helps them to select the furniture, pictures and all the furnishings for their home, and how to arrange them. If they work it teaches them how to furnish their place of business.

"The boys should take art because if they go to college it teaches them about drawing. If they are business men it teaches them how to furnish their offices also. If they were florists it would teach them how to arrange the flowers in wreaths, in baskets, in bouquets and in the windows. It also helps them to select their suits, ties, hats and sox.

"All seventh grade pupils should take art because if they are talented, it is much easier to start then, because as you get older it gets harder."

Junior High Letter.

Eugene Hickman, pupil of the Hoke Smith Junior High school, was awarded prize for writing best letter on "Why Every Junior High School Pupil Should Study Art." His letter is as follows:

"It is necessary for industry to have its roots in art if it is to be permanent, for art is coming to live with industry. The money value of design, grace and charm outsell the commonplace and homely. The Southern States Art league has been organized and has given Atlanta one exhibition. This art league is developing southern talent, which in this section, has been neglected. But which should be well known. Art is the effort of man to express the ideas which nature suggests to him.

"You should study art, for some day you may become an artist. Art should be known in this section as it is known in New Mexico, New England and the west. It is education that develops the noblest and best in us."

Fashion Revue Nets Over $4,000 For Tallulah Endowment Fund

Mrs. Williard C. Patterson, prominent federated worker for the Tallulah Falls school, under whose successful chairmanship the publicity for the fashion revue given by M. Rich & Brothers, at the auditorium last Tuesday evening, netted over $4,000 for the Passie Fenton Ottley endowment fund. The press work was a tremendous undertaking and involved remarkable executive ability and zeal, valuable characteristics possessed by Mrs. Patterson, who also gave valuable aid towards the greater Tallulah campaign, her brilliant publicity efforts bringing marvelous results.

Over $4,000 was realized from the fashion revue and dance staged in the auditorium armory Tuesday evening for the Passie Fenton Ottley endowment fund, arranged by M. Rich Bros., so that every penny accruing from the revue was placed toward the worthy cause of educating the underprivileged mountain children of North Georgia, at the same time honoring Mrs. John K. Ottley, of Atlanta, president of the Tallulah Industrial school board of trustees, who is the guiding spirit of the school, owned and maintained by the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs. The largest lump sum added to the fund resulted from the revue.

Substantial contributions to the Passie Fenton Ottley scholarship endowment fund comes from Mrs. Kate Kreen Hess, prominent Atlanta clubwoman and leader in educational work, who has given a lot in the Western Heights subdivision.

Proceeds from the sale of the lot will go to swell the rapidly growing scholarship fund that is to be named in honor of Mrs. John K. Ottley. The gift from Mrs. Hess was reported by Mrs. Norman Sharp at a recent meeting of the committee in charge of raising the fund. Since the movement was inaugurated six weeks ago approximately one-half the proposed $30,000 has been subscribed.

The September meeting of the O'Keefe Junior High school was the largest and most enthusiastic ever held by the organization. Mrs. W. L. Schell, second vice president, spoke on the aims and purposes of the parent-teacher organization, called for the report from the executive board. This report, given by Mrs. Frances Jones, was as follows: "We, the executive board, recommend that the resignation of Mrs. C. F. von Herrmann as secretary of our association be accepted. We also express our deep regret that our very efficient president of the last year, Mrs. Roy Collier, will not be able to continue in the office this year on account of ill health. We, therefore, recommend as our president for the current year Mrs. C. F. von Herrmann, who resigns as secretary to accept this office, and we recommend for first vice president Mrs. J. P. Faulkner." The report was unanimously accepted by the association.

Mr. Hastings, principal, explained about the double sessions that are temporarily necessary in the seventh grade and assured the parents that the children are losing none of their work by this arrangement.

The speakers of the evening were Miss Annabelle Horne, teacher of Latin in the Girls' High school, and Miss Pierce, of the Commercial High school. They explained that by cooperation and adjustment the junior high schools and the senior high schools have been made to work together into a harmonious whole, so that no break is felt in passing on from one school to the other.

Williams P.-T. A. Discuss Plans.

The association of Williams Street school started the new year Thursday. Mrs. Aenchbaker, the vice president, having moved to another school, left a vacancy, which caused the unanimous election of Mrs. K. McChesney. A pre-school age circle will be organized soon and other chairmen will be appointed. Professor Sutton's health campaign was discussed.

The president has secured a physician and a dentist who will speak to the parents at the next meeting. This meeting will be held on the night of October 21 at 8 o'clock, giving a chance for one or both parents of a child to be present.

The mothers indorsed the fight on diphtheria; every child under ten years of age will receive the treatment to prevent such dread disease. Atlanta Camp Fire Groups Plan Interesting Activities

Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the Atlanta Camp Fire Girls, was present and gave greetings.

Miss Mary Louise Hollands, executive, gave the plans for the new fall work including a training course which will begin October 21. Any who would like to take advantage of this course can communicate with headquarters and be registered.

This trophy is presented once a month to the group having attained the highest mark of efficiency. Miss Elizabeth Eubanks' group from the Ormewood school now holds the trophy.

Miss Yzobel Spring told of the exhibit which Camp Fire will have at the Southeastern fair this year. The booth is already built and the chairman is at work to win the first prize. Plans were given by Miss Hollands for a city-wide picnic to be held at Stone Mountain, Saturday, September 25.

The picnic at Stone Mountain will be one of the biggest things done by the Atlanta Camp Fire Girls in some time. All girls are invited to go, but are asked to come in groups with their guardian, a mother, or assistant in charge. Everybody will meet in front of the Grant building on Walton street, between Broad and Forsyth streets by 9:15 o'clock, as the special chartered car will leave promptly at 9:20 o'clock. Guests are asked to bring 40c to cover the car fare and to bring a picnic lunch. If possible it would be well to wear either a head band or an arm band to distinguish each group. A track meet will be one feature of the afternoon program. Each guardian or mother in charge is asked to call headquarters, Walnut 3577, by Thursday about the number who will go on the picnic.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

Edna Ferber.

Show Boat, by Edna Ferber, who says that it is neither history nor biography, but fiction—old-time fiction. She says that she makes this statement in the hope that there will be no future protests "registered by demon statisticians against certain liberties taken with characters, places and events." The first thing in writing a play is to give details for the information of the reader—this assistance has not been forgotten by Miss Ferber as will be seen in the following:

The Time: From the gilded age of the 1870's through the '90's and on and on to the present day.

The Scene: The earlier part of the story is staged on the Cotton Blossom, a floating show boat on the old Mississippi. Twice a year this mighty boat was towed up and down the river and became a familiar sight from New Orleans to the northern cities, from Pennsylvania to St. Louis, where the old-time favorites, "East Lynne," "Tempest and Sunshine," "Hazel Kirke" and other dramas were played by members of the Cotton Blossom troupe. The old settlers all up and down the Mississippi will remember the pleasure given them by this troupe.

The Players: Among the players was Captain Andy Hawkins and his wife, their daughter, Magnolia; Gaylord Ravenal, gambler, getnleman of fortune, etc., and others who were habitues of old South Clark street, Chicago, also including actors and dramatic critics of the present theatrical world of New York city.

The book is dedicated "To Winthrop Ames, who first said 'Show Boat,' to me." The reader perhaps will wonder a little about the conversation that inspired this and naturally, there would have to be many passengers or players, and if this was the case why shouldn't Edna Ferber make a good old-time, after de war story out of it?

"Show Boat" is going to be popular with three generations. It is going to be read and discussed, favorably and unfavorably. Edna Ferber will like that. Her description of some of the characters is too well pronounced not to be recognized. They will not like that. But with its local color of the Mississippi river and the activity of the passengers on the annual trips of the Show Boat the public is going to buy it, therefore it can at this time be called a best seller. Doubleday, Page & Co., New York.

EDNA FERBER.

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

The Wondering Moon. By George Weston, whose book, "Many Minds Her Business," was such a popular readable-sort-of-a-story. Of his new book the following has already been said: "Here's a gay one-ring romance with an extra heroine, a spare hero, a lost fortune, and a real mystery to be solved."

The story is delightfully entertaining and can indeed be called a first class wholesome romance written in Mr. Weston's usually clever style. (Dodd Mead & Co., New York).

The Luckybug Lode. By Arthur Preston Hankins, who wrote "Canyon Gold," a splendid western story. As th title implies, he has written another story of the west which he has woven around a gold mine and connected with which there are feuds, greed, pasion and great love. There are the usual western characters which it takes to make up a thrilling story of frontier life. (Macaulay Publishers, New York).

Whelps of the Wind. By Rufus King, author of "North Star," but no more interesting story has the author written than in his creation of "Waif," a great dog, and his owner, with a setting in the Rio Grande country.

The theme, given as an introduction to the story, says in the first paragraph "Among dogs as it is among men, there are the 'black sheep' of their kind—wanderers of the wastelands.

"Thoroughbreds—mongrels—of any race, color, or creed—there is no telling upon whom the baleful star will shine, even as it shown upon the mongrel in this story and upon a man whom they called Jim Stone." (George H. Doran Co., New York).

The Lost Pearl. By Francis D. Grierson, author of "The Limping Man," of which Dr. William Lyon Phelps said at the town hall in New York, "If you haven't had the grippe you probably have it now or are likely to have it this winter and there is no better way to convalesce than to read Grierson's "The Limping Man," which is one of the best detective stories I have ever read." (Edward J. Clode, Inc., New York).

Men Call It Love. By Inez Sabastien, who has written a novel of vital daring and picturesque Gothamites. The story opens with the following conversation: "I simply must see this reporter; she insists on an interview; I haven't the faintest idea what to say. I shan't be a moment—don't run away."

"How do you do?" said Mrs. Fitzmaurice. "Now just what is it that you wanted? I'm so rushed, you see——"

"Let my picture be published? I couldn't! It would kill me to have my picture appear in the papers." During this conversation Mrs. Fitzmaurice was busy in her desk looking for the latest pictures she had had made. This is the beginning of the story of a poor worked-to-death little reporter who finally gives up the game and marries a prominent and wealthy man who has been attracted by her beauty and her weary look on life. (Macaulay, New York).

Overhead. By Ruby M. Ayres, who takes up the broken threads of a love dream and with skillful fingers weaves a thrilling romance—a story of sacrifice and drama. Finally the tangled threads have been smoothly woven into a smooth piece without any flaws, and love born of courage is the winner. (Doran's Book).

Honeymoon's End. By Howard Rockey, who wrote "Daughters of Luxury" and other stories. This story is filled with many climaxes and thrilling incidents. (Macaulay, New York).

THE SPELL OF FRENCH CANADA

The Story of French Canada, by Frank Oliver Call, M. A., professor of the University of Bishop's college, and author of "In a Belgian College," begins its interest with the paper cover, the design of which is then transferred to the real cover of the book in beautiful colors of blue, green and gold. The frontispiece is reproduced from a painting by E. M. B. Warren and is entitled "An Outdoor Oven, Richelieu Valley." This handsome volume is filled with beautiful illustrations that will appeal to the reader and will be a source of delight to the travelers who have had the pleasure of enjoying their beauty. There are more than fifty illustrations and these, with a map of the "province of Quebec, make it unusually attractive and instructive.

In the preface the following comment is made: "The spell which French Canada exercises over those who visit it for the first time is a potent one. To those who have long lived within its borders it is stronger still, and its strength increases with the passing years."

This handsome book of about 400 pages is a member of "The Spell Series" each of which has received the approval of colleges, and lovers of travel. To read of the travels of French Canada with its well known and picturesque churches and houses, with its cities that delight the eye of the traveler, its legends and folk songs, its summer and winter amusements, its roads and trials, is itself an education to the reader who is looking forward with interest to the experience of becoming a Canadian traveler. (L. C. Page & Co., Boston.)

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

You're on the Air. By Graham McNamee, in collaboration with Robert Gordon Anderson, with a preface by Heywood Broun, whose writings, in fact whose saying about anything, are sure to be read. In writing this foreword among the things he says are that "after listening to others, and then to Graham McNamee, I felt terribly proud to be a New Yorker. A machine amounts to nothing much unless a man can ride. McNamee knows how to ride. This is the kingdom of art.

This is the day or the broadcaster and broadcasting. Graham McNamee is the man whom millions have listened to in thrilling descriptions of the world's series, Harvard vs. Yale football struggles, etc. This book will be of interest to everybody—men, women and children, so tune in and enjoy this book by McNamee of the WEAF. (Harper and Brothers, New York).

Opium, the Demon Flower. By Sarah Graham-Mulhall, formerly first deputy commissioner, department of narcotic drug control of New York state. The foreword is written by the author who introduces her subject with the followin, question: "Did you ever hear of Dopeville? Every American should know about it. Its locations are legion. Dopeville is the oldest town in the state."

In reading the earnest and truthful words of the writer of this article do not overlook the foreword—every word counts, every statement she makes has the ring of truth—every man and woman and every boy and girl, every physician, in fact every professional man, should read what the writer has to say about Dopeville and its inhabitants. (Harold Vinal, Publisher, New York).

Jefferson and Hamilton.

Claude G. Bowers, author of the widely read "Jefferson and Hamilton" (Houghton, Mifflin company) has been appropriately honored by the Thomas Jefferson Memorial foundation, at Monticello, Va. In appreciation of his revealing study of the memorable ten-year struggle between Jefferson and Hamilton, Mr. Bowers was the recipient of a medal given at the Jefferson centennial held at Jefferson's home in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of his death. Presentation before a gathering of 15,000 persons was made by President Edward A. Alderman, of the University of Virginia, and Mr. Bowers' speech of acceptance of this honor preceded the addresses by Secretary Kellogg and John W. Davis. The medal presented to Mr. Bowers is one which was given to Jefferson as a token of good will by a group of Indians who visited him in 1803.

Girls prefer mystery stories to all others. The element of secrecy holds too strong an appeal not to excite pleasurable curiosity and interest. Certainly no girl can resist such a story as "At Bow View," by Gladys Blake, published this week by Appleton. An old-time plantation in the heart of the cotton country is Bow View and the six young people there keep the action going without any let-down.

At the head of the favorite authors for men and boys stands Ralph Henry Barbour. His stories of sport and school life have played a big part in youthful reading for many years. His newest book, "The Last Play," published by Appleton, continues his high standard of narration with a fascinating story of football and a young fellow who recovered from a good deal of self-conceit and a somewhat superior attitude towards his school and school mates.

Retail Body Warns Housewives Against Fly-by-Night Peddlers

In line with its usual custom at this time of the year, the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association, composed of nearly 500 of the leading retailers of the city, issues a warning to housewives, and downtown office people, to beware of itinerant, fly-by-night peddlers, and vendors of various articles, particularly wearing apparel, who will become more numerous in the city between now and the Christmas holidays. The warning refers particularly to that class of peddlers and itinerant traders, who have no established headquarters and who cannot be reached after leaving the city. In a great many cases, these peddlers and traders are thoroughly unreliable and irresponsible, and they visit the city, unload a lot of spurious merchandise on an unsuspecting public, and skip out, leaving no trace of their whereabouts, the body's warning declares.

The Atlanta Retail Merchants' association also has been active in protecting the retail buying public against illegal lottery schemes. Many of the most harmless appearing devices, through which customers are given some kind of a chance on merchandise or other prize, constitute lottery schemes, which are criminally illegal under the lottery laws of Georgia.

STANLEY NAMED HEAD OF ACCIDENT BOARDS

Hal M. Stanley, state commissioner of commerce and labor, was elected president of the International Association of Industrial Accident Boards and Commissions at its annual session held during the week at Hartford, Conn., according to a telegram received Saturday at his office at the capitol.

Mr. Stanley announced that the 1927 session of the association would be held in Atlanta next September.

Soldiers', Sailors' Home Move Carried To G. A. R. Meeting

Resolutions urging the location of the proposed National Soldiers and Sailors home in or near Atlanta will be presented to the grand encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic at the session this week in Des Moines, Iowa, according to Sam C. Crane, secretary of the local committee.

Colonel William L. Scott, of Atlanta, and Colonel F. A. Jones, of Tallapoosa, past commanders of the department of Georgia and South Carolina of the G. A. R., are in Des Moines for the encampment which opens Monday and will introduce the resolutions, Mr. Crane said. Colonel Scott is a member of the national council of administration of the G. A. R.

Congressman-elect Leslie J. Steele has promised to support the location of the home here, as he is heartily in favor of the project, Mr. Crane said. "And Congressman W. D. Upshaw said that he is for the home in Atlanta, whether he is in or out of congress."

"Great progress is being made in our campaign for this home, which would be one of the greatest assets ever brought to the south," Mr. Crane said. "It now seems that Atlanta is certain to be given the national home."

Mrs. Fred McSwain And Mrs. May M. Cox Form New Partnership

There are probably two no better known women in Atlanta's business world han Mrs. Fred McSwain and Mrs. May Walter Cox. Having spent more than fourteen years in successful connection with the millinery department, a prominent Atlanta store, they have together formed a new business partnership under the name, "McSwain & Cox." They have set up a millinery shop at 208 Connally Building, patterned after the best shops of its kind in New York. Mrs. McSwain, backed by her many years of experience in buying model hats, has been able to secure for the shop some of the season's most individual hats. It is their aim to offer women of Atlanta exquisite hats of distinction at most moderate prices.

An unique feature of McSwain & Cox is the graceful study of the individual as a type, in an effort to secure for her a hat most becoming and suitable for her as an individual, Mrs. McSwain said. Frequent visits to New York for buying keeps their hats well ahead of the prevailing mode.

The shop located on the second floor of the Connally Building, has been artistically decorated by Dora Gray, a recognized authority on interior decoration. Softest shades of moss green and salmon have been used for the effectual scheme. Individual hat boxes have been done in the same tones.

MASONIC CLUB HOLDS LUNCHEON WEDNESDAY

The Atlanta Masonic club will resume its weekly luncheons beginning Wednesday, and will hold its first meeting at the Atlanta Athletic club beginning at 12:30 o'clock. Dr. N. R. H. Moor, pastor of St. Luke's Episcopal church, has been elected president of the club and will preside at this meeting.

A special program has been arranged with Dr. S. R. Belk, pastor of Grace Methodist church, as speaker. Miss Minna Hecker and Miss Olivia Allen will offer a musical program.

Now Strong, Well

"FOR two years I was in very poor health," says Mrs. T. G. Harris, of Clarksburg, Mo., whose picture is printed above. "Some of the time I was almost past going. I was very weak and run-down. I tried to make the most of what little strength I had by taking frequent rests, but I could find nothing which would start me on the road to health again, until one day I decided to try Cardui.

"I had heard about other women who had been benefited after taking it, so I made up my mind to see what it would do for me. I took Cardui for several months and was very much gratified with the results.

"I began to do my own work again, which I had not been able to do for a long time past. My color, which had been pale and sallow, became natural, and my complexion cleared up. I gained in weight and was pleased to have an improved appetite.

"When I finished my last bottle of Cardui I was feeling better than I had in years. Now I am strong and well."

War Career of Capt. Raphael Semmes

One of the first southern men to resign from the Federal navy and wend his way south to join hands with the Confederacy was Raphael Seammes, of Mobile, Ala. As captain of a vessel that he well knew was so much needed by his people, yet because of the fine principle that dominated his life, he took the vessel back to the Federal yards. There he turned it over to the authorities from whom he had received it, although he knew it would be used to wage war upon him and his people. Then without a ship he came to offer his talent and his life for the principles he loved.

Semmes reported at Montgomery the latter part of the convention and was immediately sent back north by Secretary Mallory to see if he could obtain certain vessels to be used by the Confederacy. He returned, having utterly failed in this attempt; but while he was back at Montgomery, in looking over the offers from various sources of ships that had been tendered the Confederacy, he found a description of a vessel at New Orleans that he asked permission to equip and take charge of. He was granted this authority and personally superintended her renovating and equipping. Just before her completion the news of the fall of Fort Sumter was flashed around the world and this ship was christened the Sumter.

The first week out of New Orleans in the Sumter Captain Semmes captured seven vessels off the coast of Cuba. On his first voyage he touched Cuba, Spain, Venezuela, Brazil and a port of France and at last after he was unable to obtain coal and the engines of his beloved ship were shot to pieces and when the outlet was securely guarded by three Federal vessels, Semmes sunk the Sumter at Gibralta. He then, with the cream of his officers and crew, went to London, mostly by rail. The Sumter, with Semmes as its captain, cruised six months and captured 17 ships of the enemy.

Ships Secured.

Realizing the impossibility of the Confederate government constructing an adequate navy in the required time Secretary Mallory sent James D. Bullock to England for the purpose of purchasing or having built vessels of war. By this time however all arms and ammunition were contraband of war. Many federal agents with much federal money were in England endeavoring to control public opinion in behalf of the federal government and Bullock found it next to impossible to accomplish the object of his mission. He however contracted for the building of two vessels in his own name. They left the shores of England unarmored and with no guns or ammunition thereon. While the federal authorities realized the purpose for which they were to be used they were helpless in their attempt to stop them, because there was nothing apparent that they would be used by the Confederate government in war. Bullock, therefore, had vessels set sail and off the coast of England had the armor and arms added to them.

One of these vessels was the Alabama. Captain Semmes was immediately placed in charge of this vessel while it was off the coast of England. Imagine if you can the joy of this daring seaman at being placed in charge of a vessel the equal of most any of the enemy. But he was at one great disadvantage. Many of the foreign governments would recognize the federal government, but failed to deal with the Confederacy. Thus we find Semmes upon the open seas with the ports of the nation of the world sealed to him and the ports of his country guarded. Yet we read that during the first six weeks out in the Alabama he captured and sunk 17 vessels of the enemy. While sailing in the Alabama he sailed across the China sea, over the Indian ocean, crossed the Bay of Bengal, cruised along the Arabian sea, played as a child in a bathtub over the placid waters of the Atlantic and the turbulent Pacific while in the Gulf of Mexico he was at home. We are told that three times in this ship did he cross the equator. During all this time he states that almost daily and at least semi-weekly he obtained information as to the condition of affairs at home by capturing some enemy vessel and getting the papers off of it.

Alabama Sunk.

Finally off the coast of France we find the armored federal vessel, the Kearsage, lying in wait for the dreaded Alabama with the daring Captain Semmes. As soon as the Alabama had sighted her they made ready for battle, and went out to meet the foe. For an hour and twenty minutes the intensive engagement lasted. lasted. Many of Semmes' gallant seamen were killed and wounded. Finally the vessel itself was mortally wounded and water began to pour into her bosom. Her captain, realizing that to fight longer would be suicide, gave the sign of surrender and immediately placed the wounded in the boats and sent them out to the enemy vessel, but so great was the dread of Semmes that the captain of the Kearsarge was afraid to approach lest this apparent surrender should be a subterfuge. And just before the old vessel went beneath the waves, Captain Semmes and the remainder of the ship's crew plunged into the sea. Semmes and 17 others were rescued by a French vessel, the Deerhound.

Captain Semmes was not made a prisoner of war because he was never captured. He swam to the neutral vessel in neutral waters and later returned to America. He visited his home and family at Mobile after an absence of four years. Then he made his way to Richmond, Va., to report for further duty. He was then appointed rear-admiral and placed in charge of the James River squadron. Soon the order came from Secretary Mallory to destroy the ships, for Richmond was to be evacuated. His occupation gone, for the third time his vessel sunk. Semmes did not stand idly by, but with a commission of Brigadier General in the last efforts of the expiring Confederacy, undauntedly led a marine brigade. After the close of the war he was taken prisoner and carried to Washington, where for months he was kept in close confinement and finally pardoned by President Jolrason.

Mrs. T. T. Stevens, chairman of the Confederate portraits committee of the Georgia division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, has sent the following important communication to the president of each chapter in the division relative to placing portraits of Confederate leaders in schools and libraries throughout Georgia.

The letter is issued ten days in advance of the first portrait that will be printed so that the chapter presidents will have ample time to send in their orders in advance for as many copies of the paper as they will need of the entire series, as papers in which the portraits will be printed cannot be ordered after the date the pictures appear.

My dear Madam President:

The Confederate portraits committee of the Georgia division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, are concentrating this year on portraits of famous Georgians to be placed in the schools. There will be nine portraits printed through the courtesy of The Atlanta Journal in its rotogravure section as a compliment to the Georgia daughters and the portraits committee. These nine portraits will appear, one each month, corresponding to the nine school months.

The first portrait to be printed will be that of Admiral Raphael Semmes, (the only one in the series not a Georgian) whose birthday will be fittingly celebrated throughout the country on September 27 by the Daughters of the Confederacy. Admiral Semmes' picture will be printed in the Wednesday afternoon's Journal, September 22.

The pictures will appear thereafter, one the first Wednesday in each months as follows:

Robert Toombs, October 6; Alexander H. Stephens, November 3; General Clement A. Evans, December 1; Francis Bartow, January 5; Sidney Lanier, February 2; General John B. Gordon, March 2; War Governor Joseph E. Brown, April 6; General T. R. R. Cobb, May 4.

An effort was made to have the portraits appear in the birth month of each of the noted men. This was impossible, however, as four of the distinguished men chosen were born in February and one was born in July.

The committee urges upon the chapters the importance of placing their orders in advance for as many papers (5 cents each) as they will need to supply the schools in their counties or sections. These pictures cannot be gotten in any other way for the schools, as it is impossible to purchase them from the art shops or book stores.

The committee also requests that the chapters have the portraits framed and present to the schools with fitting ceremony so that the children may become better acquainted with the famous men who have helped to make the history of their state and nation. The pictures are lovely when framed and can be done at nominal cost.

Send money order in advance for as many copies of the paper as you will need in which the portraits will appear to C. B. Babb, circulation department, Atlanta Journal, and your order will be promptly filled as each edition of the paper comes out. Please attend to this at once as it is a generous courtesy on the part of The Atlanta Journal to furnish the chapters with these rare portraits and they will not be able to supply you with sufficient papers unless you order now, in advance, for the number you will need in the entire series for nine months.

Thanking you for your fullest cooperation, and with best wishes for the continued success of your chapter,

Faithfully yours,
MRS. T. T. STEVENS,
Chairman.

Mrs. Seidell Hostess at Beautiful Luncheon.

One of the most beautiful functions of the season ushering in the activities of the Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., was a seated luncheon on Tuesday last at the chapter house, given by Mrs. Stafford Seidell, the brilliant president of that organization. The affair which was both gracious and festive was given in honor of Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, state president; Mrs. J. J. Harris, state editor; Mrs. Jane Courtney, state president of the College Clubs of America, and the members of the Peachtree Creek Battle park commission.

The personnel of this efficient committee is as follows: Senator Hoke Smith, captain; George N. Hope, Henderson Hallman, Eugene Haynes. The luncheon was ushered in with most beautiful harmony by a vocal solo by Mrs. T. E. Cooper, who sang most entrancingly, accompanied at the piano by Miss Lillian Smith. Mrs. Seidell, in a few well-chosen words, introduced Mrs. Warren D. White, who gave a greeting from the chapter to the guests. Mrs. White soke most pleasingly of Mrs. Seidell and her administration, calling the chapter house a loving home instead of a chapter house. Mrs. Seidel spoke feelingly of her work hoping that the years of her regime would be "two golden years with a golden memory." She then introduced the guests of honor, who responded with appropriate remarks. Mrs. McKenzie outlined the ideals of the Georgia division, U. D. C., and discussed the various departments of work. She was greeted with much applause and enthusiasm. The members of the Peachtree Creek Battle Memorial park commission spoke on the project and its ultimate outcome, showing the subject up most interestingly and intriguing the interest of all in whose hearts burned the undying fires of patriotism. Mrs. Courtney and Mrs. Chauncey Smith spoke most charmingly along the various lines of their interest. Throughout the whole affair there was a note of graciousness attesting to the poularity and efficiency of Mrs. Seidell as a hostess. The chapter house which has been so artistically decorated, was abloom with late summer flowers. The executive board of the Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., and the guests of honor feel it an occasion long to be remembered, both from the standpoint of congeniality and patriotism.

COVINGTON W. C. T. U. HOLDS SUCCESSFUL RALLY.

At the conclusion of an inspiring program in charge of Mrs. J. W. Lee with Mrs. A. L. Lloyd, Mrs. W. C. Clark, Mrs. P. W. Godfrey and Rev. Walker Combs as speakers and Mrs. Combs, reader, presenting "Don't Care Citizens," officers were chosen for the new W. C. T. U. year.

The election resulted as follows: Mrs. W. C. Clark, president; Mrs. A. L. Lloyd, vice president; Mrs. Earl Smith, recording secretary; Miss Florrie Harwell, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. E. Hutchins, treasurer; Mrs. Walker Combs, reporter; Mrs. J. C. Upshaw, parliamentarian.

Tea and sandwiches were served by Mrs. T. C. Castleberry, Mrs. C. C. King, Mrs. J. W. Lee, Mrs. J. N. Wagner and Mrs. R. A. Norris.

MRS. ARMOR IN WISCONSIN.

Reports from Mrs. Armor's meetings in Baraboo, Wisconsin, describe them as "magnificent." Her speech "caught the crowd which filled Ringling theater, many came 50 miles to hear her, and such enthusiasm as she inspired is rare."

This theater was given the city by the Ringling brothers, of circus fame, and is said to be the most beautiful theater between the coast and Chicago.

At night Mrs. Armor spoke to an audience which "packed the great church. Her speeches could not be excelled."

Mrs. Armor wrote from St. Paul that the Wisconsin convention at Baraboo was the "best they have ever held; enthusiasm ran high."

She said that since the republicans and democrats had "nominated a wet," the drys are going to bring out an independent candidate and put up a big fight. They are very hopeful of winning."

Mrs. Armor was entertained in the home of the lieutenant governor. She was the recipient of lovely flowers presented publicly, and numerous delightful courtesies, among them a drive to Devil's lake, and to the pansy farm.

"I wish you could have seen that million pansies in bloom." A dinner party by the state officers of the Wisconsin W. C. T. U. was another pleasure.

MACON W. C. T. U. HARVEST HOME MEETING.

Mrs. D. A. Warlick, who has served the Macon W. C. T. U. so acceptably as president for several years, was reelected at the meeting at the Vineville Baptist church Friday evening.

The other officers elected are: Mrs. B. H. Massey, vice president; Mrs. M. C. Quillian, corresponding secretary; Miss Loulo Glass, recording secretary, and Mrs. G. P. Gostin, treasurer.

Mrs. Gostin, who has been the faithful treasurer for 16 years, was given two assistants, Mrs. George W. Smith and Mrs. Fred Riordan.

Delegates to the state W. C. T. U. convention, which will meet in Gainesville October 26-28, chosen are Mrs. J. W. Calloway, Mrs. A. W. Voight, Mrs. R. V. Hardeman, Mrs. G. W. McCommon, Mrs. Fred Riordan.

Five members of the Macon union are members of the convention because of their state offices, Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, president; Mrs. Walter Anthony, state superintendent of evangelism; Mrs. Osgood Clark, state loyal temperance legion secretary; Mrs. August Burghard, editor of the Georgia W. C. T. U. Bulletin, and Mrs. D. A. Warlick, president of the sixth district.

The annual reports of officers and departmental superintendents showed great progress and varied activities.

Four hundred and fifty active members and 100 honorary members have paid dues and others will pay before the treasurer's books close October 1.

The devotionals consisted in voluntary quotations of verses of Scripture and sentence prayers in which many participated.

Mrs. Harry Hudson sang "Georgia Land," accompanied by Mrs. T. E. Rogers.

The ladies of the church made delightful hostesses for the large number in attendance. The floral decorations were particularly beautiful.

Confederate Veteran.

The value of The Confederate Veteran in the home of every member of the U. D. C. can be estimated by the fact that it is a magazine of the most versatile genius, covering the realm of history and romance in stately prose and lofty poetry. Lt lingers with joy in the paths of reminiscence, keeps step with the current events of note and points with assurance to a future achievement for the sons and daughters of the south.

The presence of The Confederate Veteran in the southern home means that that home recognizes the value of placing daily before its children the truths of history and through them inculcating a love for and appreciation of the principles which our heroes of the sixties so nobly defended.

The Confederate Veteran, as the official organ of the U. D. C., with its excellently arranged programs, its messages from our president general and our state presidents and other officers, is a wonderful help in all our monthly meetings.

Every subscriber to The Confederate Veteran attends the meetings wtih deepened interest, widened information and greater love for the couse of the Confederacy.

Un Mot Ici, Est Bien

BY MRS. J. J. HARRIS, Sandersville, Ga., State Editor Ga. Div. U. D. C.

The state chairmen are responding beautifully to the duties of their departments and are outlining their work so that it will simplify the activities of the chapter by following the instructions which appeal to them on the official page from time to time. Today Mrs. T. T. Stevens, chairman of Confederate portraits has contributed a most pleasing and instructive article pertaining to her line of work.

Mrs. Ira Farmer, chairman of textbooks, has been very helpful in her article. Our chairmen are the backbone of the organization and their help means much for the success of the various enterprises of interest to the division. An invitation to the chapter house of the Atlanta chapter U. D. C. spells joy. It was the writer's privileg to be a guest at the beautiful luncheon given by Mrs. Seidell on Tuesday, last. The chapter house was blooming in festive array with flowers, new decorations and best of all, most beautiful chandeliers. The general spirit of camaraderie, the air of patriotism and the charm of the delightful hostess all made for the success of the occasion. Mrs. McKenzie, state president, was at her best and the members of the Peachtree Creek Battle Park commission, also guests of honor, all added to the interest of the luncheon hour.

Speaking of our beloved state president, Mrs. McKenzie, from all accounts, will find herself real busy the next few weeks. She has accepted invitations to attend the opening meetings of the following chapters: Phil Cook chapter, Montezuma, September 1; Atlanta chapter, September 14; Fitzgerald, September 17, and Covington, September 21. Mrs. McKenzie whose whole heart is in the work will mean much to these chapters by the inspiration of her presence.

Mrs. Izie Bashinski, of Dublin, president of the Oconee chapter, has been made chairman of the Georgia delegation to go to Richmond to the general convention in November. This is a happy choice as Mrs. Bashinski makes a success of any undertaking before her and this particular occasion will mean much for the advancement of the "Georgia spirit." Our slogan should be "On to Richmond," for the next few weeks and every member should feel it her duty if possible to attend.

Mrs. Benjamin Neal, of Montezuma, sends a beautifully arranged article on Admiral Semmes. This is most timely as this month we honor his memory in some feeling manner on our programs and this date will be of great benefit along the lines of research.

Our attention is called to the value of The Confederate Veteran in our homes. It is replete with information along the line of our patriotic endeavors and is a recurrent memorial to our heroes who gave their all that the southern ideals of right should live ever more.

CHAPTER REPORTS

KENNESAW.

On August 19, 20 members of the Kenesaw chapter of U. D. C., Marietta, Ga., carried dinner to veterans at the Confederate Soldiers' home.

A bountiful dinner was spread on tables in the pavilion.

Many of the veterans said it was the finest dinner ever served to them, especially did they enjoy the ice cold lemonade and the cold watermelons.

That golden-tongued orator Lucian L. Knight, in an address delivered here some years ago said of the Confederate soldier: "I have been to some extent a student of history, but I challenge the chronicles of 6,000 years to surpass the fighting power of the Confederate soldier, and I doubt if the empires which have risen and fallen on the tides of time, can match the prowess of the little government, which without an army or navy of any size to make good its defiance in 1861, unfurled its flag of 13 stars and after four years of splendid valor, perished beneath overpowering numbers."

MRS. T. J. HARDAGE.

HARTWELL.

The Hartwell U. D. C., held a well-attended meeting September 3, at the home of Mrs. Isham Hailey, beginning the work of the new year. Joint hostesses with Mrs. Hailey were Mrs. W. G. Hodges, Mrs. McAlpin Thornton, Mrs. J. C. Jenkins, Mrs. E. C. Nichols and Mrs. Nimqui Smith.

The president, Mrs. Nimqui Smith, in her opening talk urged the members to cooperate toward the paramount objects for the year. These objects are caring for veterans and Confederate women, making Hartwell a star chapter and building Memorial hall.

Mrs. S. R. Patton, who has been appointed chairman of the forget-me-not drive, asked for two representatives from the U. D. C., to serve on her committee. Mrs. Arthur Harper and Miss Mary Holland were named.

Other business was transacted and standing committees for the year were named, after which a brief program was given commemorating the birthday of Admiral Semmes.

A social hour followed the business session.

Prominent Guests Present at Writers' Club Meeting

The members and guests of the Atlanta Writers' club met at the Woman's club on Thursday evening to enjoy an informal social evening, this being the initial meeting of the season. A number of distinguished guests were present.

Mrs. Price-Smith, president of the Atlanta Woman's club, made an interesting short talk, in which she paid tribute to the Writers' club for its efforts along cultural lines, and spoke briefly of the literary and education work of the Atlanta Woman's club. Mrs. Price-Smith introduced Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of the Georgia School of Technology, who made a most interesting short talk, commenting on Georgia poets, and quoting some favorite lines.

Miss Blossom Tucker, who is to have the honor of having a poem on Woodrow Wilson included in the Wilson Anthology which is soon to be published, made a short talk, telling of this work.

Mrs. Bryan Collier, author of the well-known biographical work, "Representative Women of the South," a book which has received wide and favorable comment, spoke briefly on the southern woman, and presented Dr. Melton with an autographed copy of this charming book.

Mrs. Arthur B. Tufts, Mrs. Anna Patterson, and a number of others, at the request of Dr. Melton, spoke briefly of their recent activities along educational and literary lines.

Dr. Melton has recently written a sequel to Matthew Arnold's "The Forsaken Mermen," to which he has given the title, "The Forsaken Landsmen." Dr. Melton read "The Forsaken Mermen," while Mrs. Fred B. Castator read "The Forsaken Landsmen." Dr. Melton's poem well deserves the honor of being a fitting sequel to this charming poem by Matthew Arnold, and it was very much enjoyed by the members of the club.

One of the most delightful features of the evening was the musical program, Miss Lillian Smith sang, "The Rose," the words of which were written by George R. Stephens; music by Aileen M. Stephens, both of Atlanta. Miss Stepheus accompanied Miss Smith at the piano, and also rendered a piano solo, "Cradle Song," by Alfredo Barili, well-known Georgia composer. These selections were most enthusiastically received by the members of the Writers' club, and the club always enjoys sponsoring original work by Atlantans and Georgians.

Dr. Melton made announcement regarding a letter which he has just received from Professor Richard R. Kirk, of Tulane university, of a prize offer made by the Poetry society of Louisiana, for the best poem submitted to this society by December 1. This offer is made without limitation as to form or meter of poem, and is open to posts of the entire south.

W. M. U. Will Observe Week of Prayer.

The week of prayer in the interest of state missions will be fittingly observed by the W. M. U. of the Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church. Items of interest concerning state missions will be presented at the circle meetings on Monday at 3:30 o'clock.

Tuesday, September 21, in the Sunday school annex, at 3:30 o'clock, a very delightful service will be held, in which Dr. Will Haughton, pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist church, and Dr. Luther Rice Christie, new pastor at Ponce de Leon, will be the speakers. E. Powell Lee, new choir director of the tabernacle, will sing.

Wednesday, September 22, at the same hour, in the church annex, Mrs. Wilbur M. Jones, newly-elected superintendent of W. M. U. of Atlanta, will be the speaker. Mrs. Joe L. McMillan, who possesses a soprano voice of unusual sweetness, will sing at this service. State mission envelopes for special offering have been given to chairmen of circles, and may be turned in at either service.

A large attendance is expected.

A Happy Woman

A MAN dreams of wealth, success and power.
A woman dreams of a home of her own and babies to love.

Happy is the young woman whose dream is fulfilled. With good health, housework is not a burden. Her home echoes to the prattle of healthy children. She must not fail those tiny hands. Her husband is still her comrade and confidant, sharing her new responsibilities. She is content.

Happy, too, is the older woman who holds her children's children in her arms and lives to see a new generation dreaming dreams of its own.

A young girl in Iowa was in such a weakened condition that she had to leave school. One day, after being in poor health for about two years, she picked up an advertising booklet and read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I began to take your medicine," she writes. "Now I am a housekeeper with six children and I have taken it before each was born. I cannot tell you all the good I have received from it. I read all of your little books I can get and I tell everyone I know what the Vegetable Compound does for me."

Sources of Strength

BY MRS. A. H. BRENNER
Vice President at Large of the Georgia Federation

"Whatever adds to the strength, be it in ever so small a degree, strengthens." One member in a club will not only make that particular club stronger, but added to others will mightily strengthen the state and general federation. One new club, be it ever so small, can revolutionize a community and bring joy of service into the lives of women who are longing for that which club work alone offers.

We are now at the beginning of a new club year. True club work is no longer confined to the season between October 1 and June 30, for, with the building of club houses most clubs find the mid-summer months the most profitable and delightful of the year; still our program and official year begins at this season.

I would remind district officers that clubs joining the federation after October 1, are credited with dues for the year 1927. So please get busy and urge clubs that are not federated, and those in process of organization, to send in their applications as soon as possible. Application blanks may be had from the district presidents, or from me.

Membership Campaign.

What a splendid thing it would be if every club in the state would put on a vigorous membership campaign between now and January 1. There are things to be done in every community that are of vital importance to every woman in the town, or neighborhood. It is only fair that as many as possible share the responsibility, and that the club have the benefit of varying opinions and viewpoints. True an efficient club woman can not be made by simply enrolling her as a member, it takes years of study; one must become imbued with the club spirit, club principles must become instilled into the mind, and engrafted in the soul. This makes it all the more important that we systematically increase our membership, month by month, and year by year. It is a debt we owe to the future.

Your membership committee is very anxious to have accurate records. The general federation must be given correct reports, at stated times. In order to do this there must be cooperation all along the line. Each club must study the federation constitution and by-laws, and comply rigidly with the requirements. Your state treasurer is anxious to get her records in perfect shape so that she may make a report to the membership committee at the October meeting of the executive board. Your general federation director wants Georgia to to stand high among the states in the general federation. To do this clubs must remember that Georgia has voted Universal membership, so every club doing regular federation work must be a per capita club, of group 1. No club can put itself in group 2, and send $3.50 dues to the district treasurer, without being so classified by the membership committee. Your state recording secretary, the other member of the committee, is eager for growth and a correct membership list.

Endowment Fund.

We rejoice that the trustees of our Tallulah Falls school have decided to raise an endowment fund in honor of our distinguished, and beloved leader, Mrs. Ottley. Some were eager to name one of the new buildings for her, but how much more appropriate to establish this fund which will lighten her burdens and relieve her anxieties. And what a simple thing it will be to accomplish. "Whatever adds to the strength, be it in ever so small a degree, strengthens." There are innumerable admirers of Mrs. Ottley who are happy to thus express their devotion and gratitude to her; but what a simple thing it would be to let it be an expression from club women only. We have claimed 30,000 members. There are other opportunities ahead, the maintenance fund must be strengthened. Think what membership means to every club, to every community, to our light in the mountains, and to the strength of the whole work of the federation. My appeal is in the name of your committee,

Augusta Woman's Club Discusses Many Subjects

The Augusta Woman's club, at a recent called meeting, has taken up the discussion of making Augusta a cleaner city. The department of applied education, Mrs. W. P. Manning, chairman, presented through the civic department, Mrs. M. M. Hurst, chairman, a general plan to be followed. Copies of the ordinances pertaining to the collection of garbage and the cutting of weeds on vacant lots will be placed in every home.

There will be a ward chairman and subcommittees to see that the law is enforced. Every civic organization in the city, as well as the school children, will be asked to cooperate in this great work.

Mrs. Guy Bowen, chairman of the conservation department, announces that the committee is working on a plan to beautify the city by encouraging the planting of trees and winter grass.

The question of zoning the city was brought up and discussed. The club went on record as indorsing the plan now under way and giving it hearty support.

The first meeting will be held October 8 at the clubhouse, which is under repairs, and the meetings have been held lately in the assembly room of the board of commerce.

State Motion Picture Chairman Issues Message to Clubwomen

Mrs. Olaf Otto, of Savannah, motion picture chairman for the Georgia federation, whose message on today's official page will be of interest to clubwomen. Photograph by Foltz studios.

Mrs. Olaf Otto, of Savannah, chairman of motion pictures for the state federation, has written the following message to clubwomen:

Some one has truthfully said that the screen is the greatest weapon against ignorance the world has ever known. All of us realize that weapons are necessary and excellent things but must be used with discretion, for in vicious, ignorant or careless hands they are dangerous instruments, leaving tragedy, suffering or death in their wake. It therefore behooves us, as god citizens, to turn our active attention to this potential power for tremendous good—the motion picture—and give it our thoughtful support.

Organization Work.

The Federation of Women's clubs is doing this, and it is fitting that a body standing primarily as it does for culture and education should have a committee on motion pictures. Its policy is to work with all organizations to increase the demand for better films and the support of the best, but to maintain its absolute independence. Its plan is to seek information from all legitimate sources, to test and check, and to send out a classified list together with more detailed information about the best pictures, in order to make them popular and to furnish information on pictures unworthy of exhibition.

Your national chairman, Mrs. Alfred C. Tyler, explained this in her report at the biennial convention at Atlantic City, in which she also outlined some specific points; among them being the necessity of appointing state and club chairmen in every community who will realize in the beginning that their positions mean hard work. She pointed out that for the guidance of committees complete classified lists of all entertainment pictures with their audience suitability will be furnished with special markings designating the films deserving support.

She expressed hope that local exhibitors would be encouraged to bring to their communities some of the classics of the screen in revival programs, thus preserving many fine pictures and some of exceptional merit, which, lacking popular appeal, need to be sponsored to bring to them the support they deserve.

Another point she stressed was the use of the motion pictures to further club programs for which purpose entainment pictures as well as educational and non-theatrical films will be listed and classified according to the department of the federation to which they may be applied, and she announced that these lists would be available to clubs this fall.

In those communities where the federation cannot undertake this work alone, your state chairman recommends forming a Better Films council, which could prove of much help in accomplishing the aim of making good films popular. Should this council be formed through the efforts of the federation, it would necessarily be independent, since it would be composed of a representative from every organization interested in the subject, men's as well as women's. Its duties would be decided upon by the council itself which should, however, work along lines that will win the confidence of the public and the cooperation of local exhibitors. The use of the previously mentioned lists denoting audience suitability would be of great help to parents who could be encouraged to look for the council's approval of pictures shown before allowing their children to see them. This would also be an aid to the development of a discriminating public. This council could also sponsor the showing of classics of the screen, educational and historic pictures, and be a means of enriching the cultural life of the community. Also it could consider the desirability of a junior matinee in the community and choose the pictures to be shown, or else use its influence to have Friday and Saturday performances planned to be suitable for family audiences including children, thus making possible the week-end family party.

Needs Differ.

Since each community differs as to its needs, opportunities, etc., it is not the intention of your state chairman to map out detailed plans. She does, however, urge that each club appoint a live chairman of motion pictures who will study her local situation, follow wherever feasible the plans outlined above and write her of any difficulties together with ideas and suggestions. In this way each can contribute something toward evolving a working plan by which will be realized the hope in our hearts for this great gift to mankind.

State Chairman Motion Pictures.

Millen Club Writes Novelette Called "'Twas Thus and So'

"'Twas Thus and So," is a novelette written by the Millen Woman's club, which boasts as its best and most recent literary achievement the authorship of a serial story written during the past club year. The story is in seven chapters, written by six different clubwomen and it proved by far the most delightful and interesting feature of the year's program.

Mrs. Alex Boyer is author of the first chapter, in which she chose the characters and setting and contributed the first stage of the plot. Mrs. B. C. Brannen followed with the second chapter and in this way the story was developed. A new installment at each monthly meeting was always eagerly anticipated.

The other authors besides Mrs. Boyer and Mrs. Brannen are Mrs. I. O. Parker, Mrs. Cleveland Thompson, Mrs. John Bates and Mrs. Ernest Brannen.

After its completion, Mrs. Boyer, the "mother" of the story, was given the privilege of naming it.

"'Twas Thus and So" it has been called, and capable critics have complimented its literary merit, giving every encouragement for its publication.

It is the fondest hope of the Millen club to see their story in print at an early date.. The club has a membership of only 40, but has always striven to maintain a high standard in its programs.

Second District Indorses Passie Fenton Ottley Fund

Mrs. I. A. Heard, president second district, Georgia Federation of Women's clubs, writes: "Everybody in the second district is delighted that the new endowment fund for Tallulah Falls school is to bear the name of Mrs. Ottley. In line with the request of the trustees I am asking the clubs to continue to specialize for maintenance, but I am also reminding them that it will be a pleasure and a privilege to many of them, to do something individually for the Passie Fenton Ottley endowment fund. My request is as follows: That every club appoint a Tallulah Falls school committee, composed of some very active members, and let them work up as large a maintenance gift for our school this year as possible. We strongly recommend that the whole of this maintenance gift should not come out of the club treasuries. Give your community a chance to help by putting on a benefit of some kind for your school during the year. An amateur play, a silver tea, a rummage sale or a tag day. There are any number of different ways to raise our maintenance gift. Albany made $200 on their tag day last year, and Macon has made $500 each year for two years. Every town could have a tag day.

"Let's help individually on the new Passie Fenton Ottley endowment fund of $30,000. The school needs the endowment and many persons will be glad to help the school and honor Mrs. Ottley. Of course a club could give an entertainment for this purpose, but we should remember that maintenance must come first."

Mrs. Robert E. Lee, president of third district Georgia Federation of Women's clubs, writes of the Passie Fenton Ottley endowment fund: "The $30,000 fund to be raised for our 'Light in the Mountains' is not half enough to suitably honor Mrs. Ottley for the great work she has done and is doing to stamp out illiteracy in Georgia, and to bring our beloved state to its proper place in education. It is evident that she has given her best in time, thought and deed to help those little ones without an opportunity. I'm sure that some day the great teacher will look down on the work she has helped us to do and say: 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these—'

"Meantime it is our pride to give living recognition to her devoted service."

Praise From Mrs. Wilkins.

Mrs. A. M. Wilkins, Tallulah Falls school chairman for the eighth district says:

"So effectively has Mrs. Ottley given to Tallulah school leadership, that not only our club membership, but all who come in contact with her magic zeal wish for her future rewards commensurate with her great service. Club history will know no more interesting page than that which narrates the story of the 'Passie Fenton Ottley Endowment.' She has been a great builder, one who has laid foundations for progress in years to come.

"This endowment, a monumental trophy of club faith progress, rests confidently upon cornerstones of friendship, charity and benevolence, the noblest and grandest foundation in all human society, and from it will go the life-giving service to our poor little mountain children, that will live and live into eternity. If my purse was as big as my heart this fund would be completed at once."

Mrs. Palmour Requests List of Officers.

Mrs. Oscar Palmour, president fifth district, Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, requests that all clubs in the district send promptly to the vice president, Mrs. Dan C. Lyle, College Park, a complete list of the officers of the club that a new roster may be completed.

Elks Establish Scholarship At Tallulah School

Among the many scholarships which provide for mountain children of Georgia attending Tallulah Falls Industrial school are two established by the Elks. One such scholarship is provided by the Atlanta Lodge No. 78 B. P. O. E., of which Hon. Turner Fitten is exalted ruler and B. C. Broyles, secretary; and another annual scholarship is maintained by the Georgia Elks association, of which Louis Ludwig of Brunswick, Georgia, is president, and B. C. Broyles is secretary-treasurer.

The Atlanta lodge No. 78 established its scholarship two years ago largely through the instrumentality of Exalted Ruler Fitten and Secretary Broyles, both of whom have taken a keen interest in the work that Tallulah Falls school is doing for the underprivileged children of Georgia.

The Georgia Elks association scholarship was authorized at the state convention of Elks held in Albany, and has been active since that time. This scholarship has just been renewed for the year 1926-27, according to a letter received by Mrs. John K. Ottley, president of the board of trustees, from Mr. Broyles. The letter reads as follows:

"I take pleasure in handing you herewith check of the Georgia Elks association for $150.00 in payment of our subscription for the year 1926-27.

"You will recall that this subscription was authorized at the state convention held in Albany. It gives us great pleasure to be able to contribute to such a worthy cause. Our only regret is that we cannot make it many times as much.

"The Elks of Georgia are highly appreciative of the wonderful work you and the other noble ladies are doing for the mountain folk of our state, and in our opinion there is no more deserving charity, nor one which pays greater dividends and brings greater results in the reclamation of the long-neglected, but highly deserving, people of our North Georgia hills.

"We wish you every possible success in the great work in which you are engaged, and we stand ready at all times to do what we can to make your efforts even more successful than they have been in the past."

Mrs. B. A. Tyler Sends Article About Seventh District Activities

Mrs. B. A. Tyler, of Dalton, has been appointed publicity chairman of the seventh district of the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs, and no better choice could have been made as the successor of Mrs. Bell Bayless, of Kingston, who resigned this office after several successful years spent in placing the activities of this district before Georgia clubwomen.

Mrs. Tyler was a former resident of Evanston, Ill., having resided in Dalton for the past twenty-five years. She was one of the organizers and charter members of the Dalton Woman's club, and is on the national board of the service star legion. Among other honors which have been conferred upon this distinguished and popular Georgian is the placing of her name upon the state board of directors of the D. A. C.

Mrs. Tyler's Honors.

She is a member of the Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America, a Daughter of the Pilgrims, and is on the state board of directors of the Daughters of American Colonists, is state committee chairman of the D. A. R.

Mrs. Tyler possesses the spirit of usefulness and this characteristic has made her greatly beloved in her community. She shuns publicity, preferring at all times to get publicity for the seventh district, not for the publicity chairman, and in this capacity she is especially well suited.

The following notes of the seventh district were sent by Mrs. Tyler.

Kingston Club.

With the savings of several years wiped out by a recent bank failure, the indomitable history club of Kingston is going on with the regular philanthropic and educational work of the organization with their usual enthusiasm and is planning more and better work for the coming year. Their program for the next year embraces afternoons devoted to the study of education, of Georgia and Bartow county's industries, of transportation, agriculture and the home in several phases. One good play will be read and studied and music is included in every program. The club cooperates with the Parent-Teachers association in Kingston and much good work is done along this line, particularly in aiding the county demonstrator with the domestic science work. The club numbers thirty-five members, is twenty-seven years old. Mrs. Claude Irby is president, Mrs. G. T. Rogers is secretary and Mrs. Branson is treasurer for the ensuing year.

Austell Club.

The Austell Woman's club, with an active membership of about thirty, own their own building and operate a library of more than 2,000 books. One of the outstanding activities of the organization is the Junior Social club which they sponsor and which meets twice a month at the club house, chaperoned by Mrs. Cartledge and Mrs. Karwisch. This junior club has its own officers, constitution and by-laws and the members are learning to conduct meetings and transact business; both boys and girls are eligible to membership but the boys are honorary members. The meetings are well attended and the young people are enthusiastic.

The club house of the Austell Woman's club, is owned and operated by the organization, where they conduct a library of some 2,000 volumes. The club was organized in 1913 as the Austell Civic Improvement society. They now have more than thirty members, officered by Mrs. Mae C. Harbor as president; Mrs. C. D. Rutherford, first vice president; Mrs. J. W. Westmoreland, Mrs. L. Causey, Mrs. J. M. Strickland, Miss Pearl Winters, Mrs. C. T. Perkerson, Mrs. Charles Wallace, Mrs. W. E. Smith, Mrs. T. Humphries and Mrs. W. F. Collar as other officers and members of the board of trustees.

District Officers.

The officers of the seventh district include Mrs. C. B. McGarity, of Dallas, president; vice president Mrs. W. F. Collar, Austell; second vice president, Mrs. W. W. Garmany, Lafayette; recording secretary, Mrs. Malcolm C. Tarver, Dalton; corresponding secretary, Miss Bessie Crew, Dallas; treasurer, Mrs. B. F. Lowther, Cedartown; press chairman, Mrs. B. A. Tyler, Dalton.

Federation Owes Debt of Gratitude To Clubwomen

The Georgia federation owes a debt of gratitude to those members of the body who staged so successfully the fashion revue last week at the auditorium, for the benefit of the Passie Fenton Ottley endowment fund for Tallulah Industrial school, as a fitting honor to a woman who has given generously of her time and strength to federated work. It is a contribution to the state federation from those of its members who have worked with her in Atlanta and is an evidence of coordination by federated effort and the cooperation from others which is always the gift of Atlanta to its federated women.

Mrs. T. T. Stevens, whose brilliant administration of the Atlanta federation set a high example, ably directed the campaign. Mrs. Eugene Harrington, whose Junior League follies are outstanding financial and social successes, Mrs. W. C. Patterson, whose masterly publicity kept the revue a daily topic of conjecture, Mrs. Arthur Hazzard, whose appointment as treasurer always means success, made a force that brought to a successful conclusion the undertaking in honor of an Atlanta woman, for the benefit of Georgia's mountain children, and a leading work of the Georgia federation.

The fashion revue was the contribution of M. Rich & Bros. Co., to the fund, the firm financing the entire affair. But the entertaining program, the large and brilliant audience, the various features that added to the success of the revue, are due to the women who were in charge and to those who so graciously gave of their talents.

Ninth District Club Women To Meet.

The ninth district of Georgia federated clubwomen will meet in a called executive board meeting in Norcross October 5 at 10 o'clock, central standard time, at the Methodist church.

This board meeting is called at the home of the district president, Mrs. J. E. McElroy, for the purpose of discussing plans and outline plans for future club work along all lines of club activities. Every department and divisional chairman is urged to formulate some special feature of her particular line of work and present it at this executive meeting for discussion, and to bring many new ideas, as that is what the district needs.

MRS. J. E. McELROY,
President.

Mrs. Wallace Makes Address To West Point Woman's Club

The first meeting of the 29th year of the West Point Woman's club was called to order Friday evening, September 10, by the newly-elected president, Mrs. James Wallace, at the city auditorium, to which meeting the husbands of the club members, all the organizations of the city and interested friends were invited.

In a setting made artistic by the decorating committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. Amos Huguley, the program took place. The stage was a veritable fairyland perfected by the club colors, white and gold. The officers remained seated on the stage throughout the program, consisting of an attractive visualization of the department of each chairman.

A greeting was graciously extended by Mrs. Edmond F. Cook, the first vice president of the club. This was responded to by Mayor Phil Lanier in a most cordial manner.

President Talks.

Mrs. Wallace made the opening talk in the following words—"The West Point Woman's club is one of the best in the state, organized on the federation plan, carrying on the various club activities through the chairmen of the departments. Each chairman is responsible for the work and finances of her department. The officers stand ready at all times to cooperate and our visions are those of our chairmen. We realize the importance of the business of being a clubwoman and we are calling this program our 'Show Windows.'

"In a certain little town away from West Point you will find this sign in the window, 'Postage Stamps for Sale.' Should you go inside the barber will tell you, 'I have no stamps,' and should you call attention to the sign in the window he will tell you, 'That sign was there when I came in and I didn't take it down.' We, the officers and chairmen of the West Point Woman's club, found a sign in the window when we took up the work. A sign of unselfish service to the community and of hearty cooperation in every phase of community betterment was placed in the window not by any effort of ours, but by the earnest endeavor and faithfulness to duty of our past presidents of whom five are seated with us tonight, and through the cooperation of their officers and chairmen. Like the barber, we, too, shall not take down the sign, but shall strive to keep our shelves loaded with the things advertised in our windows. Our hats are off to the past, our sleeves are up to the future. Our plans are the club show windows, our work represents the stock of goods."

Effective Program.

The effective program was carried out in the following order:

Cemetery, Mrs. John Horsley; program, Mrs. Edmund Cook; telephone, Miss Fannie Freisleben; finance, Mrs. Ed Cumbee; Junior civics, Mrs. A. C. Booker; press, Mrs. Jack Hodnett, Jr.; thrift, Mrs. Iralee Benns; civics, Mrs. Mary DeLamar; music, Mrs. A. D. Ferguson; motion picture, Mrs. E. R. Cook; rest room, Mrs. Walter Lee; library, Mrs. C. O. Williams; junior membership, Mrs. C. E. Wright; house, Mrs. John Cobb; membership, Mrs. W. J. Kirby; Tallulah Falls, Mrs. George Lanier; forestry, Miss Virginia White; health, Mrs. J. L. Askew; activities for girls, Mrs. R. S. Heard; education, Mrs. John Poer; art, Mrs. Lula Harrell; citizenship, Miss Florrie Johnson.

The Boy Scouts took an important part in the scene presented by the citizenship chairman and as a fitting close to this, the occasion was taken by C. W. Sharman to award merit badges to many worthy scouts.

The outstanding and closing feature of the program was a talk made by Dr. J. M. Poer, president of the chamber of commerce, in appreciation of the work done for the town and community by the Woman's club.

Mrs. Gray Issues Important Card on Trophy Competition

Mrs. B. D. Gray, chairman of the fifth district forestry committee, issues the following card relative to clubs competing for the trophy to be awarded the district by Latham & Atkinson. She says:

President's Approval.

"This meets the approval of the president, Mrs. Oscar Palmour, and of the chairman of applied education, Mrs. J. E. Springer. All clubs wishing to compete for the trophy should report same at once to Mrs. B. D. Gray, College Park, Ga., chairman.

"All work done since last annual meeting will be included in the final report next spring. All clubs in the district are eligible to the contest, but the chairman would like to hear from the clubs who care to compete, as I might help you with suggestions and literature.

"For Meditation"

While in the mountains of western North Carolina, recently I had the privilege of spending a few days at the Robert E. Lee hall, Blue Ridge.

One of the things everybody in the Robert E. Lee hall does, sometime during their stay, is climb the mountain at the rear of the hall, so, I, too, undertook to climb the mountain but stopped at the point called "Overlook," 'for rest.

The first thing that catches the eye as this cleared point is reached is a very strange thing indeed—a mail box, a regulation, rural mail box, here in this out-of-the-way place, where you feel quite sure no one lives and, most certainly no rural mail carrier would come if they did. And on the mail box, clearly printed, these words were found, "For Meditation." The mail box contained a Bible.

How impressive and how appropriate! God's Word found so near as you pause to drink in the beauties and wonders of His works, from the mountain side.

"For Meditation" many of us are starving today. How little time is found for meditation in the mad rush of the world today with the many duties pressing and the thousand distractions of a big city.

But rest assured our best work will never be done and our best progress can never be made in the work of the Kingdom until more time is set aside "For Meditation."

To Compile Records Lost in Big Fire.

The Christian Index very kindly made two announcements, asking for the W. B. M. U. data from 1913 1922, the records being lost in the great fire.

Each officer is requested to write out his own special line of work and sign her name. These brief sketches of the wonderful activity will be compiled and will become a part of the history of the W. B. M. U., of the Atlanta association. The women at this time were the pathfinders of the new association.

All who wish a part in this history will act promptly, since October is this time for the annual meeting. All copy should be compiled, not leaving out any phase of the work. Some very interesting data has been received and there is much more to come. All should write from their own view point.

This is history for the generation that will follow you; contribute your part in the making.

Week of Prayer At Ponce de Leon.

Commencing with the Sunday sermon, September 19, by the pastor, Dr. L. R. Christie, the W. M. S. of the Ponce de Leon avenue Baptist church, "Week of Prayer" for state missions, will be observed. On Monday afternoon, all twelve circles are scheduled to meet in their respective places and items of interest concerning state missions will be presented. On Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons, at 3 o'clock, the society will meet in the church annex, the principal speakers for Tuesday being Dr. Will H. Houghton and Dr. L. R. Christie; and for Wednesday, Mrs. Wilbur M. Jones, newly elected superintendent of Atlanta W. M. U. Mrs. Jones is an exceptionally attractive speaker.

Good music and inspirational addresses will feature both meetings.

Covington Society Holds Monthly Meeting.

On Monday afternoon, September 13, the Woman's Missionary society of the First Methodist church of Covington, held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. W. C. Clark, with the president, Mrs. Robert E. Fowler, in the chair. Mrs. W. C. Clark led the devotional.

Mrs. R. M. Mobley was nominated corresponding secretary to succeed Mrs. Hull.

Monroe Methodists Honor Miss Ella Leverett.

One of the lovely events of the season was the silver tea and miscellaneous shower at which the circles of the Monroe Missionary society entertained at the home of Mrs. Robert L. Nowell in compliment to Miss Ella Leverett prior to the time of her departure for China.

Receiving with Mrs. Nowell were Miss Leverett, Mrs. W. T. Irvine, Mrs. Lewis Radford and the chairmen of all the circles.

A beautiful musical program was rendered by Mrs. Paul Launius, followed by a talk by Miss Leverett in which she told of the great work she was engaged in at Chang Chow and of many interesting personal experiences there and in other Chinese mission centers.

Many useful gifts and about $50 in silver were presented to the honoree.

Miss Leverett has spent 35 years in China, but has been on furlough for the past 12 months. She left Monroe Wednesday for Seattle, Wash., where she will sail on September 19.

On Sunday morning before leaving Monroe, her home city, she filled the pulpit of the First Methodist church, and made a most interesting and inspiring talk to a large congregation. At the Sunday school hour she was given a shower of beautiful handkerchiefs by the members of the Susanna Wesley class, composed of 50 young women, whose teacher is Mrs. Lena F. Lewis.

What minister ever tied the knot with a clothesline?

CLOTHESLINES aren't seen at weddings, but often it isn't long before the bride entertains them along with the rest of the wash-day family. Yet there's no reason why washtubs and clotheslines should mark the end of any honeymoon. Not as long as our many laundry services are on hand to do ALL the "laundry work."

Whatever your requirements you will find a laundry service to meet them. Everything will come back sweet with through and through cleanness, washed in crystal clear water.

Why get "tied up" with a long, tiresome day of the wash when you can telephone the laundry and have your washing called for.

Haygood Memorial Women Organize Missionary Society

The women of the Haygood Memorial church in Morningside met on Monday afternoon of this week for the purpose of organizing a missionary society.

Although a very young church, having been organized during this year, it already has the missionary spirit of those for whom it is named—Bishop A. G. Haygood and his sister, Miss Laura, who were pioneers in the missionary movements of the M. E. church, south. One family in its membership is already supporting one missionary and contributing largely to the support of two others besides taking care of nine scholarships for boys in Georgia colleges. One member of the church is studying at Emory university, preparing for service in the foreign field, who has already been licensed to preach. And for that reason the church could not rest satisfied very long without a real organization for the purpose of furthering missions.

There were 20 charter members enrolled at this first meeting: Mrs. J. B. Robbins, Mrs. W. N. Glenn, Mrs. M. J. Yarbrough, Miss Floy Ray, Miss Florence Donehoo, Mrs. Birdie V. Moore, Mrs. T. R. Kendall, Mrs. N. C. McPherson, Sr., Mrs. Thomas Hawthorne, Mrs. F. S. Patterson, Mrs. E. L. Ray, Mrs. J. F. Smith, Mrs. S. L. Miere, Mrs. J. M. Foster, Mrs. O. L. Taylor, Mrs. J. C. Crumley, Mrs. Frank Schell, Mrs. H. J. Hubbard, Mrs. J. C. Adams, Mrs. L. A. Perry.

Visitors present for the organization were Dr. T. R. Kendall, pastor of the church; Mrs. Virlyn Moore, secretary of the north Atlanta district Woman's Missionary society; Mrs. J. C. White, secretary of the south Atlanta district; Mrs. Wallace Rogers, Mrs. W. A. Albright, president of the auxiliary at Druid Hills church, by whose quarterly conference the new church was organized and Mrs. Ross Chambers, of Bolton.

Mrs. T. R. Kendall, Sr., wife of the pastor, led the opening devotional and Mrs. Virlyn Moore conducted the organization and election of officers. Those elected were: President, Mrs. Birdie Moore; vice president, Mrs. N. C. McPherson, Sr.; secretary, Mrs. Thomas Hawthorne; treasurer, Mrs. J. C. Crumley; corresponding secretary, Mrs. L. A. Perry; agent for The Voice, Mrs. Frank Schell; superintendent of supplies, Mrs. F. S. Patterson; superintendent of social service, Mrs. J. B. Robbins; superintendent of mission and Bible study, Mrs. T. R. Kendall, Sr.; superintendent of publicity, Mrs. J. C. Adams.

Mrs. Birdie V. Moore, the newly-elected president, is a cousin by marriage to the distinguished Georgians for whom the church is named. She is prominent in P.-T. A. work, having served for some time as president of the Hoke Smith P.-T. A. and is now on the executive committee of the P.-T. A. of Girls' High school. She has been an active member of the St. John Missionary society for a long period of years and has served in many offices there. The new society bids fair to make wonderful progress under her administration.

St. Paul Methodist Society Meets.

At the September business meeting of the St. Paul Methodist Missionary society, Mrs. A. P. Jordan was presented a life membership certificate in appreciation of her loyalty and devotion to her society which she has served as local treasurer for a number of years.

A letter was read from the principal of the school in Cuba, where St. Paul women maintain a scholarship under the name of the "Ethel Ballenger" scholarship in honor of their present president. The letter gave good report of the girl who is using the scholarship at this time.

Special tribute was paid Mrs. W. C. McDonald and Mrs. Paul McDowell, by the president, for their willingness to serve at all times and in any way possible.

The Bulletin was presented very effectively by Mrs. Byron Powell. The circles made splendid reports and the meeting was altogether profitable.

MRS. ALLEN TISON,
Superintendent Publicity.

Mrs. J. C. Holt Gives Shower-Tea.

Mrs. J. Cosby Holt was hostess at a miscellaneous shower Saturday afternoon at her home on Highland avenue complimenting Miss Mary Majors, a bride-elect of September.

"The Romance of the Flowers" contest was enjoyed, Mrs. Thomas Perry Fiske winning top prize and Miss Jo Hardwick winning the booby.

Mrs. Holt was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Frank Moriarity, Mrs. A. J. Cloud and Miss Joye Cloud, mother and sister of the hostess.

The invited guests were Miss Mary Major, Miss Jo Hardwick, Miss Joye Cloud, Mrs. Willie Knox, Mrs. Cornelia Booker Mrs. R. F. Bosley, Mrs. V. L. Sanford, Mrs. J. R. Patillo, Mrs. E. C. Douglas, Mrs. Marion Sharp, Mrs. E. R. Mustoe, Mrs. L. I. Newton, Mrs. J. C. Major, Mrs. T. P. Fiske, Mrs. H. A. Shacklette, Mrs. Janie Shropshire, Mrs. C. R. Philpot, Mrs. Paul B. Ford, Mrs. Joseph Owens, Mrs. J. D. Hall, Mrs. Burton Lanier, Mrs. Lloyd Haynes, Mrs. Frank Moriarity and Mrs. A. J. Cloud.

The December meeting will be held at Conyers with Mrs. John R. Lee as joint hostess with other members from Conyers church.

Peachtree Road Methodist Society.

The mission and Bible study department of the Peachtree Road Missionary society has placed the emphasis this year upon Bible study and prayer. In laying the foundation of our new church our superintendent of study insists that this be the chief cornerstone, so to speak, of our building.

The Bible study meetings are planned with a view to spiritual uplift. Our textbook for this year has been "Prayer and Missions."

Our leader, Mrs. R. E. Andoe, who is one of the best it has ever been my privilege to listen to, has endeavored to avoid monotony in all studies by having each chapter presented in a different way. Frequently members impersonate characters in the mission studies and present facts from the book as their own experiences.

We have not suspended during the summer, but have held the meetings in a park or some picnic spot with cooling drinks and light refreshments.

MRS. C. A. NORTON,
Superintendent of Publicity.

Junior Red Cross Has Large Meeting.

The first meeting of the school year of the Grammar School Council of the Junior Red Cross was held on Wednesday afternoon, September 15, at Rich's store, with a large attendance of representatives from the various city schools, as well as a large number of Red Cross chairmen present. These are chosen from the teaching staff of the city schools and from the North Avenue Presbyterian school, the latter institution having a large Red Cross membership.

Officers were chosen at the first meeting to serve the grammar school for the coming school year, and these officers were: President, Orazell Smith, Fair Street school; vice president, Thyrza Ellis, Highland school; secretary, Ellen Fleming, North Avenue Presbyterian school; treasurer, J. T. Hoffman, Frank L. Stanton school.

A feature of special interest was the awarding of a prize to the junior member bringing in the largest amount of tin foil collected during the summer, and this was awarded to Sarah Jane Baker, of Kirkwood school, who has collected 27 pounds of this so-called "waste product." The Junior Red Cross has collected tin foil for the past few years, and the organization has netted more than $100 from this activity.

In the absence of Mrs. Louis J. Elsas, the chairman, the meeting was conducted by the juniors for children in foreign countries, and a number of letters were delivered to the various schools from children who had received the boxes last year and who wrote of their gratitude and appreciation.

The juniors will continue their services for the children at Battle Hill sanitarium, and will also continue their scholarship fund, and their Christmas and other holiday work for local institutions. A new project is the establishment of a caffeteria for Inman Park school, where only sandwiches and milk have heretofore been given for the children in the special classes. The cooperation given the Junior Red Cross by Professor Sutton and his school officials inspires the organization to renewed effort and has resulted in a complete cooperation between the schools and the Red Cross.

Third Baptist Elects Officers.

The regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Missionary union of the Third Baptist church, was held Tuesday at the church.

Mrs. J. T. Bowles led the devotional. After this Mrs. C. S. Morris, president, took charge of the meeting. The subject was Missions. All circles made splendid reports.

The president announced that a Mission Study class would be held on the third Monday, at the church. The book to be taught will be, "All the World and all the Word." The day of prayer for home missions was observed at the church on Friday, September 17.

The report from the nominating committee was made by the chairman, Mrs. J. C. Green, and the full report accepted.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Mrs. J. T. Bowles, president; Mrs. B. R. Dickerson, vice president; Mrs. C. L. Peacock, secretary; Mrs. D. G. Seymore, treasurer; Mrs. H. C. Newton, personal service; Mrs. J. E. Miller, hospital chairman; Mrs. R. L. Baker, mission study and Y. W. A. leader; Mrs. C. S. Morris, G. A. leader; Mrs. L. O. Laney, Sunbeams; Mrs. E. B. Barrett, corresponding secretary and press chair; Mrs. J. F. Irby, circle No. 1; Mrs. F. A. Miller, circle No. 2; Mrs. H. F. Smith, circle No. 3; Mrs. J. T. Harden, circle No. 4.

Methodist Group Meets in Griffin.

The largest group meeting ever held in the Griffin district, met with the Griffin auxiliary last week, with Mrs. W. Y. Daniel, district secretary, presiding.

Dr. J. H. Eakes, presiding elder, led the devotional and Mrs. Travis welcomed the visitors. The main subject for the day was "Plans for the Completion of the Bennett Memorial Fund," and a number of plans were presented by Mrs. M. E. Tilly, the conference officer who has been assigned to the Griffin district especially for this campaign. Miss Leah Hartley, of Scarritt college, made a plea for the completion of the fund telling the need for the memorial building being erected. Mrs. B. B. Brown, conference superintendent of supplies, outlined the plan for the treasure chest sale to be held in Atlanta in November.

The committees in charge of the zones of the district were announced and representatives of each zone met during the noon recess for organization. The zone plan is being used to great advantage in the Elberton district and it is thought quite probable that this will improve the efficiency and the ease of carrying on the work in the Griffin district as well.

In the afternoon a round table was conducted and various problems were discussed. Turners and East Thomaston tied for the blue ribbon offered the new auxiliaries having the largest attendance at this meeting.

Luncheon was served to 105, 65 of these being out-of-town guests from the other auxiliaries throughout the district.

MRS. E. L. COLEMAN.

Capitol Avenue Baptist Week of Prayer.

Miss Dorothy Nabors has been elected president for the ensuing year, with Mrs. T. E. Rowden as councilor.

A mission study class on "Ann of Ava" was conducted recently and many seals and certificates were awarded.

The apportionment has been met but the one aim of the girls for the new year is an increased membership.

Briefly Told

Miss Rossie Newton of Griffin, Ga., president of the W. M. S. of the First Baptist church of that city was a welcome visitor recently at W. M. U. headquarters 320 Palmer building. Miss Newton reported that her society had recently donated a linen shower for the Georgia Baptist hospital—gifts valued at $75.00.

The W. M. S. of the Peachtree Baptist church which is one of the societies in the seventh district of W. M. U. Atlanta entertained at their August meeting in honor of the secretary, Mrs. S. P. Paschal, who addressed them on "Tithing and Stewardship." Those present were Mesdames Paschal, Adams, Burton, Walker, Mrs. Burton, Jr., Miss Nannie Burge and others.

The Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist W. M. S. is greatly indebted to the home mission board (S. B. C.) and to their field worker, Miss Emma Leachman for the stirring address on "Soul Winning" given before the society at the September meeting.

Miss Leachman and Mrs. A. F. McMahon, secretary Georgia W. M. U. attended the Serepta W. M. U. meeting in Athens September 9-10. Miss Leachman remained for ten days service in the Serepta association.

Miss Ruth Chapman of Hazlehurst is another of the W. M. U. training school graduates from Georgia who has left for Cuba to represent the Baptist home mission board. She joins Miss Christine Garnett who went out from the same division, (Southeastern) several years ago.

Let Baptist women and all interested friends remember and reserve the dates October 6-7 (Wednesday and Thursday) when the Atlanta W. M. U. will meet in annual session at Kirkwood Baptist church, the superintendent Mrs. Wilbur M. Jones presiding.

Mr. Dozier has received his high school education in Kobe, Japan, and has come home to enter Wake Forest college in North Carolina. His father is president of the Willingham Memorial school in Fuknoka, the fine Baptist school for boys which is the organ of the Southern Baptists in Japan.

The women of the First Methodist church, Atlanta, have placed the names of Mrs. Julia Gaither and Mrs. G. C. Seymour on the Bennett memorial book of remembrance, for which privilege they contributed $100.00 each to the building fund. Mrs. Seymour is the efficient church secretary and is a graduate of Scarritt college. Mrs. Gaither is a missionary in China supported by this church.

After this quarter, the Druid Hills Methodist Missionary society will undertake the entire support of Miss Louise Ballard. Miss Ballard is a member of the Druid Hills church and went to China about a year ago as a missionary teacher. The family of N. C. McPherson has been contributing one half of her support heretofore but because of a change in membership and affiliation with the Haygood Memorial church, the Druid Hills church wanted to support their own missionary and Mr. McPherson will direct his elsewhere.

The Business Woman's circle of the Grant Park Methodist church, organized less than a year ago, has grown until it has 36 active members. Of this group, 12 are business men who are interested, attending the meetings regularly and contributing to missions through this circle. The members of this live organization will give a linen shower to Scarritt college for Christian workers, Nashville, Tenn., upon the opening of the fall term late in this month.

A request has come from Alabama for the article about the Young People's service league in the Atlanta diocese, which appeared on the federated church women's page, August 29. The story of the Young People's new program was written by Miss Billy Linthicum, a member of All Saints church Y. P. S. L.

"Rally day" was celebrated in the All Saints church school with a most encouraging attendance. The new superintendent, W. W. Davison, will be assisted by F. R. Jones, Ravenel Walker and Miss Helen Miles, secretary. A tribute of high appreciation for years of faithful service was paid the retiring superintendent, John T. Hancock, by the Rev. W. W. Memminger, rector of the parish.

New Challenge Is Issued To Episcopal Church Women

Miss Lucinda Snook, past president of the Woman's auxiliary, has been honored with the leadership of the Atlanta diocese in a recently-planned undertaking of the Woman's Auxiliary to the National Council. This new challenge to the women of the Episcopal church is to be known as the "corporate gift."

The initial thank offering has for a number of years occupied an exclusive place in the triennial gift from women of this denomination for the advancement of God's kingdom.

Because the jubilee of the Woman's auxiliary occurred in the triennium of 1919-1922, a special gift of $50,000 was set apart for missionaries home on furlough. This is known as the Emery fund and is to honor the faithful services of Miss Julia C. Emery, long-time president of the Woman's Auxiliary to the National Council. The next triennium, 1922-1925, saw another special gift take form to memorialize the late Bishop Daniel S. Tuttle. This eventuated in two benevolences, one at St. Augustine's, Raleigh, N. C., a training school for colored churchwomen and the other a house in New York where women missionaries can live while in training. Both of these donations far surpassed the goal.

This idea of the special gift made a strong appeal to the mind of women of the auxiliary throughout the United States, as it became apparent to them that such funds would in no way affect their united thank offering which had for so long held its peculiar place in their religious life—this offering which at the last general convention held in New Orleans, for example, nearly approached the $1,000,000 mark.

At the triennial of 1925 the delegates to the Woman's auxiliary voted to take six objects from the list of advance work of the national council, to which was given the name of "The Corporate Gift." These objects with the amount of money pledged for each, are as follows:

St. Agnes school, Kyoto, Japan, $25,000.

Church of the Resurrection, Baguino, Philippine Islands, $18,000.

St. Timothy's hospital, Cape Mount, Liberia, $20,000.

Church of the Nazarene, Livramento, Brazil, $8,000.

Holy Trinity church, Port Au Prince, Haiti, $12,500.

St. Mark's School Nurana, Alaska, $15,000.

The advantage in having such a selection is that one may give to that object which makes the strongest appeal, and there is little doubt but that every amount designated will be more than attained.

These two specific objects, the united thank offering and the corporate gift, by no means represent the sum total of work accomplished by the Woman's auxiliary. To mention only a few of these activities, there is the department of religious education; the supply department, which sends boxes to fields wherever the church has missions, also cooperates with the Church School Service league in sending boxes all over the world; the work of Christian social service which assists the shut-in and the fallen; sending books and periodicals to lovely ones in remote places; and by no means least, a prayer partnership, for it is realized that all effort is but a poor accomplishment unless it be done to the glory of God.

B. W. M. U. News Notes of Interest

Friends throughout the state will regret to learn of the illness of Mrs. E. G. Willingham, who is at present a patient in the Georgia Baptist hospital. Mrs. Willingham is remembered and loved as a former president of the state Baptist Woman's Missionary union.

Miss Kate McLure, who for some time has been under the care of medical specialists, has fully regained her health and has returned to her work in Florida, where she is a teacher in the mission school at Tampa.

Miss Mattie Vi Summers leaves for China aboard the steamship, "Empress of Canada" which sails, September 30 from Vancouver, B. C.

Sincere interest is occasioned in W. M. U. circles by the announcement of the marriage of Edgar Dunstan to Miss Florence Johnson, of Bartow, Fla. Edgar is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dunstan, missionaries under the foreign board to Brazil. When but a boy Edgar returned to this state to receive his education as a Margaret Fund scholarship student at Mercer university and later as medical student at Emory. During his college years he was "mothered" by the Georgia union, with Mrs. L. A. Witherspoon, of Atlanta, as his especial divisional mother.

Mrs. Dunstan is a graduate of Bessie Tift college, where she was a student volunteer for foreign service. When Dr. Dunstan has finished his internship at Grady hospital, it is his and Mrs. Dunstan's purpose to give their lives in mission service in Brazil.

Mrs. George Westmoreland is in receipt of an interesting newspaper clipping from Shanghai, China, giving a rather detailed account of a pageant staged by pupils at the commencement exercises of the Kindergarten Normal Training school, of which Miss Catharine Bryan, of Georgia, is principal.

The climax of the evening, however, was reached when the "Spirit of Georgia" came upon the stage bearing in her hands a miniature model of Georgia Hall. "Georgia Hall," the finest kindergarten building in China of concrete and brick and fireproof throughout, was the gift to Shanghai college in 1924 of the women of the Baptist Missionary Union of Georgia and is familiarly known as the Catherine Bryan kindergarten in loving honor of her who was the inspiration of the gift.

MRS. L. O. FREEMAN,
Publicity Supt. B. W. M. U.

The annual meeting of the W. M. U. of the Tugalo association was held with the Cross Roads church, near Carnesville, August 26. Five pastors, Brother Goode, Brother Holcomb, Brother Collins, Brother Gibson and Brother Lancaster, pastor of the hostess church, were present.

Mrs. A. M. McDaniel is superintendent of this association.

Middle Cherokee.

On September 2 the W. M. U. of the Middle Cherokee association, met with the Cassville Baptist church, Mrs. George Adams, of Cartersville, superintendent, presiding.

Two churches in the association had maintained since their last annual meeting the standard A-1 full graded W. M. U., the First church, Cartersville and the Tabernacle church, Cartersville. Leaders and members alike are working to keep this record through December and thus earn a pennant offered by the W. M. U. S. B. C.

Mrs. George W. Brooke, young people's leader, has been untiring in her efforts. A helpful feature of the meeting was the address by Miss Emma Leachman, field secretary.

Haralson County.

The Haralson County association, of which Mrs. E. C. Brown is superintendent, held its annual meeting with the Baptist church at Bremen, September 3.

Stewardship and Missions Program.

An interesting program on stewardship and missions was held at the Capitol View Baptist church on Monday, September 13, by Mrs. W. L. Allen, the stewardship chairman.

Mrs. J. W. Smith gave a very interesting talk on missions. She is much loved by all for her charming personality. A message on prayer was brought in a very forceful way by Miss Myra Wilhite.

The meeting was concluded by a message of prayer in song by Mrs. R. C. Simpson.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

SUNDAY SEPTEMBER 19th, 1926

SPLINTERED BY GIANT HAND—Nineteen persons were killed and 50 injured when the Scenic Limited, crack Denver & Rio Grande Western passenger train, was derailed in Colorado. Two day coaches and a sleeper went into the Arkansas river. (International)

LEADER IN ANOTHER SWIM TO CONQUER UNVANQUISHED CHANNEL—Viola Hartman—in private life Mrs. Fred Cady—will lead the Southern California relay team in its exploratory swim from Long Beach to Catalina Island, 23 miles, for the purpose of charting tides and conditions preparatory for competition for the $25,000 Wrigley prize. The channel has never been conquered and is alive with sea life, which makes the dash hazardous. (International)

CAN 'BAMA REPEAT?—That the southern conference champs will put another formidable football team in the field this fall is assured. The Crimson men are working hard and long. Look at this action picture of Rosenfeld, crack backfield ace, taking a flying leap over Pearce, hefty linesman. (Tracy Mathewson)

FLIVVER FUEL OUT OF BOXES—WHO KNOWS?—Dr. William A. Noel, assistant engineer at the government's Arlington laboratory, has been experimenting widely in the use of grain dust as a substitute for gasoline. He is shown here with a Ford engine which he ran with the powder that often causes disastrous explosions in grain elevators. (International)

READS ABOUT HIS OWN TRIAL—Harry M. Daugherty, former attorney general, as he appeared buying a newspaper just after leaving federal court in New York at the start of his trial for alleged bribery. (International)

NO PUBLIC THOROUGHFARE—Just to remind the walking world that the triangle in front of the Hurt building at Edgewood avenue and Exchange place is private property—and incidentally to comply with the laws on easements—owners of the property every few years fence in the tiny plot and bar its use for a time. The fence was erected again recently.

AFTER THE LANDSLIDE—Two passengers were killed by electrocution and a score more were injured when a section of an embankment caved in and crushed this all-steel Brooklyn and Manhattan Transit company train in Brooklyn. The two who were killed leaped from the train and came in contact with the third rail. The others were injured in the jam of frightened passengers. (Herbert)

ATLANTA PILOT WINS MANY FLIGHT HONORS—Shown in mid flight is the Waco plane driven by Doug Davis, intrepid Atlanta airman, who has won many honors in the "On-to-Sesqui" contest flights of the national air meet at Philadelphia. (Airview Company)

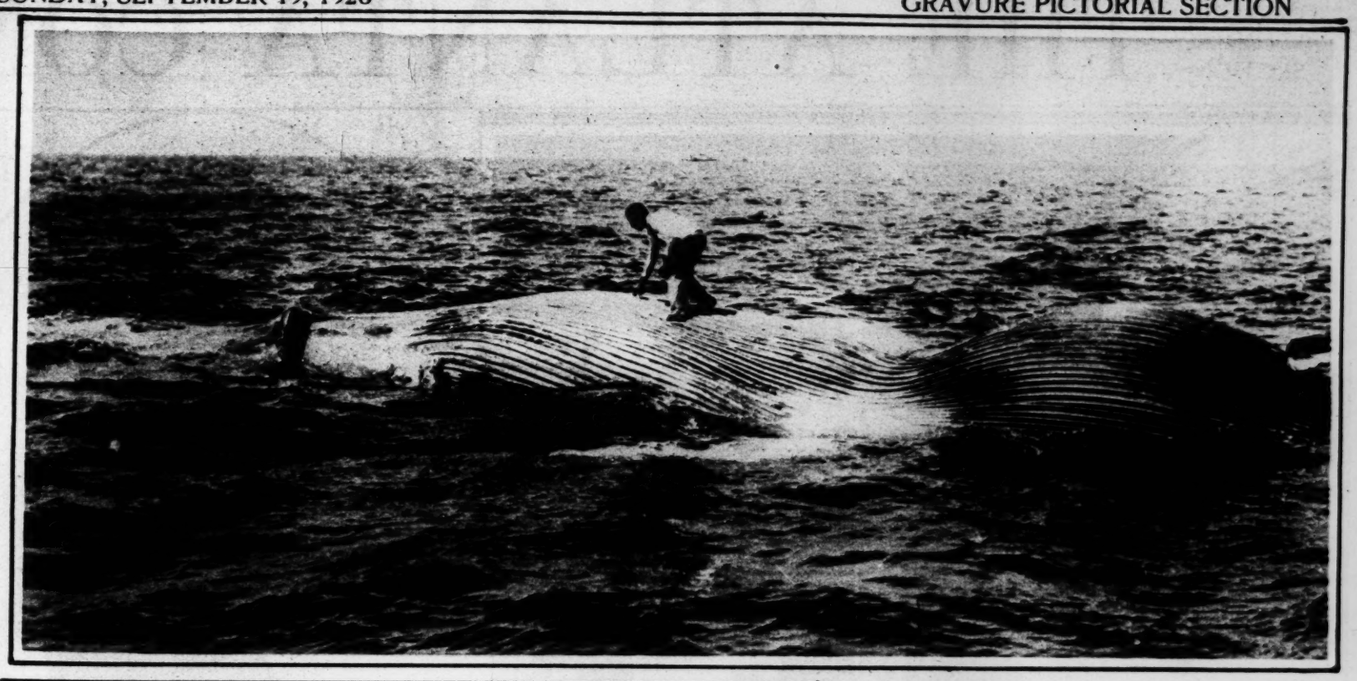

SEVENTH HEAVEN—Speaking of contentment—boy, just look at this little pickanniny turned loose on a slice of luscious Georgia watermelon. (George Cornett)

TOWN WIPED OUT BY GREAT FIRE—Here are shown the ruins of the village of St. Come, near Quebec, Canada, where more than 100 dwellings were destroyed by a fierce blaze which caused $2,000,000 loss. (Miller)

"AGE OF INNOCENCE"—Another of the 52 paintings selected as the world's greatest. Painted in 1776 by Sir Joshua Reynolds, celebrated portrait painter. It now hangs in the National Gallery at London. See the story in today's Constitution magazine.

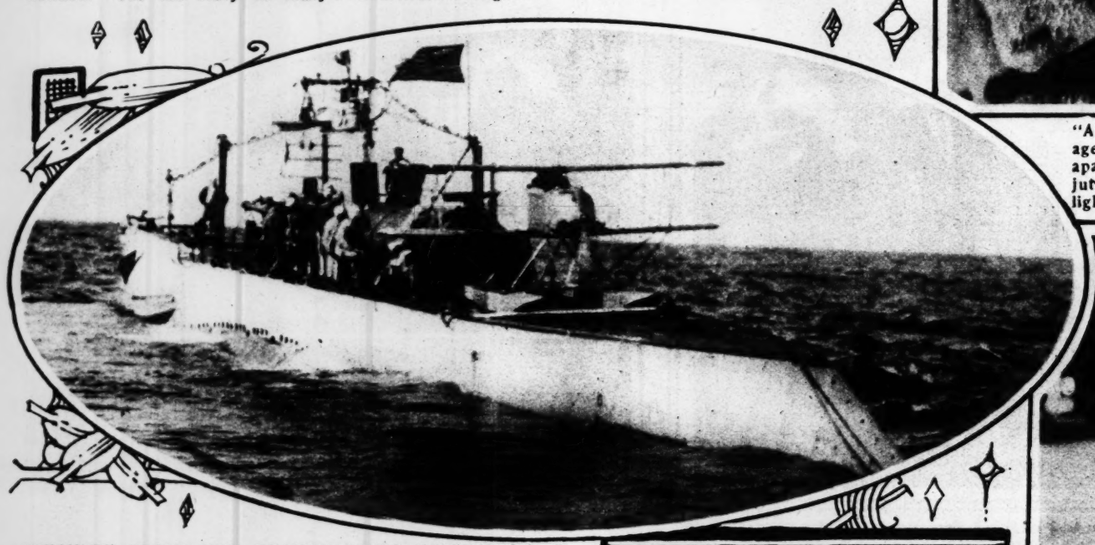

HERE'S A FISH STORY WITH PROOF—This massive blue whale, captured off Redondo Beach, Fla., by Captain John Arveson, of the whaler Hanka, is 48 feet from tip to tip. (International)

"ALL MODERN CONVENIENCES"—Refrigerated temperature, ample cold storage facilities and—most wonderful of all—ice windows, are boasted by this apartment in an Eskimo igloo on the Siberian coast of the Behring straits. The jutting block of snow catches the sun's rays, reflects them inside the house and lights and heats the interior. (Herbert)

THE MODERN "MONA LISA"—To Andree de Martel, noted French beauty, has been given this sobriquet because her features are cast in the mold of those in the famous painting. There is a hint of lurking sadness in the face here shown. (Herbert)

"PEANUT" PLANE NEW DEATH-DEALING INNOVATION—For the first time, a submarine has been equipped to carry an airplane. Here is shown the U. S. navy's sub S-1 with a tiny seaplane called the "peanut" type because it weighs only 1,000 pounds. A derrick serves as a "lift" in taking off and packs the plane out of the water and restores it to its runway when it alights. Tests are under way on the new invention. (Herbert)

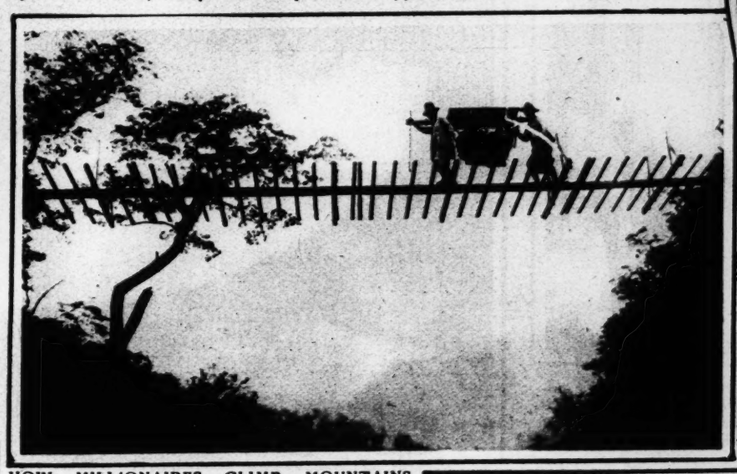

THE DADDY OF THE FLIVVER—This ancient relic was the predecessor of the modern automobile by more than a century. An ingenuous Yankee inventor at that time devised this wooden vehicle which works on the same fundamental principle as the auto, except that its power is supplied by hand. (International)

SNAKY SHOES—A Wichita, Kansas, shoemaker turned out these unique boots, ordered from him by an employee of a carnival which had a great boaconstrictor die on its hands. Here are shown the cobbler, the boots and nough snake hide left over to make a second pair of shoes. (International)

"THAT SCHOOLGIRL COMPLEXION" NOW INTERESTS HIM—"Gentleman Jim" Corbett, former heavyweight boxing champion, and who is 60 years old despite his youthful appearance, says that playing tennis daily, taking long walks regularly, eating heartily and drinking water in plentiful quantities will keep any person physically fit and young in looks. (International)

HOW MILLIONAIRES CLIMB MOUNTAINS Baron Kihachiro, Japanese money magnate, wanted to climb Mount Akaishi, 10,300 feet high. Here you see him crossing a none-too-robust bridge on the ascent. Yes, baron takes his climbing easy and reclines in a sedan chair while bearers carry him on their shoulders to view the spot from which his ashes will some day be cast to the winds. (International)

WHERE ONCE THE CHRIST TROD—American mowing machines now reap abundant harvests on this hill overlooking the little city of Nazareth. This photograph was made on the grounds of the Near East Relief Agricultural school.

"MISS RIGHT-OF-WAY"—That's the proud title of Miss Annie Stevens, of Columbus, Ga., who also won a handsome loving cup when she was adjudged the most efficient and valuable woman employee of the Central of Georgia railroad. She was selected at a recent annual outing of clerks of the Central on Tybee island. She has been in the road's employ twelve years.

HOW'S THIS FOR A RECORD?—Little Analene Bower, of Oley, Pa., seated in front of the group, can boast of what few children can. She has eight living grandparents, shown here with Analene's father and mother. (International)

"NAME YER POISON, BUDDY"—The ancient chant of the barkeep resounded again when raiding policemen enacted this little family scene immediately after raiding the Eagles' club. Note the spittoons, the mahogany bar and the high stool. In the group are Lieutenant L. J. Carroll, Lieutenant W. H. Andrews, Detectives R. L. Mosley, L. C. Harper, H. D. Lawson, W. L. Morris and Lieutenant E. S. Acree. (Francis E. Price)

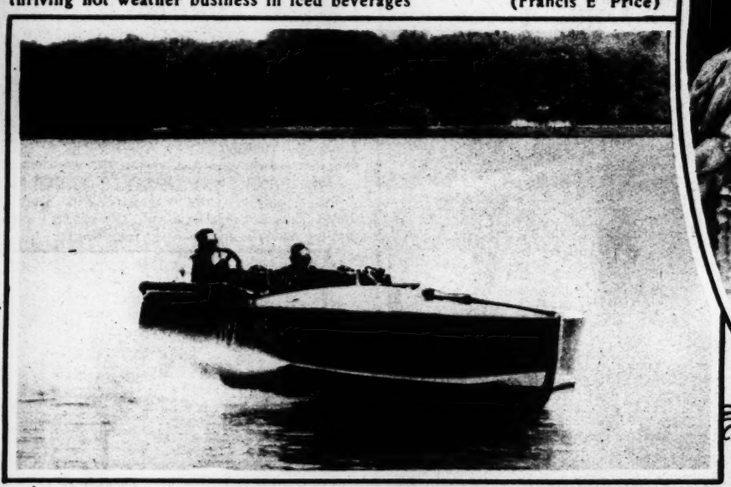

DID SOMEBODY SAY THE COUNTRY'S DRY?—Take a slant at the moist stock of the Eagles' club, which gazes down in lofty splendor on "Five Points" in the heart of Atlanta from its aerie in the third story of a downtown building. The police thought the Eagles' beer might exceed the legal alcoholic content limit, so they staged a raid and found the club doing a thriving hot weather business in iced beverages (Francis E Price)

A MODERN FEMININE DANIEL—Miss Grace Freeman, pretty Atlanta girl, invades the lion's den at the Grant park zoo and makes a hit with the city's three new lion cubs. (George Cornett)

SHY EASTERN SCREEN BEAUTY IS CONVERTED TO "FILM KISS"—Olive Young, star of the Great Wall Picture company, of China, is the first Oriental leading lady to consent to a kissing scene. Now they all are doing it. (International)

"MISS AMERICA V" TRIUMPHS—Gar Wood's speediest boat, establishing an average record of 61 miles an hour, forced Henri Eseder's entry, the "Excelsior," out of the Harmsworth trophy event on the Detroit river September 7, when the Frenchman tried vainly to wrest from Wood the trophy he has held since 1920. The French boat conceded the race after one heat, during which it ran at an average speed of only 41.5 miles per hour. The "Miss America V" has run 81 miles per hour in trial tests. (International)

REAL LIFE "ABIE'S IRISH ROSE"—Pretty Vera O'Connor, Washington state Irish show girl, declares she is ideally mated to Myer Davis, her Jewish musician husband. They both look it here. (International)

TAXIDERMY IS HOBBY OF ATLANTA POLICEMAN—Many stuffed and mounted specimens of bird and animal life preside over the interesting den of Policeman E. H. Bentley, member of the Atlanta police force, whose home is at 1150 DeKalb Ave. He is shown with a long-legged heron and a lordly eagle, the pride of his collection. (Kenneth Rogers)

ANOTHER BLOW AT FATHER TIME—Edna Wallace Hopper, who proudly proclaims that despite her 62 years she has the heart and appearance of a flapper, is planning a stage "come-back." She will play lead in a Paris revue this fall, and, if it is successful, will again be seen on Broadway, where she was a footlight favorite three decades ago. (Herbert)

"THE WISHING TREE"—Lovers who "make wishes" under the arch of this queer "four-legged" freak will have the wishes granted, according to legend at Bridgewater, Mass., where the tree is located. (Herbert)

THAW TURNS AUTHOR—Harry K. Thaw, the most sensational figure in American criminal records of the past half century, has just published a volume dealing with the famous feud which ended in the death of Stanford White at old Madison Square garden. (International

CARVED BY NATURE — This famous stone man of the mountain at Assonet, near Tauton, Mass., smiles a welcome to two fair visitors who scaled the heights to view his rugged features at close range. (international)

"PAGE BOY" EFFECT—Here's a chic street dress of navy cloth with white vest of crepe de chine piped in red and with a corded silk vest with pockets.

FOR THE DANCE—Of imported brocaded Dresden taffeta, it is an effective style for fall evening wear. Note the quaint ruching and the old-fashioned lace bertha.

CHARMING COAT—It is trimmed with squirrel duvanna cloth; it has dolman sleeves forming a blouse effect.

PRESIDENT'S FIDDLING UNCLE READY TO TAKE STUMP—"Uncle John" Wilder, President Coolidge's uncle, says he will take the field to work for his nephew if Coolidge entered the next campaign. He was snapped on the porch of his home at Plymouth, Vt. (International)

DAINTY RUSSIAN DANCERS IN ARTISTS' SERIES—Mordkin and his Russian ballet are booked in the Southern Musical bureau's popular attractions to appear in Atlanta this season. March 9 is the date for their performance.

A MODERN "LADY GODIVA" TAKES A RIDE—Unfortunately, however, this dainty miss had bobbed hair, so she was forced to seek protection in a bathing suit. No rampant steeds being handy, she pressed Cupid, the giant hippo of the Toledo, Ohio, zoo, into service as a charger. The dainty rider's name is Sylvia Soule.

CHORUS GIRLS ARE MADE; NOT BORN—In proof of the fact that high kicking and dainty dancing are cultivated arts, look at this row of prospective show girls being taught how to perform at the studio of a Los Angeles instructor with the aid of block and tackle. (Herbert)

MUTE WARNING TO COYOTES—Skeletons of two of these fierce little animals, which slay buffalo, deer, mountain goats and sheep and other wild animals, are wired to the fence which encloses the boundary of the national bison preserve in the northwest as a warning for other coyotes to stay out. (Herbert)

AID TO AIRMEN—The Fincher-Traylor company, of LaGrange, have painted this giant direction sign on the top of their building to guide airplanes passing over the city.

"KITCHENER COFFIN" EMPTY—Here is shown Frank Power, the man who believed a coffin recently brought to England from Norway contained the body of Lord Kitchener. When it was opened, the coffin was found to be empty. Power now says he wishes he was present at the opening of the casket. (International)

HOW'S YOUR SENSE OF HUMOR?—Will Rogers, famous humorist, is coming to Atlanta to make you laugh and at the same time to open the Southern Musical bureau artists' series of attractions. Rogers' lecture is scheduled for October 19.

THE HOUSE THAT PAPER BUILT—"Kosy News Camp" is the name of the novel home of Elis F. Stedman at Pigeon Cove, Mass. It is made entirely of old newspaper and its interior fittings are of the same material. The paper was reduced to pulp and made into building blocks. (Herbert)

Can the Indian Truthfully Be Called "The Vanishing American?"

Although in many instances he has adopted the costume and habits of the white man, the American Indian continues to revert to the traditions of his race, which have been handed down from the day when this country was a trackless waste, over which the red man ruled supreme. Many have donned derbies in preference to war-like headgear; some squaws roll their pappooses in perambulators and many Indian families have deserted their tepees and cliffs for stuffy town apartments. As these pictures will show, the Indian clings to the customs and costumes of his ancestors. (Pictures by Herbert)

How many people actually have halitosis (unpleasant breath)?

Read what dentists have to say about this:

EVERY reader of Listerine advertising knows about halitosis (unpleasant breath), that insidious thing that not even your best friends discuss with you. Yet there are still a few "doubting Thomas" folks who think halitosis is only a state of mind.

Out of simple curiosity we put this question up to a carefully selected list of dentists—1000 of them—and in a letter asked them the following:

> Do you ever use Listerine, in self-defense, in the mouth of a patient troubled with halitosis, unpleasant breath?
> Please answer if you use it this way (1) Frequently, (2) Occasionally, or (3) Never.

Four hundred and forty replied as follows:

83% said "Frequently"
15% said "Occasionally"
Only 2% said "Never."

Now, what human being meets halitosis at closer range, face to face, than the dentist? And who would be a better judge of this condition—and how to combat it—than the dentist?—Lambert Pharmacal Company, St. Louis, U. S. A.

The FAIR UNFAIR

by Booth Tarkington

In Which Apparent Brutality Is Shown to Have Its Mitigating Circumstances.

He called me an "old fool" and a "kinky-haired Albino," and I kept on trying to be polite to him, anyhow, and he tripped me and threw me down and got grass stains over my dress and knees."

FROSTY and turbulent October relented abruptly, and, like an angry lady becoming all at once unreasonably gentle, followed an almost snowy morning with an afternoon stolen from August. The small town relaxed in the hazy sunshine; shirt sleeves were seen upon the more informal; colored people went hopefully to fish in the creek; and old Mr. Wilover, foremost citizen, returning home at a little after three from his bank, felt encouraged to renew his summer custom of taking the air upon his "front porch." A rocking chair was brought from indoors for him and placed near the stone railing of the broad veranda and here he sat down to a cigar, rocking himself intermittently and waiting until the evening newspaper should be tossed over the iron fence into the front yard.

Not long after he had thus pleasantly established himself a lovely schoolgirl of twelve turned in at the gate and in deep meditation walked slowly up the long path of flagstones that led to the veranda. She was a child exquisite in profile and in all contours, though not yet aware that she was, and so the more beautiful because of the angelic innocence of look produced by this rather surprising ignorance of hers. Certainly she was angelic to Mr. Wilover's eye, which became wholly unbankerlike at sight of her; for she was Clytie Wilover, his grandchild, the daughter of his dead son, and she and her grandfather lived alone together in the large brick house.

She ascended the stone steps without speaking, absorbed in the profundities of some inward problem, and it seemed that she would pass indoors without being aware of her elderly relative's presence upon the veranda; but he spoke to her.

"Clytie?"

"Yes, sir?" She looked up, surprised; then went to him and kissed his cheek with a conscientiousness still preoccupied. "What do you want, sir?"

"Did you have a good day in school?"

"Yes, sir; pretty."

"A pretty day, Clytie?"

"I mean pretty good."

"I wonder," he said fondly, and he touched the close curls about her head, all bright with suavely curved gildings in the afternoon sunshine. "I was wondering what could be in this thoughtful little top-knot of yours as you came up the walk. You looked as if something had got into it that you couldn't get out. What in the world were you thinking?"

"Nothing, sir."

He laughed. "People don't look like that when they're not thinking about anything at all. Let's have it."

"Well." She frowned and pinched her lower lip dubiously between forefinger and thumb. "I was thinking——" She broke off; then spoke with conviction. "Grandpa, I believe boys are odious."

"What have they been doing?"

"Nothing. I was just looking at some on the way home from school. They were across the street from me and I didn't even know 'em."

"Did they say anything to you, Clytie?"

"No, sir. They didn't notice me. I was just looking at 'em."

"Then what made you think--"

"I just thought so," she explained. "They're—well, of course, they're terrible looking. And they sound so horrible. Some of 'em's voices were changing. They jump around and make so many motions all the time, and then hit each other and kick and squawk. They laugh as if they wanted to hurt somebody. They call each other names and they get themselves all over dirt and let it stay there. They don't care. They're really horrible, grandpa."

"Are they?"

"I believe I hate every boy that was ever born," she went on. "I don't see what they're for, grandpa. Why did they have to be? Just so's they'd grow up into men?"

"I suppose probably, Clytie."

"It seems a shame," she said musingly. "It ought to've been fived so't there'd be men without there having to be a lot of awful boys first. O, well."

But upon this she went indoors, leaving her "O, well," in the air behind her with the implication that her conclusion would be, "We can't have everything!"

She did not return to the veranda, but presently, having emerged by some rearward door with a large slice of chocolate cake in her hand, she appeared again within her grandfather's range of vision. There were croquet wickets upon the lawn of the "side yard;" she had a mallet in her hand and began to knock the striped balls over the clipped grass, now and then musingly nibbling her slice of cake. He watched her for a little while, then turned his idle attention to the street.

Suddenly he stopped rocking himself and sat up straight in his chair. A station taxicab, known to him, was turning in at his driveway and he was expecting no one. Moreover, he recognized the two figures on the back seat as those of his daughter Miriam and her young son, Frankie. Miriam had never come to visit him without any forewarning, at least by telephone, though she lived only sixty miles away; and when she came it was always in her own car. This arrival by taxicab from a train was therefore unexampled, and not only surprised him but appeared to him as a portent of impending disturbance. Miriam had always been what he called "emotional"—he feared she was bringing some emotion of hers to him now.

There were a porte-cochere at the side of the house opposite the croquet ground, and, when the taxicab stopped there and Miriam descended her father perceived at once that his prophetic disquiet had been warranted. Agitation was but too easily perceptible in her expression, in her voice, and in the gesture with which she drew her son to her side when he followed her out of the cab. She seemed to cling to him and to lean upon him in a widowed manner that the twelve-year-old boy himself little appreciated.

"I wish you'd let me alone, mamma," he said peevishly. "You're all right now; you've taken ammonia enough, heavens knows!"

His mother smiled pathetically. "Yes, Frankie," she said, and turned from him to greet her father, breathing upon Mr. Wilover's cheek, as she kissed him, the heavy sigh of one who expects soon to sob aloud.

"You're staying over night with me?" he asked.

"I'm staying," she replied, and as he glanced nervously at two small traveling bags the cabman was delivering to a white-coated colored man who came from the house, she added, "Our trunks will be here tomorrow, I suppose."

"Your trunks, Miriam?"

Before replying she placed a black gloved hand upon her visibly heaving breast, closed her eyes, bit her tremulous lower lip hard, and, having thus temporarily controlled herself, inquired for Clytie. "If she's here will you send for her and let her entertain Frankie, please?" she said. "I must have a talk with you instantly; but the poor child has been through enough. Perhaps Clytie could play with him outdoors while we go in to your library."

"I'll call her," Mr. Wilover said, and went to summon his granddaughter, though Frankie showed no enthusiasm.

"I don't want to 'play,'" he said. "Anyhow, I certainly don't want to with that old Clytie. She may be my cousin, but I don't care if she is; she's of no interest on earth to me."

"Hush!" his mother warned him. "Here she is."

Clytie, making her appearance with her grandfather around a corner of the house, gave her aunt a kiss of polite welcome, but was noncommittal in greeting her cousin.

"Howdydo, Frankie," she said, and looked at him with a grave but enigmatic attention. He nodded, and looked at her not at all.

"Run and play, children," his mother said gently; then with a sudden impulse caught Frankie tightly in her arms, kissed him hurriedly, uttered a sob, and rushed into the house with a handkerchief busy at her eyes and nose.

Her father followed her to his library and closed the door. Already she was extended upon a leathern couch, weeping convulsively.

"O, dear me!" he said, "What is it now, Miriam?"

"'Now'?" she sobbed. "You say, 'What is it now,' as if it were always something with me—as if I were always coming to you with something wrong? Is that fair?"

"It was just an inadvertence," he said wisely. "I mean: What's the matter?"

She sat upright and checked her sobbing. "I've left him, she said. "I'll never consent to see him again—

She laughed unhappily at the useless question. "Who else could I leave, since I've brought Frankie with me? Frankie's all I have in the world now."

"Is he? Why?"

But Miriam was not quite ready for so direct a question, and probably she intended to tell her story in her own way. At all events, she made no reply; but, opening a small handbag, procured a fresh handkerchief and substituted it for the sodden one she had been applying. "Frankie's an angel," she said brokenly. "A pure, bright angel! I oughtn't to mind having only him to live for. It ought to be enough; and I couldn't have lived at all, this whole last week, if it hadn't been for him. I couldn't have, father."

"Why not, Miriam?"

"He loves me so," she said, weeping gently into the fresh handkerchief. "I mean Frankie does. He's been so sympathetic—so sweet! If he'd been three times his age he couldn't have been more understanding or more Christian manhood. He intends never to speak to his father again as long as he lives. He wouldn't any more than I would myself."

"You mean George?" Mr. Wilover asked, and, much perturbed, he sat down in a chair, facing her. "You mean that you and Frankie have stopped speaking to George?"

"You mean—permanently?"

"I mean forever," Miriam said. "I suppose he may have the decency to express our trunks over tomorrow; but if he doesn't I'll have to get you to send somebody after them, and I'll give you a list of the things I want out of the house. I may have to ask you to go yourself."

"O, dear me!" her father groaned. "When did it happen?"

"It's always been happening father. He's never cared for me, and I've found it out, that's all. And so I'm through!"

"But how——"

"How did I find it out?" she said. "How does any woman find that out? By the way he's been treating me, of course!"

"But what's he done?"

"What hasn't he!" She choked upon a sob brought suddenly into her throat by her thought of the wrongs she had been suffering so lately; but she was able to begin her recital. "The last thing he did—O, it wasn't the worst—it was to tell me to go and kill myself. He just invited me to commit suicide, that was all, papa!"

"What? You tell me George said such a thing as that to you?"

"But it's nothing!" she cried. "It's nothing at all compared to the other things he's done."

Mr. Wilover passed his hand over his forehead. "I can hardly believe it, Miriam. You mean to tell me deliberately that your husband——"

"'Deliberately,'" she cried. "You don't know him! Indeed he did do it deliberately. He's done it all deliberately. But telling me to go and kill myself was only his last little pleasantry for me. That was this morning as he started to his factory. He just left it with me to spend the day with!"

"But why did he say such a thing to you?"

"Just to make it clearer how he hates me. But I tell you it's nothing to what he did last Thursday."

"What was that?"

"I'll show you." Miriam said; and, drawing up her right sleeve almost to the shoulder, she exposed a graceful arm upon which were seen several rosy transverse streaks and the blue area of a substantial bruise. She spoke quietly. "Do you see, father?"

Mr. Wilover's voice trembled. "You mean—but you can't mean—"

"Can't I?"

"Do you mean me to understand that he did that, Miriam?"

"I do. He did it."

"How?"

"You know the steam radiator in our front hall. It was a cold day and that radiator is always overheated. He crushed my arm down on it and held it there until I screamed for help."

"What!" Mr. Wilover made a gesture of strongest protest. "I can't believe such a horrible thing."

"You have eyes, haven't you?" his daughter said. "These are pretty distinct proofs of burns and bruises, I should say; and the pain kept me awake all that night."

"But what——"

"What made him do it?" she interrupted, and she smiled icily as she drew her sleeve down over the marks of injury. "Because he wanted to kill me, I suppose, but didn't quite dare."

"But why?"

"Just because he's grown to hate me and would like me out of his way."

"Why should he want that?"

"I don't know, father. He may want to marry somebody else, or he may just want to be rid of Frankie and me; I don't know."

"But no decent man could do such things and I'd always thought——"

"Of course you did," she said. "Everybody thinks George is one of the best men in the world. The difference is only that the other people don't know him. They don't live with him, you see. He doesn't keep them locked in a room with nothing to eat or drink."

"Miriam!"

"That was last Friday, the day after he threw me against the radiator and burned me," she said, and she began to weep again. "He locked me in my room and told me to jump out of the window and break my neck. O, yes; he says things like that all the time; they've become quite commonplace in our happy household! He even locked the door between my room and my bathroom so that I couldn't get a drink at the faucet if I got thirsty. O, yes, papa; he does things like that—O, any day!"

Mr. Wilover, naturally moved by a growing and intolerable indignation, rose from his chair and began to pace the floor. "You've done right to leave him," he said huskily. "He's outside the pale of decency! To hurt a woman like that—his own wife—"

She interrupted him with an outcry. "O, he doesn't think of me as his wife—not even as a woman. He just thinks of me as something to be beaten and burned and insulted and tortured!"

Mr. Wilover halted by the library table and struck a heavy blow upon it with his clenched fist. "The ruffian!" he cried. "He's a ruffian and a scoundrel and a coward, Miriam!"

"And I've been so patient with him," Miriam wailed. "I've borne it so quietly, hoping he might change and be kinder to me. I've done everything in the world to make his home bright and cheerful for him; but it's all been wasted. It's only made him hate me more and more."

Again Mr. Wilover struck a blow upon the table. "The coward!"

There was a knock upon the door and the white jacketed colored man half opened it. "Mist' George jes' druv up in his auto, suh. He asks to see you. I got him in the front 'ception room, suh."

Mr. Wilover had not heard him well. "I can't see anybody. Who'd you say?"

"Mist' George, suh—you' son-in-law. He says he know his wife's here, but he say he on'y want to see you, suh."

Miriam became rigid. "Nobody must see him. Have him sent out of the house instantly, father."

The colored man smiled tactfully. "Mist' George say he expect maybe you say you ain' goin' to see him, suh. Say he goin' set there till you do, suh."

"All right," Mr. Wilover said grimly. "If he sits there too long I guess I can get a policeman to throw him out! That'll do, Sam."

"Yes, suh." Sam withdrew, bowing appreciatively, and his employer turned to the unhappy lady upon the couch. "I wonder if the best thing I could do wouldn't be to go in there and kick him out of my house myself. What I'd like to do, I'd like to go in there and kill him." Apparently the impulse to act upon his own suggestion was a strong one; at least he had taken a step toward the door when his daughter sprang up and and caught him by the arm.

"No, no!" she said. "You've no idea how powerful he is when he's in these brutal moods. You mustn't—" She paused, annoyed and puzzled by something external. "What is that sound?"

"What sound?"

"It seems to me I've been hearing it for quite a time," she explained. "But I've been suffering so I didn't consciously notice it. It's intolerably penetrating, and in my state of nerves I just can't stand it. I wish you'd call Sam back and have it stopped. It sounds like cats."

Mr. Wilover was silent, to listen, and the sound she spoke of became audible to him; it was a tinny but convulsive wailing. More, it was rapidly growing louder; it was approaching.

"That isn't cats," Mr. Wilover informed his daughter. "It's Clytie."

"Don't let her come in," Miriam said sharply; but this was a waste of breath, for Clytie was not in a state to be amenable either to requests or demands, and she was approaching the library at a run. She plunged into the room, half screaming, weeping copiously, and with clutching hands seized her grandfather about the waist, lifting to him an imploring wet face.

"Don't let him! Don't let him!" she hoarsely screamed, and, sliding down Mr. Wilover somewhat as if he had been a column that she found herself too weak to climb, she crumpled, groveling, at his feet. "Don't let him hit me again, grandpa!"

"Let who hit you, Clytie?"

"That awful brat! That awful brat of a Frankie!"

"What in the world do you mean?" Mr. Wilover naturally found his distresses becoming somewhat complicated; and his voice, a little distracted, showed that he did. "Do you mean——"

But here his daughter intervened. "You mustn't speak in that way of your dear little cousin, Clytie," she said, with some sharpness. "I think you're trying to blame him for some accident, probably."

"What?" Clytie cried, and she sprang to her feet. "You just feel my head," she said. "I thought first he'd broke it wide open; but it stayed together, somehow. Feel the top of it, grandpa." And as she guided his hand among the close curls that so charmingly wreathed her lovely little head, Mr. Wilover's expression became one of startled commiseration.

"Good heavens!" he exclaimed. He turned to his daughter. "There's a bump on her head half the size of an egg. If that boy did this——"

"Please don't intimate such thing," Miriam said primly. "S probably ran into a tree and decid to blame it on him; she's never be at all nice to Frankie. Please do encourage her to tell stories abo him, father."

"'Stories'!" Clytie shouted, and the extremity of her emotion s stamped her foot. "Is that bump my head a story? Grandpa felt himself, didn't he? And if you do like my calling Frankie a 'brat,' Au Miriam, I'll certainly call him worse that, because you and grandpa do know how he acts when he gets alo with me. I'd just as soon try to polite to a crocodile as I would to hi and a crocodile would be a hundr times nicer!"

"Tut, tut!" her aunt said. "I afraid you're rather spiteful, Clytie.

"No, she isn't," her grandfath protested warmly. "She never How did it happen, dear?"

"It didn't happen," Clytie inform ed him, weeping afresh. "He ju came up and hit me."

"With his fist?"

"His fist? You don't think could make a bump on me like th with just his fist, do you, grandpa He took a croquet mallet and slan med it down on my head as hard he could!"

"What!"

"He did," she insisted. "Tha wasn't all he did, either! You an Aunt Miriam weren't any more tha out of sight before he snatched m piece of cake out of my hand. hadn't done a thing to him; I wa just walking along and trying to be a polite as I could to him. He said, 'C look across the street!' And when did he snatched it out of my hand an ran. Then when I asked him to giv me back anyhow half of it he calle me names and ate it all. He calle me 'an old fool' and a kinky-haire albino;' and I tried to keep on bein polite to him, anyhow, and he tripped me and threw me down and got gree grass stains all over my dress and m knees. Just look at them!! She ex hibited these defacements pathetical ly. "Then, while I was just arguin with him about behaving at least little decently, he simply and purel tried to murder me with one of th croquet mallets. He didn't say h was going to hit me, or anything, h just simply and purely hit me! Yo feel my head again, grandpa, if yo don't believe me!"

"Of course, I believe you, poo child," Mr. Wilover assured her, and resuming his chair, he took her upo his knee. "There, there!" he said. "Don't be troubled, dearie. I know it hurts; but you mustn't mind. O course, Frankie will apologize t you."

"Do you think so—really?' Miriam inquired. She was observing, with an eye somewhat critical and aloof, the mutual demonstrations of her father and her niece. "Really, it seems there's something more important engaging us than Clytie's imagined injuries."

"I don't think so," he returned, and with a gentle hand he stroked Clytie's wet cheek. "It won't hurt long, Clytie child," he said. Then, as she renewed her sobbing, he soothingly rocked her in his arms. "Don't you mind. Grandpa'll make it up to you."

To the lady who had come to seek his shelter and counsel these doting solaces appeared to verge on senility. "Will you kindly send the child to her room, father?" she asked; but in Clytie's ears this request must have sounded unfeeling, for she at once increased the volume of her lamentations.

Ed Wynn's Question Box

—BY— ED WYNN

Dear Mr. Wynn:—One of my neighbors has a son who is now about 22 years of age. For the past ten years he has been a lazy, shiftless boy. He ran away from home three weeks ago and yesterday his father got a letter from him saying he was in the movies and getting a salary of $2,000 a week. Can you imagine it? Sincerely—HEEZA BUMM.

Answer:—I can imagine it but I don't believe it.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I am a tailor and am at a loss to know why I am having so many complaints about my clothes. The strange thing is, that my customers all say the same thing. They claim my coats wear out twice as quickly as the rest of the suit. Can you possibly tell me how to make my coats last? Yours truly—A STITCH-ENTYME.

Answer:—Make your pants and vests first.

* * * *

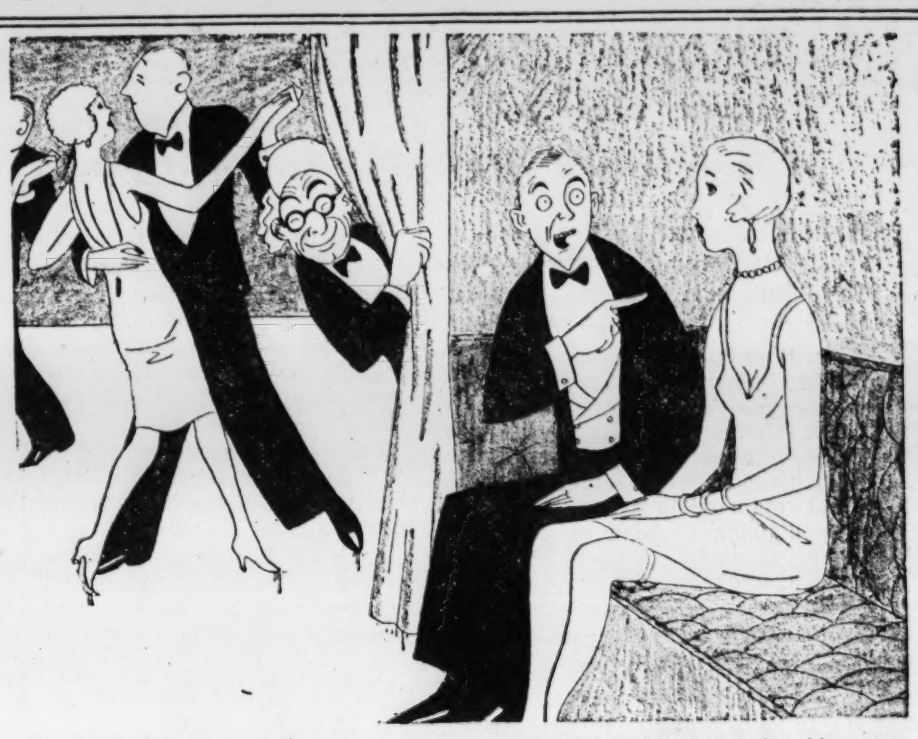

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I am a poor widow and have a hard time making both ends meet. I now find out that I could make some extra money by taking in washing. I don't know any people who send out their wash so please tell me the best way to get in touch with those kind of people, will you? Yours truly—I. VOREESOPE.

Answer:—Just put an ad in the newspapers to read as follows: "A POOR WIDOW NEEDS WASHING," and then give your address.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—We had an argument at our house last night about young men getting married. Some of the folks said that most of the boys who marry when they are very very young are usually dark haired. Is that true? Yours truly—JENNY RAYTOR.

Answer:—It is not true. You will find that boys who marry when they are extremely young are generally all light headed.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I met a boy at a dance last night, and I like him very much. During our conversation, though, it seemed to me as if he was bragging a bit. He said that his brother lived in England and that he sits before the King and Queen every day and keeps his hat on. Do you believe that? Sincerely—ROCCA BIBABY.

Answer:—I sure do. He is their chauffeur.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—A friend of mine, who just came from Los Angeles in an automobile, said he saw part of a railroad track under water when he was coming through Idaho. He said he heard a train whistle and he realized it was up to him to save the train so he waved a "clothes-pin" and when the engineer saw it he stopped the train. Sounds like applesauce to me, don't it to you? Yours truly—B. HAYVE.

Answer:—I understand your friend thoroughly. The railroad track was under water, he waved a "clothes-pin" and the engineer stopped the train. Very simple. A "clothes-pin" means a wash out on the line.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I have an uncle who swears from morning till night. I never heard such language as he uses Where in the world do you think he learned to swear like that? Sincerely—HELEN DAMM.

Answer:—My dear Miss Damm, if your uncle does what you claim for him I assure you he could not have learned it any place, it must have been a gift.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I read in this morning's paper where a boy killed his mother and father and the jury acquitted him. How do you account for that? Truly yours—POLLY TICKS.

Answer:—The jury probably was lenient with him because he was an orphan.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I know a man who told me he was going to get married just for the fun of it. He did get married but got a divorce a year and a half later. What was the idea of that? Truly yours—AL. E .MONEE.

Answer:—He told you he got married for the fun of it. He got married and then got a divorce. That's where the fun comes in.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I am the mother of a very bad boy 10 years of age. Yesterday his Daddy gave him 10c to spend. He went out and bought 10c worth of nails. Can you tell me what he bought the nails for? Yours truly —VINNIE GAR.

Answer:—Yes, for 10c.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I asked a woman I know where her brother was and she said he was out west mining. I asked her what he was mining and she said "mining his own business." Don't you think she was fresh? Yours truly —BUDA PEST.

Broadway Banter

—By— FORNEY WYLY

UNTIL "She Couldn't Say No," came along, it is only fair to admit that the new season's collection of plays had stirred me but slightly. As you may have judged from some of the pearls of wisdom dropped in this column, your correspondent had found most of these plays nothing so much as punk. However, after witnessing Miss Florence Moore's bombastic tomfoolery in "She Couldn't Say No," I have taken heart again and decided that sleep does not necessarily come with the middle of every second act.

Miss Moore has in recent years been lending herself to such giddy revues as the "Music Box" and the "Greenwich Village Follies." After some chorus tussel in which legs and arms had been indiscriminatingly thrown at you, they'd trot out Miss Moore for a sketch or so. Such an arrangement was never good, for Miss Moore's comedy is so convulsing, legs need not be called on to get her show over. And you get all of her in "She Couldn't Say No" you've been hoping you'd get. She's a lady lawyer whose ideas of law are as vague and dazed as most of yours are, and you can consequently laugh with and at her.

Frank Beaston, that likeable young chap who scored so tremendously in "The Gorilla" last year, has been drafted into "She Couldn't Say No," and his performance in the new show convinces me more than ever that he is Broadway's best young juvenile.

* * * *

It so happens, by the way, that this Mr. Beaston has already been favorably passed upon by certain Atlantans who are not inclined to pass upon just anybody. You can't be just so-and-so and expect Nell Sims to play bridge with you, and that's just wha she did with Mr. Beaston. Then, too, Alice Stearns is not going to waste an evening on anyone she does not find entertaining, and she, too, permitted herself to be taken out to dinner by him. On one occasion during summer before last Frances Ellis McKenzie dropped into a chair in a New York bridge game, and was later heard to remark she found her partner, Mr. Beaston, an admirable one. As a pretty fade-out, let it be said that during those days when Mrs. Cox and Mrs. Duggan were just "Grace and Sara" I saw them on either side of Mr. Beaston at a tea-garden one afternoon. And Grace and Sara never stayed on either side of anybody whom they hadn't agreed (behind his shoulder) was a pretty good egg.

"How many lumps of sugar do you wish in your coffee?" brightly asks the heroine along about the second act of "The Adorable Liar."

"If you made the coffee, it's sweet enough for me as it is," is th ehero's exact if sickening reply. And this little slice from the noise which they are calling "The Adorable Liar" should give you an idea of what awaits you there. This play employs that plot about the little minx who can't resist the pleasure of lying at every turn, a plot which is becoming more popular with playwrights than the "remember, she's somebody's sister" one. "The Adorable Liar" if I may say it, seemed altogether too adorable. It was all just so winsome, sweet and charming that I felt that I needed a big, fine lemon sour on leaving the theater.

* * * *

Atlanta is represented in "Sunny." When Belle Bennett played her memorable stock engagement in Atlanta, some of you recall that she chose to adopt Johnny Abbott, Jr., and renamed him Richard Bennett. It now develops that young Mr. Abbott, I mean Bennett, has brought himself to Now York, and is now comfortably at home in a role in "Sunny." Mr. Bennett has asked that I tell his Atlanta friends that he is also working in the daytime in Richard Dix's next picture, "The Quarterback." No doubt "Sunny" will run until next spring, and after that, it is Mr. Bennett's present plan to join Miss Bennett in Hollywood, where, as we all know, she is starring away on the screen. Maybe by that time Miss Bennett will be planning to play "Madame X," and what could be more climatic than to have young Mr. Bennett play the son? All movies do not take place upon the screen.

* * * *

"If I Was Rich" is another of the new plays which I found immensely entertaining. It was written by the man who wrote "Six Cylinder Love" some years ago and "Twelve Miles Out" last year. The principal characters are a shipping clerk and his little wife who are trying to spend just twice what they have. This play is as excellent a mixture of comedy and pathos as you'd care to see. Joe Laurie, Jr., is the featured comedian and is exceptionally good. A great deal of interest centers around Miss Mildred McLeod who, plays the wife. It was she who was Lorelei in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" before the Selwyns preferred June Walker.

Georgia House One Hundred and Fifty Years Old

Remarkable Dwelling at Rossville Stands, In Which John Ross, Great Cherokee Chief was Born, 1790

BY JEANETTE LANGLEY

IN Rossville, Georgia, just across the Tennessee line set well back on a grassy lawn shaded by handsome trees is an old, unpainted, two-story dwelling. While there is nothing of bygone grandeur to attract the eye, the house is substantially built and for a hundred and fifty years has defied winter's cold and summer's heat. It has seen the generations come and go and is still serving its purpose, that of a home.

This house is one of the most noted in Georgia. A stone marker in a corner of the lawn erected by the William Marsh Chapter D. A. R. of Lafayette, Walker county, informs you that here October 3d, 1790, John Ross, great Cherokee chief, was born.

The Cherokees were a religious people. They did not worship the works of their own hands. They believed in a great first cause, good and evil at warfare, with good finally prevailing. This Great Spirit had his throne upon the peaks of Whiteside mountain from which he sometimes walked abroad leaving as he strode in the darkness the print of his awful footsteps upon the mountain tops and he spoke to the red man in the storm and the thunder.

Of all the North American Indian tribes the Cherokees were the most intelligent. A member of the tribe, Sequoyah, George Guess, born in Chattooga county, Georgia, was the inventor of the Cherokee alphabet.

The Cherokee government was an elective monarchy with an achimagus, or king, and a vice king. These two rulers with the princess or chieftains of the scattered villages made the supreme council of the nation, which sat at Echota, their capital, situated thirty miles southwest from the site of the present city of Knoxville.

Among the six Indian chieftains carried to England by George II. to visit him at his palace was Chief Oconostota, a young man then, but who became subsequently the archimagus and weilded power for half a century. Queen Caroline recognizing the promised greatness of the splendid young savage paid him very distinguished attention.

The Cherokees lived in scattered towns near some stream where fish and game were plentiful; and their territory comprised the upper portion of Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi, and all of Tennessee south of the Little Tennessee river. They had an intense love of country, and a great appreciation of nature, shown by the poetical names bequeathed by them to the rivers and mountains.

* * * *

Their council house was at Echota, also the home of Oconostato, the archimagus and of the "Beloved Woman," the prophetess of the tribe. Her wigwam, a little larger and more pretentious than the others and furnished in barbaric splendor, stood somewhat apart from the rest. A "totem," an otter in the coils of a water snake in front of the frame of poles covered with skins marked the home of Nancy Ward, the prophetess of the Cherokees.

Nancy Ward's father was an English officer, named Ward, her mother of the blood royal, a sister of Atta Culla Culla, the vice king. This inspired pybil of the Cherokees spoke the will of their invisible guardian, and her influence was always exerted on the side of humanity and good.

The "Beloved Woman" is held in grateful remembrance by the posterity of the early white settlers. Queenly and commanding she was possessed of indubitable strength of character holding as she did control over the fierce Cherokees, yet sympathizing and befriending the white settlers. Her warnings to the latter of intended attacks was the means of their salvation in those pioneer days.

Gratitude to Nancy Ward twice spared Echota from destruction in the reprisals from the whites for Indian massacres.

At Right—Swinging Mantel in Living Room of John Ross Home; a Unique Piece of Decorative Art.

The council house was a tower-like, round-shaped structure twenty feet high and ninety feet in circumference. It was roughly built of stout poles plastered with clay and had a roof of the same materials, sloping down to wide eaves which gave the walls protection from the rain. There were no windows but it had a wide entrance covered with buffalo skins. An opening in the roof which could be covered when needed by a flap let the smoke out and the light in. Well-made benches of cane circled the room. Here the warriers of the tribe sat when they gathered to their councils. These benches were cleared away when the braves met to perform their green-corn dances.

The Cherokees were proud, skillful in war, revengeful to the last degree, and possessed of a thirst for blood which made them insensible to danger. They were far from being contemptible antagonists for the race of heroes who were the first settlers beyond the Alleghanies.

They had a profound veneration for the relics of the Mound Builders, of whose origin, however, they knew nothing.

They had no horses and it was an Irishman, who established himself as a trader in one of the towns in 1690, who introduced horses among the Cherokees.

In the spring of 1780 a large company of emigrants under Colonel John Donelson descended the Tennessee river and uniting with another party under Captain James Robertson, made the first settlement on the present site of Nashville, which they called Nashborough.

Missionary Ridge, known as the scene of one of the most important battles of the civil war, yet owes its name to higher accomplishments than war. It was the stage set for an Indian mission, authorized by President Madison and called the Brainerd Mission in honor of David Brainerd, a celebrated missionary to the Indians who died in 1747.

This Brainerd Mission was a Mission, a boarding school and an agricultural college in one. It was a tremendous success, having at one time five hundred pupils enrolled. In 1819 it was visited by President Monroe, who came unannounced and was pleased with all he saw of the great good being accomplished. Brainerd Mission was continued until 1838, when the Cherokees were removed by General Scott to Indian Territory.

The Lord's Supper was celebrated there for the last time in August, 1838.

Hamilton county's first white settlers were mainly Scotchmen who came to America directly after the close of the Revolutionary war. Among their names handed down to posterity are Ross, McNair, McCoy, Coody, Daniel, Martin, Taylor, Lowrie, Brant, Adair, McPherson and McDonald. Many of them married Indian wives and were incorporated into the Cherokee nation.

When the first of these settlers arrived, what is now known as Hamilton county was entirely occupied by the Cherokees.

The first battle of Lookout mountain of which there is any record was fought in 1788 by Indians on one side under Chief Wynca and John Sevier with his little band of heroes on the other, Sevier being victorious.

Daniel Ross, a Scotchman, sent from Baltimore to trade with the Cherokees found them unfriendly to his enterprise for they captured him while he was traveling down the Tennessee river. But for the intervention of John McDonald he would have been killed, and then there would have been no Rossville, Georgia. The wife of John McDonald was a full-blooded Cherokee. One of their offsprings, a daughter, Mollie, became the wife of Daniel Ross.

John McDonald built the house at Rossville, known as the home of John Ross. Near its gate he put up a log store and set his son-in-law, Daniel Ross, up in business with a fine stock of goods. And here in the old home John Ross was born, October 3d, 1790. A daughter of Daniel Ross, Elizabeth, a beautiful and accomplished woman, married a Scotchman and went to Scotland to live. Another daughter married Joseph Coody, whose daughter, Elisabeth Coody, became the second wife of Greenwood Leflore, "The last chief of the Choctaws east of the Mississippi."

Greenwood Leflore was the foremost of his tribe. Of purest blood both Caucasian and Choctaw, he inherited only the finest traits of each race. His character was a blending of the finest instincts of both which was combined with magnificent physical strength and great handsomeness of form and feature.

Greenwood Leflore, who became, through his own efforts, an honorable, industrious man of affairs, a lover of refinement and culture, built for his family at Malmaison, Mississippi, the home which, though over seventy years old, is still one o the finest country seats in the southwest.

Malmaison is built in old colonial style with great columns and two wide and lofty halls crossing in the center, four large rooms on each side and an "L" of an equal number of rooms.

All the furniture in the drawing room was made in Paris and imported. The Duchess of Orleans saw the suite after its completion and wanted to buy it. This being impossible she had a suite made an exact replica of the furniture made to adorn the parlor of an Indian chief. A great many chairs and of three sizes are in this suite and several divans and are made of French hickory, overlaid with gold.

When Justice Triumphed

—The Story of the Taylor Brothers

Hermit's Death Solves Riddle of Long Missing Slayer—Brothers Slew All But One of Family

THIRTY years ago George Taylor, a convicted murderer, escaped from a Missouri death house. Taylor had figured with his brother William in various lawless activities and the two had topped off their career with the atrocious murder of all but one of a family of five. But George Taylor escaped.

The other day an aged hermit, long known under the name of Williams, died in squalid poverty in a hut on a hill overlooking the Arkansas river in Oklahoma. He had lived alone and in obscurity for as long as the folk of the community could remember. He was George Taylor. Since his death, identification of the hermit as the once most sought after murderer has been positive.

So far as George Taylor was concerned, justice may be said to have been defeated, but at least his brother William, the brains of the pair, paid the penalty on the scaffold.

The criminal history of the middle west so abounds in examples of bold outlawry that the story of the Taylor brothers has been rather overshadowed, but the fact is that in their brief day these two caused almost as much a sensation in Missouri as the notorious James brothers. Certainly their crowning crime, the murder of Gus Meeks and his family, stands out on the record among acts of ferocious revenge.

From the viewpoint of society's welfare—which is of course the chief aim of justice—it was well that William was the one caught during the escape. Bill Taylor had long been involved in shady pursuits. He seemed to have a particular aptitude for crime. But for the Meeks killings he would probably have carried on for many years. As it was, the Meeks affair quite removed him from any further experimentation in the field of crime.

A Mere Tool.

George Taylor should have been removed, too, of course, for he was equally guilty of murder in the eyes of the law. But at least he was discouraged once his brother passed out of the world. He had none of William's intensive enthusiasm for wrongdoing. From the evidence it appears that he was little more than his brother's tool. If he committed any crimes after his sensational escape from jail they do not appear on the record.

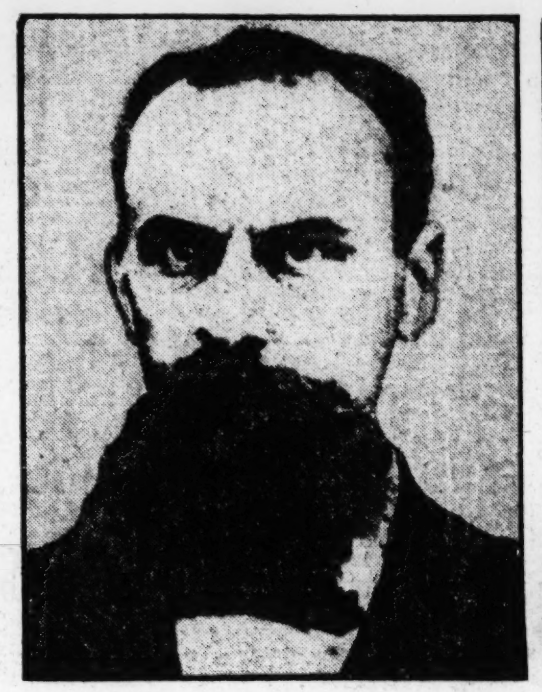

To get a proper perspective of the affair, one must get a picture of the two personalities and of the environment in which they had their being.

The Taylors were not commonplace by any means. They came of a rather good family, numbering among their relatives many farmers and business men of the farming community of Linn county, Mo. William studied law in Brookfield, Mo., and was graduated from the University of Missouri. In addition to practicing law he also served as a bank cashier in Browning. He married Maude Leonard, daughter of one of the richest farmers of Linn county, and later served a term in the state legislature.

As one might expect, Bill Taylor mixed in politics. He was regarded as a clever lawyer and business man and had many followers. That he should have followers was natural for he was, on the surface at least, a strong personality in a community of uneducated folk accustomed to being slightly bulldozed by their political apostles. He had enemies, too, but this only served to strengthen the loyalty of his friends. Such is politics.

George Taylor, younger than William and exceedingly good looking, had little of his brother's keenness, but he was not without his attractions, especially with respect to the opposite sex. He cut a wide swath among the feminine hearts in his youth and developed quite a local reputation for being a wild, amorous young man, one not particularly interested in the sacred state of matrimony.

In newspaper accounts of the time, George Taylor was credited with "narrowly escaping several loads of buckshot fired at him by irate fathers of susceptible daughters." He carried on several affairs while at normal school studying to become a teacher, but managed for a long time to elude his more serious sweethearts as successfully as he was in later years to side-step the bloodhounds of justice.

William Taylor George Taylor

Brothers who slew a whole family save one.

Nellie Meeks, lone member of family to escape death.

George taught school in communities near Browning and finally married well enough to quit his profession and live on a farm.

Gets Brother Freed.

The two brothers made an effective team, with George serving as a sort of lead horse while William held the reins. They cooperated in various unorthodox activities during their early years, but always managed to keep out of jail. Robberies took place in the county, mysterious killings occurred, yet the two rode serenely along, apparently highly respectable citizens and fathers.

Then things began to come to light. First of all, the pair were accused of a series of frauds perpetrated against banks. They laughed at the charges and their followers laughed, too, insisting that the accusations were all part of a deeply laid political plot to discredit them in the eyes of the good people of Linn. But their protestations went for naught. They were convicted on a check-raising charge and sentenced to spend several years in jail. William appealed the verdict.

While this case was still unsettled another and far more serious charge came to the surface. George Taylor was accused of killing a white man and a colored boy. The trial developed into something of a local sensation, with the opposing political factions heatedly taking sides. William defended his brother and won an acquittal, thereby strengthening his position among his followers. All along he had insisted vehemently that he and his brother were being persecuted by their enemies. The acquittal seemed to bear out his words.

The next incident in the story illustrates to what lengths William Taylor would go to wreak revenge upon an enemy.

Some time after the conviction in the check-raising episode, a lumber yard near Browning was burned to the ground. Bill Taylor held that the fire was a deliberate act of malice and named one of the men who had prosecuted him in the check-raising case.

Taylor failed in this little maneuver. Instead it was established that he himself fired the lumber yard to frame up the man who had figured in his conviction! Again he was found guilty. And again he raised his voice to proclaim that he was being made the object of spite by his foes.

He had appealed this conviction also when word came in April, 1894, that Gus Meeks, a poor farmer of Linn county, found guilty of stealing a carload of cattle from a neighbor, would be brought from prison to give state's evidence involving accomplices in the robbery. Meeks had been sentenced to two years imprisonment and, while he had kept silent during the trial, there were reports now that he had decided to turn against his companions. He had a wife and three young ones.

The Family Reunion.

Upon his arrival in town Meeks was allowed to stay at his home with his family pending the completion of the proceedings.

One can imagine that there was a happy reunion in the Meeks home. One can imagine that little Nellie Meeks, eight years old, and her younger sister Hattie, who was five, greeted their father with excited happy cries, unconscious of the cloud that hung over their home, while the sober-faced mother went about her endless household tasks, hoping against hope that this new turn in the wheel would bring her husband back to her and keep him forever again from wandering from the straight path of righteousness. Even the youngest child, Mamie, two years old, must have sensed the note of hope and happiness in the home.

While that picture is still in your mind turn now to the next scene, one day later—

The scene is a farmhouse near Jenkins hill, outside Browning, a peaceful place, all green with spring. As our imaginary curtain rises a small girl, her face and clothes bloody, staggers to the doorstep and collapses, moaning. The child is Nellie Meeks.

A Tragic Ride.

Another scene—

It is a lonely spot about a quarter of a mile distant. In the foreground is a scattered pile of straw, some of it red and wet. If one looks closely enough one may see a woman's face, eyes staring and already glazed with

Man-Hating Princess O

Princess Vatchnadze, the Beautif Noblewoman, Loses Her Heart Young American She Has Only in the Fms

BY C. DE VIDAY HUNT.

PARIS.

PRINCESS MARIE FEODOROVNA VATCHNADZE, the beautiful young Russian noblewoman, who was present when the late chief of the Tcheka, Felix Dzerjinsky, and his women guests indulged in the gay sport of shooting political prisoners between drinks, is back in Paris with a tale of horrible cruelties perpetrated by the Reds of Russia. Incidentally she has recovered her family jewels, worth over $1,000,000.

Her experiences are almost beyond belief, but the strangest part of her life story is the fact that she has been transformed from a woman who hated men into one who loves.

Of all the aristocratic refugees of Russia who have established themselves in Paris in the last few years, Princess Marie Vatchnadze is perhaps the most picturesque. Surely few women have gone through more thrilling adventures.

From the terrible night when Dzerjinsky ordered her father shot before her eyes until she embarked at Batoum as the "wife in name only" of a brutish bolshevik sea captain, her story is filled with horrifying details of debauchery, of medieval tortures inflicted upon her father, and of nights of fiendish crapulence when scores of refined Russian girls, stripped of their clothing, were thrown into the filthy oubliettes of the Lubjanka where agonizing shrieks were drowned in the din of licentious revelry.

It is an amazing story, a long chapter of abominations that nearly killed the soul in the young woman. And yet, looking into her beautiful eyes, it is difficult to detect a trace of tragedy. They are not the eyes of hatred. They are the eyes of a woman who loves. Her smile is that of a woman come back to a happier life, for the princess believes that her suffering is ended and that the future holds wonderful possibilities.

So far the object of her love is merely a phantom picture, a bodiless ecstasy, a fleeting vision of a stalwart young American who appeared to her on the screen of a Paris movie palace. But the eccentric princess believes that her hero of dreamland will come to her in the flesh if he ever sees her as she nightly sees him on the sheet of changing lights and shadows.

To accomplish this drollish purpose the noble princess has decided to make a moving picture of her own, with herself in the leading role, and then send the film to Arnold Gray, somewhere in Hollywood, hoping passionately that Arnold will love the fantastic princess as ardently as he loves the heroine of his own film play.

It may be a whimsical notion, an impossible vagary or simply the flaming urge of a bizarre mind; but the fact remains that Princess Marie Feodorovna is determined to capture the handsome Arnold and that she will let nothing stand in her path.

"I tried to get a passport to America," the princess cried in anger when I called at her villa in Neuilly. "They refused, they are pigs, but—nitchevo—I will find another way."

Marie's father, the Prince David Vatchnadze, had long been a faithful subject of the czar. For some years he was governor of Nerchinsk, the most fearful penal settlement in Asiatic Russia. Then he became military governor of Tiflis.

A recent photograph of the beautiful young Russian noblewoman who has so suddenly and strangely ceased to be a man hater.

While he was at Nerchinsk, one particularly rebellious convict was flogged nearly to death for having made a complaint against the guards of the quicksilver mines who kept the prisoners chained to wheelbarrows in the poisonous underground shafts. That convict was Felix Edmundovitch Dzerjinski, sentenced for plotting against the czar.

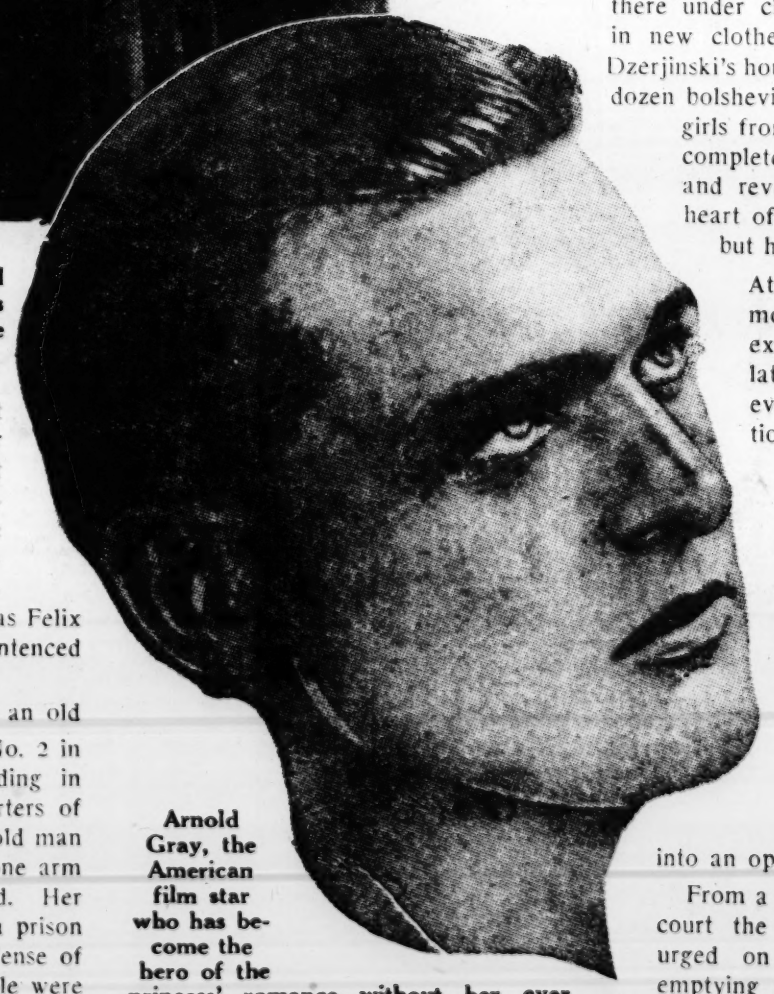

Shortly after the revolution, an old man and a girl were taken to No. 2 in the Lubjanka, that grim building in Moscow which is the headquarters of the All-Russian Tcheka. The old man was in rags and the girl had one arm in a sling. She was barefooted. Her arm had been brutally cut by a prison guard when she bit him in defense of her honor. The battered couple were Prince Vatchnadze and his daughter Marie.

Presently they were pushed into a sumptuous room. At a great writing table sat the president of the Supreme Economic Council of the Soviet Union, commonly called the Tcheka. The man at the desk was Dzerjinski, the silent Red Devil, the real ruler of Red Russia. He was smoking a long, thin cigarette and smilingly checking off a long list of doomed women and men.

"Citizen Vatchnadze," said the dreaded chief after some minutes of suspense, "you have been found guilty, you and your daughter, of associating with the enemies of the state. Comrades Roller and Kvijakovsky have ruled on your case. But you shall not die immediately. Look at me."

The old prince uttered an exclamation of terror and fell on his knees. He had recognized the ex-convict of Nerchinsk. The Red Devil laughed silently.

"I am going to send the girl to 'General Service'," he sneered, "and you will get a nice little playmate in the Sekrelki."

Arnold Gray, the American film star who has become the hero of the princess' romance without her ever having seen him in the flesh.

The "General Service" meant that Marie was to be sent to the barra there to become the property of soldiers for one month. She was t porarily locked up in the Lubjank

Her father was taken to cell 4 the Sekrelki and fastened to a p with his bare stomach exposed. bamboo tube, about ten inches lon and closed at both ends with wire netting, was clamped tightly upon his stomach. In the tube was a live rat. In two hours time the famished rat began to gnaw its way to freedom through the bamboo and then through the man's stomach.

Dzerjinski sat by, smoking his cigarette. Later the half dead prince was dragged into a courtyard and shot before his daughter's eyes.

It was Dzerjinski himself who carried the unconscious Marie away. He had noticed her pure young beauty and changed his mind about "General Service."

That night there was a great feast at the Dzerjinski palace. Marie was there under close guard and in new clothes provided by Dzerjinski's housekeeper. A half dozen bolsheviks and a score of girls from the Moscow dives completed the party. Hatred and revenge seethed in the heart of the young princess, but her face did not show

At three o'clock in morning all were dru except Marie. She sim lated intoxication, ho ever, to fool the exe tioner of her father a perhaps to gain freedom.

Dzerjinski then vited the whole co pany to follow hi To all the girls, exc Marie, he gave lo ed revolvers. T went to Lubjan There Dzerjinski dered two or th dozen prisoners into an open courtyard.

ing that she wanted to sit on the guard's lap. Unrecognized, she made her way out of the city and on through untold perils until she reached Tiflis. She wanted to see if the ground in her garden where the family jewels were buried had been disturbed. But she did not dare to go near the place.

Instead she joined a band of gypsies and with them sang and danced her way to Batoum. There Princess Marie decided to get on board one of the outgoing steamers, no matter what the cost. In the harbor she met a rough-looking captain named Mourazoff to whom she offered for passage to Naples a beautiful family heirloom, a small medallion set in diamonds which she so far successfully secreted on her body. Mourazoff took the medallion and then told the girl that she could not leave without a passport.

"The only way, my pretty one," he said with a leer in his eye, "would be for you to come on board as my wife."

Two hours later they were married by a priest in the city and that same night Marie could accompany her "husband" on board his schooner.

Nothing happened during the first two days out. But on the night before they landed at Naples the captain of the vessel drank heavily and then tried to burst open the door of Marie's cabin.

The frightened girl thought quickly. She was the man's wife and the crew surely would take their skipper's part if she struggled. So she called out to Mourazoff that she would come out to him if he stepped back three paces from her door. This the man did and out stepped Marie, smiling and apparently all that the captain wanted her to be.

That whole night she matched her woman's wits against his brutal desire. She played cards with him under the lantern of the quarter deck, she sang and danced for him, she told him stories and drank with him until he finally dropped off into a heavy sleep. When he awoke, they were in the harbor of Naples. Marie was safe once more.

Some good people in Naples helped the refugee princess with enough money to book passage on a steamer to Marseilles and thence by train to Paris where she was received with open arms by the Russian nobility.

What could Princess Marie do for a living? She was less than twenty-two years old, rather good looking, she thought, and had a voice. She decided to sing in a fashionable cabaret and at once proved a great attraction. Shortly after her debut as a singer she was heard by Albert Carre of the Opera Comique who urged her to study hard for one year and promised to give her a chance in the winter of 1926-27.

So Marie did as had been told. Every spare hour was devoted to serious musical work. At night she sang at the cabaret and soon she found that she had quite a neat little sum in the bank. She used some of it to have her marriage to Mourazoff annulled by the courts. Then, about four months ago, she suddenly disappeared.

A stranger had come from Tiflis and told Princess Marie that her father's house had been burned to the ground, but that the garden was as beautiful as it ever had been. Under an assumed name and carrying a pass viseed by a high Soviet official on the continent, Princess Marie Vatchnadze went back to Tiflis.

For five weeks she worked in a shop in the old section of the city, awaiting the propitious moment for breaking into her own home and garden. No one recognized her as the daughter of the former governor.

At last came the timely hour. Wearing a mechanic's overalls and carrying a small spade in her hip pocket the daring princess scaled the wall of her garden and started diggging up the earth in the spot she knew. It was a dark night and she did not dare make a light.

Soon she came upon the little casket of steel that contained a great fortune in diamond rings and pearl necklaces, rare pieces of lapis lazuli, great diadems studded with emeralds and diamonds, bejeweled earrings and anklets hundreds of years old, heavy coronets of gold inlaid with sapphires, rubies and turquoises, and two leather bags filled withe gold rubles. All was intact when Marie opened the casket in her room half an hour later.

She managed to get her wealth out of Tiflis that same night by driving as far as Vitebsk. From thence she reached Naples and six weeks ago Princess Marie was back again in Paris.

She had barely established herself in her pretty villa at Neuilly when the unbelievable thing happened. She went to a movie with a Georgian friend and met her fate in the ephemeral person of Arnold Gray. Every night that week she went to the theater and watched the stalwart Arnold.

What was it that held her spellbound? What strange power was it that seemed to draw her into the mysterious ban of a mere phantasm? All she could say to herself was that the world seemed better since the living picture of a brave man had opened new horizons before her tired eyes.

When the film was at last taken from the theater, Princess Marie realized what it had meant for her. She could not be without it. She bought a copy of the film an dhad a luxurious projection room built in her villa. That room now is her sanctum. Every night she is there alone, languidly stretched upon a divan, while the operator behind a soundproof wall, is uncoiling the little celluloid band. Somewhere i nthe house a harpist gives voice to the passing figures on that screen. It is beautiful music that rises and falls with voluptuous longing.

The Fair Unfair

"You won't send me away from you, grandpa?" she sobbed. "You'll make him apologize—like you said—won't you, grandpa. Aren't you going to heep your promise?"

"Indeed I will."

"When, grandpa? When'll you make him apologize to me?"

"Just as soon as you feel a little better. His mother will go and bring him in here to ask your pardon, dearie."

Miriam's expression was not sympathetic. "What for?" she asked.

"What for? Don't you see the state the child is in, Miriam? Don't you see what the boy's done to her?"

"I hear what she says he's done to her," Miriam replied. "I don't know that what she says is evidence, however."

"Good gracious! The bump on her head is 'evidence' enough, isn't it? It certainly is for me. Isn't it for you?"

"Not that Frankie did what she says; no."

But at this Clytie lifted her stricken head from her grandfather's breast and from brimmed eyes flashed hot defiance at her aunt. She pointed to a window. "He's out there. Ask him! I dare you to open that window and ask him! If he denies it, he knows where he'll go when he dies, and I hope he'll die soon, too!"

"No, no, child," Mr. Wilover remonstrated. "You mustn't say such——"

"I will!" Clytie sobbed. "She's accusing me of being a story-teller and she's afraid to go to the window because she thinks maybe her own son will turn out to be one! She knows he did it, and he'll either have to say he did or tell a story. She'd open the window and ask him if she wasn't afraid to, wouldn't she?"

"Nonsense!" Miriam said; but she did not go to the window, and, indeed, the niece's impulsive analysis of the aunt's state of mind was a correct one—Miriam did indeed know that Clytie accused her of knowing. She had no real doubt that Frankie had struck the blow; but, being Frankie's mother, she had fallen back upon the first defense of him that came into her mind. It had not served, and the child's accusation placed her in an awkward position, which galled her. And it galled her all the more because she felt that she was being unfairly dealt with by her niece. Mother of a perfect son, who was to her (in the simplest terms for her adoration of him) an angel out of heaven, sent to be her only solace—particularly in this time of domestic tragedy—she was convinced that he had done nothing wrong, even if Clytie's head did bear some little token or another upon it, and even if Frankie had put it there. And yet, in the feminine battle, she was being worsted and her flawless boy made to appear a malefactor. Naturally, she felt that so cruel a paradox had been produced only through instinctive adroitness of misrepresentation on the part of her opponent, and she sought for any means to meet the attack and deflect it. Clytie made that as hard for her as possible.

"Why don't you call him in and ask him, then?" the child insisted, for, being a girl child, she instantly perceived her advantage and pressed it home. "You say I'm a story-teller; why don't you make him come in and ask him about it to my face?"

Frankie's mother had no idea of following this suggestion. She was but too sure that, whatever the facts, Frankie, being merely a straightforward boy, would come off second best in such a contest—at least in the eyes of the doting and prejudiced grandparent. "It isn't necessary," Miriam said, proudly. "I should never think of insulting Frankie by putting him through that sort of examination."

"You're afraid to," said the terrible Clytie. "You're afraid to call him." And at that it was the turn of her aunt's eyes to flash.

"Father, are you going to sit there petting that child and letting her go on being insolent to me at such a time as this? Don't you care how ill-bred she is?"

"Ill-bred?" he echoed, and he frowned. "I'm bringing her up, Miriam. If there were anything of that sort it would be my fault. I'm sorry this has happened at a time when you're in distress; but so is Clytie in distress, and if I can't right her little wrong I shouldn't think myself capable of dealing with your greater one. It seems to me that what she says is just."

"It does?" his daughter cried. "Don't you see that she sits there in your lap deliberately being more and more insulting to me because she feels that you're backing her up? And if she dares to speak as she does to me, what wouldn't she have dared when it was only a question of poor little Frankie alone out there in the yard at her mercy?"

"At Clytie's mercy?" Mr. Wilover shook his head, marveling. "Dear me, what nonsense, Miriam!"

"Is it? You don't believe she even did anything to provoke him?"

"I didn't," Clytie said. "I didn't provoke him hardly at all."

"'Hardly!'" Miriam cried; and now it was with prospective triumph that her eyes grew brighter. Clytie had spoken too quickly, and without any warning that fatal "hardly" had slipped itself into what she was saying. Later, when she grew older, such mistakes wouldn't thrust themselves upon her; but at twelve even precocity in defense isn't safe against them. Her aunt had found the way to neutralize the attack on Frankie.

"What was it you did to Frankie, Clytie?" Miriam asked grimly. "Tell the truth. What did you do to him?"

"Nothing. Abso-loot-ly nothing at all."

"What? Tell the truth, Clytie."

"I am!"

"You're not!"

But here the perturbed old gentleman interposed. "Miriam, you must not speak to the child like that—and when she's suffering, too. It's a shame!"

Miriam laughed desperately. "How is she speaking to me? And I suppose you think I'm not suffering!" She flung up a protesting hand to check him as he tried to speak. "Never mind! We all know we're nothing to you compared to her! We mustn't ever suggest that the apple of your eye could be even a little in the wrong! Dear me, no! I declare, it's enough to make one rave!"

"What is?"

"Your indulgence! Your ridiculous favoritism!"

"Ridiculous?" he said, angrily. "What's ridiculous about it?"

"Your blindness—if I must use the politest term for what really seems to me a doting partiality so great as to amount to—well, to a kind of silliness."

"Take care, Miriam!" He let Clytie down from his lap, rose to his feet, and stood facing his daughter, keeping his arm about his grandchild, who clung to him. "I won't allow you to talk to me in this way."

"No!" Miriam said, bitterly. "We mustn't utter a word against the paragon—not a syllable—no matter what she says to us! You can't even hear her when she herself confesses what she just did confess."

"What did she confess?"

"Didn't you hear her say 'hardly'? Isn't that a confession?"

"Certainly not."

"O, good heavens!" Miriam cried. "Do you suppose a gentle, manly boy like Frankie would do what she says he did? Just walk up to her and strike her with a mallet? While she was being 'polite' to him? Do you suppose my son would ever dream of doing such a thing?"

"There's no supposing to be done about it," the old man returned. "Clytie says he struck her—and there's a bump. That's enough for me."

"You really think so?" Miriam uttered a laugh of despair for his intelligence. "Good heavens, father, use your mind!"

"I am using it."

"How can you be using it when you believe such a thing? Answer me this: Did you ever see anybody do such a thing? Did you ever hear of anybody's doing such a thing? Do you really believe that anybody in the world ever makes an utterly unprovoked attack on anybody else? Haven't you got the fairness to see that there are always two sides to any such story?"

He stared at her with continued stubbornness. "I only see what that boy has done to an unprotected little girl in his power."

"Unprotected!" Miriam mocked the word scornfully. "Good gracious? Do you suppose that just because she's a girl she was 'in his power'? Don't you know that a girl can be just as deadly in conflict as a boy? Don't you know that girls take all sorts of advantages that boys feel they can't take? Don't you know it's always the little girls who run to grown people for sympathy and show the hurts that they get nine times out of ten by trying to tyrannize over the boys? If she got a bump on her head it was because she was trying to hold him when he wanted to get away, or to make him do something he didn't want to do. She may have been scratching him or——"

"I was not!" Clytie shouted, and, secure in her grandfather's favor, she became incautious. "I was just trying to get some of my cake out of his mouth because he had no right to eat it."

This astonished Mr. Wilover. "Trying to get it out of his mouth, Clytie?"

"I certainly didn't want to eat it," she explained. "Not then! But I wasn't going to let him eat it—and swallow it—not after he snatched it out of my hand like such a ruffian. All I was doing—I——" Here she hesitated, apparently a little bothered by the evasiveness of proper descriptive phrases. "I only—I barely—" she said, and again found the words reluctant.

But unexpectedly she was assisted. The door had remained slightly ajar ever since she entered th room, and now, through the aperture, a voice was heard. It was a boy's voice, but lowered to its deepest pitch, and gloomy.

"She was chokin' me to death," it said. "She had me down, and she had a croquet wicket around my neck and shoved into the ground each side of it, and she had the handle of a croquet mallet clear inside of my mouth and about half way down my throat, and if I hadn't got hold of it and done something or other she'd 'a' had me murdered and I'd 'a' been stone dead."

The mother of the owner of this morbid voice laughed in almost hysterical triumph. "There! Didn't I tell you? You always think she's so absolutely perfect, and whenever she's concerned you decline to make the slightest use of your reasoning powers. Don't you see now that it isn't in human nature to make unprovoked attacks such as she claimed had been made upon her? Is it possible you still don't see that poor little Frankie was merely defending himself and trying to get away from her? Don't you see, father?"

Mr. Wilover did see something, apparently. He had begun to stare at his daughter strangely, and he seemed to be receiving an almost miraculous enlightenment. But before he could say what he felt the morbid voice from the hall spoke again.

"I don't care what you do to me," it said. "I was only tryin' to get away and not get murdered. And, anyhow, it's no different than the way my own father behaved when mamma tried to hold him in the hall when he had to go out, and they were arguing and she said she'd commit suicide and everything. If I got to suffer, you ought to do to papa whatever you do to me, because wasn't what he did worse than just hittin' old Clytie when he locked mamma up so he could run out, the next time she tried to hold on to him? If I got to suffer, he ought to, or else there wouldn't be any justice. I guess if somebody had you down, grandpa, with a wicket fastened around your neck and——"

Mr. Wilover interrupted him. "That will do, Frankie. You were a bad boy to snatch Clytie's cake from her, and I'll talk to you about that later. Just now I'm busy with your father and mother."

But Miriam shrank from that strangely enlightened stare of his. She whimpered. "O, I shouldn't be at all surprised if you'd side with George, just as you do with Clytie! It's anything to be against me, of course!"

Mr. Wilover made no vocal response. Leaving both niece and aunt murmuring somewhat feebly after him, he walked decisively out of the room ad strode down the long hall to an open doorway. Here he paused and stood looking at his son-in-law.

The troubled young man gravely returned his look. Then he sighed a long and patient sigh, and rose to his feet. "I'm sorry all this turmoil has to be brought here into your peaceful life, sir," he said. "Of course, I know what she must have been telling you about me; but if she hasn't prejudiced you so that you just couldn't bear to hear my side of it, I'd like to——"

Mr. Wilover interrupted him. "Have a cigar, George," he said. "I don't want to hear anything at all. I think you get a little too rough with Miriam when she tries to hold you, and I'm afraid it'll serve you right to have her and Frankie start home with you in about half an hour."

Things New and Old About the Bible :

BY REV. W. P. KING
Pastor First Methodist Church, Gainesville, Ga.

God the Father In Whom We Are To Believe.

WE are to believe in a God who places supreme valuation on the spiritual. A mistaken interpretation of the immanence of God carries the implication that since the activity of God moves in the small as in the great, therefore God had no discrimination as to values. This idea of God is expressed in the familiar lines:

DR. W. P. KING

"He sees with equal eyes as God of all,
The hero perish or the sparrow fall."

Jesus Christ reveals to us the worth of man, and the worth of one man, and God's love for man, "There is joy in heaven over one sinner who repents."

But it is the spiritual in man on which God places the highest estimate.

"Man's life consists not in the abundance of things which he possesses."

The goal of God's purpose in the world is the spiritualization of man.

Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick writes:

"God is in earnest, but not for rocks and suns and stars; He is earnest about persons; the sheep of His pasture are men. They are not mortal; they carry over into the eternal world the spiritual gains of earth; and all life's struggle; its vicarious sacrifice, its fearful punishments, its labor for better circumstances and worthier life; is justified in its everlasting influence on personality. When we say that God cares, we mean no vague, diffusive attitude toward a system that lasts for limited milleniums and then comes to an uneventful end in a cold, sun and ruined earth. We mean that He cares for personality, which is His child, that He suffers in the travail of His children's character, and that this divine solicitude has everlasting issue when the heavens waxed old like a garment.' The creation waits with eager longing for the sons of God to be revealed."

The Bible is the supreme and authoritative book of religion which from the first promise, "The seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head," to the final consummation when the redeemed throng shall stand before God with garments white in the blood of the Lamb; this Book is ever stating the fact of the supremacy of the spiritual and the spiritual goal of humanity. Since the Bible thus cuts across the grain of selfish human nature, it has aroused the intense and bitter opposition of men.

The sacred Scriptures went through the trial of logic in the opposition of Celsus. It sent through the trial by fire in the ten severe persecutions under Roman emperors. There was the three-fold aim of the suppression of public worship, the destruction of the individual believer, and the destruction of the Holy Scriptures.

Eusebius, the church historian, said:

"I saw with mine own eyes the houses of prayer thrown down and razed to their foundations and the inspired and sacred Scriptures consigned to the fire in the open market place."

Then comes afterwards the arguments of destructive criticism. And yet through the trial by logic, by fire, and by skeptical mutilation, the pure gold of God's word abides, "And this word yet once more signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken as of things that are made, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain."

There is the witness of the Bible, "Saying, what is excellent, as God lives is permanent."

Jesus Christ is the perfect revelation of the estimate which God the Father places on the spiritual values.

There is no encouragement in the words or works of Jesus, for that shallow sort of philanthropy and that thin type of humanitarianism which ignores the spiritual need of humanity. Whether in conversation with the Samaritan woman, or in a work of physical healing, Jesus passes from the material to place his emphasis upon the spiritual. The more we come under the power of His matchless personality the better able we are "to discern the things which are excellent."

According to Jesus the fundamental aim of life is spiritual. There is the modern parable of the Three Laborers. They were working on a stone. A stranger asked the first what he was doing. "I am cutting this stone," growled the laborer. "And you?" the stranger asked the second. "I am working for $7.50 a day," he replied. When the question was put to the third stone-cutter, he answered, "I am building a cathedral."

We cannot but believe that the supreme concern of God is for the spiritual and for the development of the spiritual in man. Dr. H. A. Youtz writes:

"The ideals of the moral spirit are forever finding themselves in contest with the processes of nature. The mechanisms and animalisms of life are forever confronting us and soliciting the place of authority and primacy. The spiritualizing of life, the bringing of every mechanical and animal ideal into obedience to the behests of the moral spirit, is the supernatural undertaking, therefore, required of every person who will win moral personality."

If we are to accept the authority of Jesus Christ, the ultimate goal of humanity is the spiritual and the preeminent values of human life and the spiritual.

John Fiske from the viewpoint of an evolutionist writes: "To suppose that during the countless ages, from the seaweed up to man, the progress of life was achieved through adjustments to external realities, but their method was all at once changed and throughout a vast province of evolution the end was secured through adjustments to external non-realities, is to do sheer violence to logic and to common sense.

"All the analogies of nature fairly shout against the assumption of such a breach of continuity between the evolution of man and all previous evolution. So far as knowledge of nature goes the whole momentum of it carries us onward to the conclusion that the unseen world as the objective term in a relation of fundamental importance that has co-existed with the whole career of mankind, has a real existence, and it is but following out the analogy to regard that Unseen World as the theater where the ethical process is destined to reach its full consummation. The lesson of evolution is that through all these weary ages the human soul has not been cheerishing in religion a delusive phantom, but in spite of seemingly endless groping and stumbling it has been rising to the recognition of its essential kinship with the ever-living God. Of all the implications of the doctrine of evolution with regard to man, I believe the very deepest and strongest to be that which asserts the Everlasting Reality of Religion."

"AGE OF INNOCENCE" :: :: :: By REYNOLDS

This is the 31st of a series of 52 greatest paintings, which represent the choice of the art directors throughout North America. Reproduction of this art masterpiece appears in the rotagravure section of today's Constitution.

BY EUGENE P. CONLEY.

In the National Gallery at London is a picture of a small child, entitled "Age of Innocence," which was painted by Sir Joshua Reynolds, celebrated portrait painter, about the year 1773, when Gainsborough hats were in vogue and Pitt and Burke were making English history.

Fifty years of this painter's life lay behind him as he stood at the window of his studio and watched children at play in a vacant lot across the street. The scene held his attention. At fifty, Youth's sun has set, only the afterglow remains, and Reynolds watching, slowly recounted his own boyhood days.

Memory, alone, communicates with the past. It exalts, exaggerates, magnifies and unfolds before us the grandest period of life—the days of childhood. Days when the heart knows no pain and play and laughter and contentment reign supreme. How sad to reflect that childhood, the era of efflorescence, the age of innocence, is over! Memory, alone can communicate with it.

But the thought furnished inspiration. Picking up his palette and brush, Reynolds painted rapidly while his mind still retained the impression, and within a few hours finished the painting, "Age of Innocence." To be able to paint a masterpiece you must understand your subject. Reynolds understood children. He believed in them, sympathized with them, played with them. No mother knew more about childhood craft than this childless artist.

Joshua Reynolds, the seventh of a family of eleven children, was born in Plympton, England, in 1723, the same year that death claimed Dr. Edward Jenner, the originator of vaccination. Thus do we see how Destiny operates, a genius in return for a genius. His father, Samuel Reynolds, was a minister.

In school, young Joshua spent the hours drawing pictures in his books. The teacher could not make him study. One hundred years later a French teacher had the same trouble with Rosa Bonheur. The Reverend Samuel worried over the boy's indifference to study. He wanted the boy to grow up and be an apothecary, and the mother's suggestion that he be allowed to study art, brought this remark, "Be an artist! I want him to amount to something—remember he is a minister's son."

Amount to something! Well! Well! Less than a dozen years roll by before a single portrait that takes less than six hours for Joshua to paint is worth more than the Reverend Samuel's annual income. Reynolds rose to fame and fortune rapidly. He was easily the most popular painter in England. Others succeeded for brief periods to share his unbroken success, but none to dispute his supremacy.

At the age of twenty-six, Joshua sailed for Italy to further his art. While there he made good use of his time diligently sketching the works of the great Italian masters, but he paid dearly for his diligence, for from a cold he caught he contracted a deafness from which he suffered throughout life.

He was elected the first president of the Royal Academy, when it was founded in 1768, and at that time was also knighted by King George III. In his 66th year, he lost the sight of his left eye, and thereafter practically relinquished his profession. Four years later, in 1792, he died and was buried in St. Paul's Cathedral, the resting place of the great Flemish artist, Anthony Van Dyck.

THE BLACK ABBOT :: A Blue

INSTALLMENT XIII.

Lord Harry Disappears!

"EVER heard of a place called Chelsea?" said the informative Mr. Puttler. "Do you know what 'Chelsea' means? It means 'Chesil Ey' or Shingle Island. Why, the word isn't even obsolete; you'll find it in any dictionary. The new 'chesil' that is spoken of in the diary is a load of shingle he got from Brighthelmstone. That's Brighton. Now, why did the old bird want shingle? Obviously, to put in some kind of concrete or mortar."

"For heaven's sake, don't start on the treasure, or I shall go mad!" groaned Dick. "At any rate, you don't believe in its existence, thank goodness!"

"I do," said the surprising man emphatically. "I'm as sure that those thousand bars of gold are in existence as I'm certain you and I are walking up this road. Your brother's got a book down that shows all Queen Elizabeth's private accounts. There's the million she stole from the Spanish ships that put into an English port when they were on their way to Holland; there's the money she got from Drake and the other seagoing burglars; but there's not a hint of the Chelford gold."

"Then where is it?" asked Dick in exasperation.

"Ask me before I go," replied the other cryptically.

* * * *

A dozen letters were written and burnt in the fireplace of her bedroom before Leslie composed the one that was eventually placed in an envelope and addressed to "Fabrian Gilder, Esq., 35 Regency Mansions, London";

Dear Mr. Gilder: I agree to your terms. The money or equivalent shares must be deposited in the Horsham branch of the Southern and Midland bank, in the name of Leslie Gilder, so that I may have control of the account from the moment I am married. I do not expect you to trust the word of one of my family, and I presume that you will wish the marriage to take place in the next few days. Will you please make arrangements for the ceremony, and tell me when and where I am to meet you? I expect it to be at a registrar's office by special license. I can only say that, although this marriage is not of my seeking, you may trust me to be a loyal wife. Very sincerely,

LESLIE GWYN.

The last post was collected by a motorcyclist postman at ten o'clock from a little wall box not a hundred yards from the house. There was an earlier collection, but somehow she could not bring herself to post the letter until the very last moment. Ten o'clock was an unusually late hour for a country collection, but it was the last box on the postman's route and was an especially convenient arrangement, not only for the inhabitants of Fossaway Manor, but for the tenant farmers who wished to notify their daily consignments.

She saw Arthur at dinner after the letter was written, but beyond the exchange of a few commonplaces they did not speak. He went back to his study, carrying his coffee with him, and she was left alone to the contemplation of the dark future. She wished she had seen Dick before she wrote, but it was too late now. Gilder had asked her to give him his answer that night, and she had promised.

What would Dick say? She screwed up her eyes tightly as though to hide the vision of him, and her lips trembled.

"No weakness, Danton!" It was a favorite quotation of her childhood, and had been the slogan at all moments when tears were near at hand.

She took the letter from her bag and looked at it. Stamped, addressed, she had but to drop this into the little letter box, and thereafter the angle of life was twisted to a new prospect; the bleakest, dreariest prospect that any woman had faced.

And it had to be done. The hands of the clock moved slowly and inexorably round. Nine o'clock—a quarter after—twenty minutes before ten; she set her teeth and got up from the little table where she had been trying in vain to concentrate her mind upon a game of patience, went upstairs and put on her hat and coat, and, with the letter tightly gripped in her hand, stole down across the hall, opened the door, and went out.

It was very dark; she could scarcely see her way down the drive. Clear of the overhanging trees, her eyes, grown accustomed to the darkness, made out the road. She thought that she saw somebody on the road ahead and heard footsteps, but she was nervy, she told herself. Nevertheless, she stopped and listened. She heard nothing and went on.

A few minutes' walk brought her to the pillar box, and here she waited. A big spot of rain fell upon her hand; she heard the sough of the wind through the trees; and then, far away, she saw a tiny star of light and heard the faint clank of the postman's cycle. She thrust the letter into the box and turned to retrace her steps.

Then it occurred to her that the postman would pass her, and she did not wish to see him. Which way should she go? Her heart and inclinations beckoned to Fossaway Manor. Dick—she must see Dick. She fought against the madness; the postman's light grew brighter. Then she ran, down towards the cut road, through the gate, and up the slope to the abbey. There she sat down to recover her breath, and presently she saw the reflection of a lamp, heard the thunder of the postman's motorcycle as it passed.

There went fate, on that dark road, noisily, bumpily. The red light faded from sight, and she got up, walked leisurely past the abbey ruins, without one thought of ghosts or haunting spirits, and took the lower and shorter path to the manor.

She was half way across the long meadow when she stopped. Fear was clutching at her heart; she could feel the flesh creep on her neck, and, turning, looked back. Somebody was following her. Consciously she had heard no sound, but to her heart flashed a warning signal that set it racing. She could see nobody. It must be her imagination, she told herself; yet here, reason and instinct were at variance, and instinct won. She knew there was somebody immediately behind her, less than twenty yards away.

She could intercept the long drive to Fossaway Manor before she could reach the house. She decided to make the longer journey, and, turning abruptly, walked with quick strides across the velvety grassland in the direction of the elms which flanked the drive. Once she looked back, and thought she saw a moving shape. She quickened her steps, broke into a gentle run. She must not allow blind panic to overcome her, she told herself.

Leslie looked back, but saw nothing, and, ashamed of her fear, she slowed to a walk and reached the elms and the drive with heartfelt thankfulness. Exactly how she should break in upon Dick she did not know. She hoped he would be in his study, and that she could call him out from the lawn.

Nearer and nearer she came to the house, and then, of a sudden, she whipped round. Somebody was behind her; she was sure of it now. She heard feet upon the graveled road.

"Who is there?" she called.

There was no answer, but the footsteps stopped. They might be walking on the grassy verge, she thought, and, turning, ran up the drive. Whoever followed was running, too. She heard a sibilant whisper and her blood turned cold. Then, as she emerged from the trees, she saw a figure against the gray sheen of the round pond, saw the shape of it—the long habit and the heavy cowl. With a scream she flew.

The drive continuing past the window would bring her to Dick's study. She saw with a gasp of relief that the door was open and a light shining inside. Over her shoulder she saw the queer shape again and screamed. In an instant Dick was out of the study and had caught her in his arms.

He listened to her breathless story, then, almost carrying her to his room, he put her in a chair and ran out into the night. In a few minutes he came back.

"I saw nothing," he said. "It was the Black Abbot, you say?"

"I don't know; something in a cowl and habit; I'm sure of that."

It was a bad introduction to the story she had to tell; indeed, in her terror, she almost forgot the object of her visit.

"Did Arthur come with you?"

She shook her head .

"Dick, I know," were the first words she said when she had recovered her breath.

"You know what?"

"About Lady Chelford's money."

She saw his face change.

"Did he tell you?" he asked, the red coming into his face.

"Not Arthur, no. It was Gilder."

"Mr. Gilder told you? I knew he had called. Was that why he came?"

She nodded.

"For nothing else?"

"Yes; he came to offer me the money."

She saw his eyes narrow.

"He did? At a price, of course?"

She nodded.

"And you—what did you say?"

She found a difficulty in breathing; speech for the moment was impossible without making a fool of herself.

"You agreed?"

She nodded again.

"I have just posted the letter to him," she said.

She saw him bite his lip and a red spot of blood showed. If he had stormed at her, cursed her, she could have borne it; but he did no more than look at her. There was nothing in his gaze that was uncharitable.

"O, Dick, Dick!" She was sobbing on his breast and his arms were about her, comforting her.

"You can't do it, my dear. Anything is better than that."

She shook her head, incapable of speech.

"I tell you anything is better than that." His voice was hard, uncompromising. "Better you should live in hell all your life! I know that man—I know his mind—I know his kind—it isn't his years, it's his mind and his evil heart. If he were twenty I would say 'No, you can't do it, Leslie.'"

She pushed herself gently away from him and dried her eyes.

"I must, Dick; I have given my word. I cannot trick him. The last thing I said to him was 'If I tell you I will marry you, you can make the arrangements about the money—I will not fail you.' I cannot fail him; I cannot fail myself."

His face was drawn and haggard.

"This can't be!" he said. "Something will happen. I don't know what——"

She stopped.

"What's that?" she gasped, terrified.

From somewhere in the grounds came a shrill shriek that was hardly human. Again it came; a sobbing, blubbering shriek that turned her heart to ice.

"Stay here," said Dick, as he made for the open window, but she flung herself upon him.

"You shan't go! You mustn't go!" she cried wildly. "Dick, something dreadful is happening. O, God! listen, Dick!"

This time the shriek was shriller, and died away into a thin wail of sound.

He pushed her aside and ran out onto the lawn.

"From which way did it come, do you think?"

"Let me come with you—do, please do!" she begged. "I dare not be left alone."

He hesitated.

"Come," he said roughly, and took her arm with a grip that made her wince.

Together they ran towards Elm Drive, and then he stopped.

"Go back and get my hand lamp. It's on my writing table," he said. "I will wait here for you."

She fled back to the room, took up the lamp with fingers that trembled so violently that she could scarcely hold it, and rejoined him.

"It was over there. I heard something a second ago. Oh, if I hadn't promised to wait!"

He turned on the light, swinging its rays over the ground before him, and going ahead of her. Presently she saw him stop and a circle of light focus on something brown that lay huddled on the grass.

"Stay where you are," he commanded, "and turn your back."

A voice hailed him in the distance; it was Puttler, and, guided by the lamp, he came on the scene.

"Who is it?" he asked.

"I don't know," said Dick in a low voice.

At his feet was the huddled figure of a man. He was lying on his face, and was attired from head to foot in a long black habit around which a rope was girdled.

"The Black Abbot?" said Puttler incredulously. "Is he dead?"

"Look," said Dick, and pointed to the wet shoulder and the horror of the throat.

Puttler knelt down, and, putting his arms under the figure, turned it on its back.

The face was covered by a black cowl, and this he gently raised.

"Merciful God!" said Dick in a hushed voice.

He was looking into the gray face of Thomas, the footman.

"Thomas—the Black Abbot!"

Dick looked at the pitiable thing, bewildered; and then he remembered the girl and, with a low word of instruction to Puttler, went back to her.

"Is he—dead?" she asked fearfully.

"Yes, I'm afraid he is."

"Who—who is it?"

"One of the servants," he said evasively.

"Not Thomas?"

Why she should think it was Thomas she could not for the life of her tell.

"Yes—Thomas."

She made no inquiries, and they walked back without a word to his room. He rang the bell, and, to the footman who answered:

"Ask Mr. Glover to come to me," he said.

The old butler came apprehensively. All the servants had heard the scream in the park.

"Where is his lordship?"

"He went up to bed about five minutes ago, Mr. Alford."

"Had he heard—anything?"

"No, sir. He's so particular about our talking of the Black Abbot——"

"How do you know it was the Black Abbot?" asked Dick sharply, and the butler explained that somebody had seen the figure in the grounds.

"He was trying to open a window. One of the maids looking out of her window saw him walking on the paved path below, and raised an alarm. Has he hurt anybody, Mr. Richard?"

"No, he has hurt nobody," said Dick.

He drew the butler out into the hall and closed the door behind him.

"A man has been found in the grounds in the dress of a black abbot—and he is dead—murdered!"

"Good Lord, sir!" said the startled servant. "Is it anybody we know?"

"Thomas," said Dick laconically, and the old man staggered back against the paneled wall.

"Not our Thomas? Thomas Luck, the man who was dismissed?"

Dick nodded.

"Get the servants to bed. Tell them that the scream came from somebody who was skylarking and that we caught him—anything you like." Then, catching a glimpse of the man's ashen face: "First of all you'd better go down into the dining room and help yourself to a good stiff glass of brandy and water; you look a corpse, man!"

"Thomas!" muttered the old man. "It's terrible! Do you think——"

Dick cut short his question.

"Do as I tell you; get the servants to bed. The police will be up here soon enough, but I'll arrange that your staff are not questioned till the morning."

He went back to the girl.

"As for you, young lady," he said, with a grim smile, "I seem to spend my life taking you back to your home."

"Couldn't I stay?" she asked timidly.

Dick shook his head.

"We shall have to call in the police, and I want to keep your name out of the business. Arthur is at home?"

"Yes, Arthur is at home," she said listlessly.

At that moment the telephone bell rang and he took up the instrument.

"Is that Lord Chelford's house?" said an unfamiliar voice.

"Yes," said Dick shortly.

"I'm speaking from the sub-post-office. That isn't Lord Chelford speaking?"

"No, it's Mr. Alford," said Dick.

"Well, listen, Mr. Alford. Have you sent anything very important from the local post-box?"

"Why?" asked Dick quickly.

"Because our roundsman reported that the box had been tampered with. He couldn't get in his key, so the letters that had been posted between six and ten have not yet been collected."

"Right! When it's cleared will you ask the postman to bring the letters up to the hall? There are one or two that I want to withdraw."

The man at the other end of the wire hesitated.

"Why, in the special circumstances, yes," he said, and Dick hung up the receiver and turned slowly to the girl.

"The letterbox hasn't been cleared."

Slowly the significance of the words dawned upon her.

"What shall I do?" she whispered.

"Give me authority to withdraw your letter to Gilder. There are six more days."

She held her breath. For a second a vision of her brother in convict's garb came to her eyes, and then she looked at the man before her. Something of his vitality, his confidence, passed to her soul.

"I will do as you tell me," she said, in a voice little above a whisper. "But, Dick, what will happen?"

"I am going to do my duty," said Dick.

And all that sleepless night, as she tossed from side to side in her bed, she pondered those words but could find no solution to their mystery.

Puttler, unshaven and weary-eyed, dragged himself to the study and poured out a large cup of tea that the butler had brought in and drank it at a gulp.

"Scotland Yard has given me charge of this case, for which you may thank your stars!" he said. "Considering we've had to do all our work between eleven and four, I think I've set up a record in investigation. Thomas' monkish attire was hired, as you thought, from a theatrical costumer's in Wardour street——"

"I saw him coming out with a bundle under his arm, and wondered what use he could find for fancy dress," interrupted Dick.

"That is fact No. 1," counted Puttler. "Fact No. 2 is that he was making ready for a getaway. He even tried to open your local letterbox, probably earlier in the evening. Do you send money by post?"

"My brother does frequently. It's a habit I've tried to cure, without success."

"That is fact No. 3," said Puttler. "He couldn't open the box, but we found the key on him. He had moved everything of value from Gilder's house. I found his portmanteau packed and cached in the field where you say Gilder parks his car. And obviously he was coming to relieve your brother of any loose cash he might find in the library. I found his tools scattered on the flower bed under one of the library windows."

"How was he killed?" asked Dick.

Puttler scratched his head.

"By a regiment of soldiers, to judge from the appearance of him!"

They talked till the sleepy-eyed Mr. Glover staggered in and asked permission to go to bed, and then they walked out into the cold morning and joined the party of police that were searching the grounds.

"I suppose the best thing we can do is to go to bed also," said Dick, and at that instant Puttler stooped and picked something from the long grass.

It was a long dagger, its steel hilt black with age, the blade coated with something that was still wet. They looked at one another.

"Do you know this?"

Dick nodded mutely.

"What is it?" asked Puttler.

"It is the dagger that once belonged to Hubert of Redruth — the Black Abbot!" said Dick.

The man's jaw dropped.

"Where does it come from?"

Dick shook his head.

"The last time I saw it," he said slowly, "it was hanging in the hall of Arthur Gwyn's house."

"Curiouser and curiouser," said Puttler, who had literary leanings.

Dick heard his name shouted in an agitated voice, and, looking round, saw the butler running towards him, no longer sleepy-eyed, but very alert and white.

"What is the matter, Glover?"

"The maid—foolish girl only just told me—frightened!" gasped the old man, and pointed to the open study windows.

Dick walked quickly back, followed by Puttler. Drooping in his study chair was a plain looking girl, wearing over her coarse night dress a man's overcoat; her lank hair falling over her shoulders, she presented a sight which at any other time would have moved Dick Alford to laughter.

"Now, Alice, tell Mr. Alford what you told me," said the old butler, beside himself with anxiety.

It was some time before she could speak coherently, and then she told her amazing story. She had gone to bed in the servants' quarters soon after eleven with a sick headache. She had heard nothing of the scream, but at some time, which she placed with accuracy, having an alarm clock with a phosphorescent dial by her bedside, at 1:45, she heard "a terrible commotion" downstairs. Her room was immediately above Lord Chelford's. She heard shouts and screams, the smashing of glass and the sounds of a struggle.

"Hurry, hurry, woman!" said Dick, frantic with anxiety. "Downstairs, in his lordship's room—are you sure?"

"Yes, sir," whimpered the girl. "I simply dared not get up for fear I was murdered. I simply laid there and fainted and come to again . . ."

Before she had finished Dick was across the hall and running up the stairs two at a time. He tried the door of Harry's room, but it was bolted. He called him by name and hammered on the panels, but there was no answer.

"We'd better break in the door," said Puttler. "Have you got an ax?"

Mr. Glover went downstairs in search of the tool and returned with an ax and a case opener. In a second the panel of the door was smashed and Dick peered in.

All the blinds save one were drawn, and the exception afforded sufficient light to enable him to examine the room. He gave one glance and his heart sank. The room was in hopeless confusion; the bedclothes were thrown on the floor, two mirrors, one a cheval glass, had been smashed; the uncurtained window was open. Dick put his hand through the hole in the panel and unbolted the door, and the two men ran in.

There were signs as of a terrible struggle. The wreckage of two chairs lay scattered about the floor. The table which had held the medicines was overturned and the floor was littered with broken glass and wet with the spilt medicines.

Puttler walked over to the bed. The mattress had been half dragged to the floor, but the pillows were still in their place, and one of these and a part of the under sheet were smothered with blood.

Dick examined the open window. Three or four of the leaded panes were broken and the steel rod that kept the windows open was bent as though a heavy weight had rested upon it. The ground was about fifteen feet below, and immediately under the window a large rhododendron bush had been broken as though by some heavy weight thrown upon it. Without hesitation, Dick threw his legs across the window sill, poised himself a moment and dropped to the ground. There was blood on the leaves of the bush; he could find no footprints. Searching the ground, he came upon a smudge of blood against one of the buttresses of the wall.

By this time Puttler, who had chosen a more sedate method of descent, had joined him and the two men went on, keeping to the paved path and searching the ground for a further trail.

"This happened when we were in the grounds with the local police," said Puttler.

He had been full of self-reproaches all night, and now Dick silenced him.

"It can't be helped," he said. "The fault is as much mine as yours. I ought to have expected this, after the killing of Thomas. Knowing what I know, I should have gone up to his room and stayed there with him, or at least outside. Poor old Harry! Poor old boy!"

His voice broke, and for a second there were tears in his eyes.

"What is this?"

The paving ended abruptly and was continued with a rolled gravel path, and there were marks here of something heavy being dragged along. These ceased as suddenly as the paving.

"Wait," said Dick, as the solution dawned upon him.

He ran back along the wall of the wing, turned the corners, and stopped before the first of the library windows. It was open, and, drawing himself up, he dropped into the darkened room and pulled back the curtains. So far he had not examined the library; his practiced eye, familiar with almost every book on the shelves had almost been clear-been there. One section of the shelves had almost almost been cleared. A drawer in Harry's desk had been broken open, and on the floor he found an empty cash box.

He made a brief and hurried survey, and, returning to the opening by the window, he rejoined the detective and told him of his discovery.

Beyond the graveled path and the dragging marks all trace of Harry was lost. Ahead of them, at a distance of four or five hundred yards, was the river. To the left, and at this point out of sight, the abbey ruins.

An hour's search brought them no nearer to discovery, and Dick went back to his room to find the first of the disheveled reporters stepping from his hired car.

Mr. Gilder rose at six o'clock that morning. He had spent a restless night and welcomed the dawn. The first post did not arrive until eight o'clock, and he met the postman at the door. There were half a dozen letters for him, and he carried them into his room and examined them eagerly. Only one bore a familiar postmark and that was in a hand which he recognized. He tore it open and found a few scrawled lines.

"If I don't see you again, thank you for your kindness, and don't think too badly of your old friend."

Greenwood Leflore was born June 3d, 1803. His father, Louis Leflore, was a French-Canadian, a soldier and a man of valor, his mother was a full-blood Choctaw, named Rebecca Cravatt. He was three times married, first to the eldest daughter of Major John Donley, who, struck with the boy Greenwood's intelligence, and with his father's consent, carried him to Nashville and educated him. The children of the son and daughter of this marriage live in Oklahoma. Elisabeth Coody lived only a few months after her marriage to him and afterwards Greenwood Leflore married the younger daughter of Major Donley, who bore him one daughter whose descendants now own and occupy beautiful Malmaison.

The site of the John Ross home was chosen because of a splendid spring in the great hill which rises abruptly in the background. There is a cave in this hill always known to the Indians but long undiscovered by the whites after the removal of the Cherokees to Indian Territory.

John Ross enlarged the house in which he was born and built the council chamber which is still there. A unique feature of this over a century old house are the swinging mantels. There is also one room in it to which no one has ever yet found the door, a sealed room, its egress known alone to the Indians.

The Cherokee Indians lived on both sides of the Tennessee river until after the Hiawassee Purchase in 1818. Afterwards they removed to the south side until the treaty of New Echota made by the Rev. J. F. Schemerhorn with a small fraction of the tribe, this territory also was wrested from them.

The Cherokee nation, consisting now of 18,000 people, was surrounded by white people, the lower stratum of which race was ruining the tribe by the introduction of whisky, gambling and vice.

The Cherokees were divided into two great parties, the Ridge party and the Ross party. John Ross and John Ridge being respectively the chiefs of the opposing factions.

The Ross party, the larger, opposed removal. The Ridge party recognizing the uselessness of resisting fate, was in favor of the treaty.

The treaty was made with three chiefs, Major Ridge, John Ridge, and Elias Boudinot and about 600 men, and opposed by John Ross and his faction of some 1,200 men, which on its face, shows the fraudulent nature of the treaty.

The Ross party could not believe so iniquitous a treaty would be put into effect and acting on the advice of their chief, John Ross, made no preparations for removal. But the announcement that the treaty was ratified set the Ridge party making their's for removal. Before two years of grace had expired they were safely settled in their new home beyond the Mississippi.

But Major Ridge, John Ridge and Elias Boudinot all came to untimely ends. Major Ridge was waylaid and shot. John Ridge was taken from his bed and cut to pieces with hatchets and knives and Elias Boudinot, decoyed at night from his home, met the same fate as John Ridge.

The Ross party continued to struggle peacefully for their rights. Their case sustained by the signatures of almost the entire Cherokee nation and by remonstrance from many citizens of the United States, was presented before congress.

* * * *

Now Georgia was faced with a peculiar situation which has been much misunderstood. The Cherokees had placed themselves under the protection of the federal government, declining amenity to state laws. They declared against ceding one more foot of land and in 1827 set up a government of their own, a government within a government.

President Monroe and John Quincy Adams favored the Cherokees. President Jackson held that Georgia was right and told the Cherokees their only alternative to submission was emigration.

John Ross, or Kooeskoowe, applied to the supreme court of the United States for an injunction restraining the state of Georgia from executing laws within the Cherokee territory.

This was decided against him, Ross proposed to cede the Cherokee lands to the United States for $20,000. The United States, already treating with the Ridge party for $5,000, resolved that $5,000 was sufficient.

John Ross, chief of the Cherokee nation from 1828 to his death, fought with wonderful courage to keep his people in the beautiful Cherokee country of their fathers. He was an educated, cultured man of fine and commanding appearance. Intimidation attempted against him was to no purpose. Nor could he be bought. He refused a bribe of $50,000, rather than enrich himself by his country's ruin.

In May, 1838, the soldiers commanded by General Winfield Scott took charge of the situation. Quietly at night the troops surrounded portions of the tribe, bringing them next morning to the appointed place, the lower end of Missionary Ridge, near Rossville. Many were loaded on boats and floated off down the Tennessee, others marched overland, until one-half were gone. The rest, owing to the lateness of the season and the heat, were permitted to stay until next year when, under an agreement with the government, John Ross himself led them to their promised land.

John Ross' wife, like himself, part Scotch and part Indian, died on the march. Her grave marked with a simple stone in memory of Elisazeth Ross is in an old cemetery at Little Rock, Arkansas.

Oconostota—faithful to the English crown on which side he fought during the Revolution. Nancy Ward—faithful to the dictates of humanity, whether the red man or the white. Greenwood Leflore, faithful to the Union, for his sympathy was never with the Confederacy and at his death his little grandchildren, at his request, held the stars and stripes above them that his last look in this world would be on the flag of his country.

And John Ross, with more white blood than red, yet faithful always to the Cherokee nation. His last efforts were for them, his last thoughts of the home he had loved, for he died in Washington, where he had gone in their interest.

He died August 1st, 1866, at the age of seventy-six.

death, half hidden in the straw. There are wagon tracks near the pile. In the background a man, driving a harrow, hurries his horses across the tracks.

On the afternoon of April 9 William and George Taylor drew up in front of the Meeks home in a wagon, just purchased, and the whole family piled in, the children very gayly, as though it were a picnic. Bill Taylor said he and his brother would accompany them to make sure that Meeks fulfilled his promise. He said he would turn over the $1,000 as soon as they crossed the state line.

Nellie Meeks later related that they had reached Jenkins hill when an altercation sprang up between her father and the elder Taylor. Her father evidently had become suspicious of treachery. He stood up in the wagon. And as he did so the slaughter began.

Gus Meeks was riddled with bullets. His body toppled over the side of the wagon and fell to the ground. Mrs. Meeks, clutching her youngest daughter to her, dropped from the wagon and began to run into a nearby field. She was pursued and shot again and again as she held little Mamie in her arms and pleaded for mercy. The infant was clubbed. And Hattie and Nellie.

Nellie related that when she recovered consciousness she felt that she was smothering. She lay in a narrow trench, covered with straw. She struggled out and then pushed the straw away from her mother's face. The sight of it horrified her.

One Little Error.

The child's story sent investigators to the slaughter scene. It was discovered that the strawstack lay within the boundary of George Taylor's farm. George Taylor was in the plowed field, not far from the pile of straw. He was driving a harrow back and forth across the newly made tracks of a wagon.

As it was, the searchers soon uncovered the bodies of Gus Meeks, his wife, and the two youngest daughters, Hattie and Mamie. The sight was most horrifying. Taylor's visitors stood around their gruesome discovery, uncertain just what to do, not realizing that Taylor might have had something to do with the affair.

And then they noticed that the ex-school teacher, who had said he wanted to drive his horse into the shade for the time being, had disappeared. He had dashed for Browning to notify his brother.

Nellie Meeks, bearing a livid scar on her head, proved the star witness for the state in the second trial. She was positive in her identification of the killers, and told a clear-cut story of the tragedy. While she testified on the stand, William Taylor sat weeping violently, holding his own small daughter in his arms. His lawyer turned dramatically to the child during his closing argument.

"Little girl," he said, "your father shall not be hanged."

But the jury this time convicted the Taylors of murder in the first degree after taking only one ballot.

The date set for the executions was April 30, 1896. On the evening of April 11 the two brothers broke out of the jail at Carrollton, Mo. They had sawed through the bars of their cell and with the help of another convicted murderer, Lee Cunningham, had started to make their way to the ground when they were discovered. Bill Taylor had already reached the ground via a garden hose stretched from the roof.

Deputy Sheriff Lon Shelton, who was on night duty, covered Bill and Cunningham with a gun.

"Where's George?" demanded the deputy.

Taylor threw a glance toward the roof and shrugged. "Still up there, I guess," he replied.

The half minute of delay caused by Bill Taylor's statement that his brother was still on the roof proved sufficient to give George Taylor enough time to distance his pursuers. No trace of him was found. Bloodhounds were used in the long manhunt to no avail. It was as though he had dropped into the bowels of the earth when he slid down the side of the Carrollton jail.

Finally interest shifted to Bill Taylor. He made several desperate efforts to escape. Deep, intricate plots, involving outside aid and cipher messages to his wife and others, brought sensations but always fell short of the hoped for escape. Even attempts at suicide failed and William Taylor, a clever, brilliant man in his way, was hanged a few months after George fled.

Nellie Meeks, sole survivor of that day of horror near Jenkins hill, died a few years ago. Nearly all the other principal figures in the famous case had passed. It was believed, too, that George Taylor had long ago joined his brother in the world beyond.

But now he has appeared again in the form of this strange hermit who lived in a broken down hut outside of Tulsa, Okla. For many years this man, known under the name of Williams, had eked out a bare existence, occasioning considerable comment among the simple folk of the neighborhood, but never venturing to clear up the mystery of his past.

Some weeks ago the aged recluse fell gravely ill. He summoned Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Kennon, neighbors of his, to his bedside, and in halting tones whispered to them that he was the long sought George Taylor. And backing this story has come a positive identification by P. B. Cristy, of Tulsa, an intimate friend of Taylor.

These Study Methods Will Help You To Master Knotty School Lessons

School is starting again, and for the next nine or ten months studying is going to be uppermost in the minds of boys and girls all over the country. A lot of students are going to get real benefit from this school term, while others will find it of little value. Which class you will be in depends largely on how much you study.

But just studying is not enough. There is a right and a wrong way to go about mastering your lessons, just as there is a right and a wrong way of doing everything else. If you would get the most out of time put on your work, you must have systematic methods of attacking it.

One of the most important aids to proper studying is a place for doing your home work. Choose some quiet nook in the house and fit it up as your "study den." You should have a flat topped table, a comfortable chair and a place for books. Some sort of lamp that will throw a soft light on your work without getting into your eyes should be used, and if possible have your nook near a window where ventilation is good and where the room will not get so warm that it dulls your senses.

Start your work at a definite time.

Have your dictionary, your atlas, a fountain pen, pencils, paper, an eraser, a ruler and whatever reference books you need right on your table. This will save time in hunting for them. Then fix a regular time for doing your home work and start right on the dot. In this way you will form study habits, and you will find it much easier to get down to work.

An ideal nook for studying.

Concentration Is Important.

Now we will suppose that you have your study nook and your materials and are ready to go to work. One of the first things you must learn is the art of concentration. If your mind is wandering to a lot of other things you may read the history less three or four times and not be able to remember a paragraph of it when you have finished. Push other things from your mind when you study. Think of the lesson you are mastering, and of nothing else.

Learning by heart is one of the poorest ways of studying. Perhaps you will remember things learned in this way for a time, but the chances are that just when you need the information most, it will leave you. Instead, try to get a thorough understanding of the principles back of what you are studying. Tie up the facts you read with other things you know. If you wish to remember that John Milton wrote "Paradise Lost," for example, you might say to yourself, "Milton was the poet who went blind. Losing your eyesight is like losing paradise." Such simple little devices are a great aid to your memory.

Never try to remember everything in a lesson. First, read the whole assignment over and get its general idea, then pick out the most important points in it. Master these thoroughly, connecting the smaller details with the big points as you go along. Making an outline of the material studied will be found very helpful, and will aid you later in refreshing your memory.

Memorizing.

Some things, of course, such as history dates or a poem, must be memorized completely. To memorize something, use the "whole" method. Read the entire thing over and gradually learn it all in one piece. Don't memorize one part of it and then another part, for in this way you have no bridge to connect the different parts. And remember to always THINK about what you are memorizing.

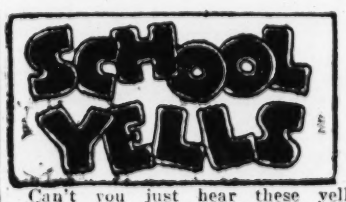

Taking Notes.

In some of your classes you will probably have to take notes. Now, there are several different systems of note taking, and one is no better than the others. You simply must choose the one that best fits the subject and best suits you. I remember that in college I used the outline system of note taking for two whole years, and it worked very well. Then in my junior year I took a history course under a professor who, when he lectured, rambled all over the place. I soon found that the outline system was worthless, and for that course I had to drop it and use another method. I jotted down facts as he brought them out on one-half of the notebook page, and then, at the close of the lecture, indexed them briefly in the margin.

In some classes you will have to take notes.

Your instructor will help you in planning a system of note-taking for his course. Ask him what method he thinks would be most useful.

Learn a Riddle; You Might Need One at a Party

At lots of parties every guest is asked to tell a riddle. Are you sure that you would know a good one if they asked you? There are some dandy ones here this week. Maybe you would do well to remember a couple for use in an emergency.

401. Why is a woman like a stove?
402. What is the difference between an elephant and a germ?
403. Why is a drawn tooth like things forgotten?
404. What is the difference between a bottle of medicine and a troublesome boy?
405. How were Adam and Eve prevented from gambling?
406. When was beef the highest?
407. What has a heart, but is not alive?
408. What sometimes kicks but has no feet?
409. When do small apples taste the best?
410. When is a girl like a two-wheeled vehicle?

Slight Remembrance.

Mrs. Stingy: "Dear, the baby has swallowed a penny. What on earth shall I do?"

Mr. Stingy: "Oh, let him have it. His birthday is next Thursday, anyhow."

Strategy.

When the company went over the top, Pat climbed over the back of the trench and started running away. His captain saw him and shouted, "Stop! Are you a coward?"

Pat: "Sure and I'm no coward. The world's round—and I'm attacking from the rear."

Not a Chance.

Paul: "I hear you and your girl had some words."

George: "I had some, but didn't get to use them."

No Talent.

John: "You say Bert doesn't have much of a line?"

Don: "No, he can't even string a banjo."

Works Both Ways.

Father: "I said I'd thrash you if this occurred again. And didn't you promise never to do it again?"

Johnnie: "Yes, father, but as I didn't keep my promise I won't hold you to yours."

What's the Matter?

Answer will be found elsewhere on this page.

THE LETTER WRITERS' CLUB

ATLANTA, GA.

Dear Editor: Inclosed is a poem which I hope to see published in your paper as a tribute to Rudolph Valentino. I am 13 years old and hope some day to become a great poet.

Rudolph Valentino.

I.

Valentino was a noted star,
He was noted both near and far;
His death was grieved all over the land
He was a favorite of the movie fan.
He played in pictures both new and old.
He played in stories our grandfathers told

II.

He was born away in a foreign land—
Castellanita, Italy, is the birthplace of this man.
His father was noted in his day,
And now his son is noted today.
His education was finished at school,
He learned his lessons by the golden rule.

III.

More actors will die as years go by.
Everyone has a time to die;
New ones will take their place each day,
And one by one they will fade away.
Valentino's time has come and passed,
We hope he will find contentment at last.

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you please let a Georgia girl join your happy band? I have light hair, brown eyes and light complexion. I weigh 86 pounds and am 12 years old. I go to Hoke Smith Junior High school and I am in the seventh grade. I graduated from grammar school January 29. In grammar school (Georgia Avenue) I won a Conklin fountain pen, an athletic button, a Palmer method button and a show ticket for getting all "A's" on my report card.

What have you folks been doing all this summer? I did not go anywhere this summer but had a good time playing with some of my friends.

What have you for pets? I have a black cat with two white spots on him. His name is Easol.

My little cousin lives with me and we have a good time together. She is four year sold, has light hair, blue eyes and is real fat.

I am very fond of The Constitution funnies. My favorites are Andy Gump, Little Orphan Annie and Winnie Winkle, but I would like much better to read letters from boys and girls I have never seen. I would like to get letters and photos from all of you and will answer every letter I get.

Hello Club Members: I see you have been broadcasting a lot these days. Why don't you sign off and let a Georgia girl talk a while?

This is my first time to write, but I hope to get many answers. I have been looking for my twin but have not found her. Please help me.

I am sure you want me to describe myself because I know I would not find a twin. I am 11 years old, 4 feet 6 inches tall, weigh 78 pounds, have light complexion, red hair with a golden touch and blue eyes. My birthday is May 8. I am in the sixth grade and go to Stewart Avenue school. I have a violin and uke. I like to dance and do stunts. Last year I received a bronze button at school and I hope to get a silver one this year.

I sure am glad little Chester found the City of Gold because he worked so hard. I can hardly wait until next Sunday to see Chester.

Every one who writes to me please send me your picture and I will send you mine so we can see how near like twins we are. Well, I think I have talked enough. I will sign off and let someone else talk.

I also went to see my grandmother and granddaddy in Alabama and my great aunt, who lives near Roswell, Ga., besides going to towns near by, such as Rome.

I am very fond of outdoor sports, such as skating, riding my bicycle, playing ball and most of all, swimming. I haven't but one pet, which is a little dog almost a year old, whose name is Trixie. He is half collie and half spitz. I have only one sister. She is almost eight years old.

All of you boys and girls write to me. Send your pictures, too, and as much as I hate to write, I can assure you an answer. Hoping that I have made many friends by writing this letter, I am

"School Days."

Back to school we start again,
Some with a frown, others with a grin.
Back to our friends of old,
And teachers with hearts of gold.
Some will get tickled and giggle,
Others will get restless and wiggle;
Some of us will eat and talk,
While others in lessons
And exams will stalk.
And those that misbehave will feel very bad
When told that they have had
Too many demerits by far
To even get the history star.
So the majority of turn
Right merrily to friends, teachers, school and books that help us learn.

NORTON, VA.

Hello Folks: Here we come again! Gee, but we are glad we joined the Letter Writers' club." It sure has been a pleasure to answer the letters of our friends that we have gained in the club. Flowers, flowers, everywhere,
Along the roadside here and there;
Some are red and some are blue,
Many other colors, too.

Flowers, flowers, in the yard,
Some are late and some are forward,
Some are pink and some are white,
Some are dull and some are bright.

Flowers by the brook, on hillsides, too,
Such a sweet perfume as you are passing through;
Some are tame and some are wild.
Now, we'll let flowers rest for awhile.

Abram Hittman, of Ellenville, N. Y., who is recovering from being hit by a bolt of lightning, will bear the mark of a tree on his back as long as he lives. He was standing directly underneath an electric light fixture in his summer home when he was knocked unconscious by the bolt. The lightning burned his back with the reproduction of a small tree, the trunk, branches and twigs being almost perfect.

Khartoum, largest of the elephants in the Bronx zoo in New York, is a kind-hearted creature—but he is misunderstood. Last year he conceived the benevolent idea of sharing his bath with the hot humans who came to watch his ablutions. Those whom he sprayed with trunkfuls of water, however, were unappreciative, so this season finds a huge plateglass screen erected between his cage and the public.

: BOYS AND GIRLS STORY SECTION :

KING FUZZY-PAWS

BY GLEB E. BOTKIN.

Tickletail and Jumpy kept on running until they were entirely out of breath. They knew that unless they could discover a way out of the wood before it was dark they would have to spend the night there. And they knew that there was danger of them seeing not only the white paw, but the ghost-like animal to whom it belonged.

They sat down on the soft moss which covered the ground under the tree in order to catch their breath and see whether they could make out a single familiar object. But every way they looked it was just the same, trees and darkness. The owls over their heads began talking about them and saying "Who" to one another. You see, they had never met Tickletail or Jumpy and they were very curious to know just who they were.

"Do you suppose we will have to stay here all night, Tickletail?" asked Jumpy. Now Tickletail was very frightened, but he knew that he must be brave because after all his father was the king and would not like a son who was easily scared. "What if we do?" he asked, but his voice sounded very weak indeed, as it was getting darker by the minute and he kept imagining that he saw strange white paws all about him.

If he had but known, Baron Redfur was at that moment suggesting to the king that they send the guard out to look for Tickletail and Jumpy.

Although it was very dark, Jumpy thought he saw something just behind him, so he and Tickletail started running again. The next time they sat down for breath, they leaned against a great rock and fell asleep. Tickletail was awakened by the touch of a paw on his shoulder.

As Tickletail felt the paw on his shoulder he tried to cry out to Jumpy, but he was so frightened that his voice seemed to stick in his throat. However, he gave Jumpy a terrific poke in the ribs and that monkey was so startled that he leaped to his feet yelling at the top of his lungs and brandishing the little sword which he was carrying in his hand. Immediately there was great scurrying behind them, and Tickletail could hear the animal running away through the forest. "How brave you are, Jumpy!" he cried, and Jumpy, who had only been startled and was just as frightened as Tickletail, didn't know what to answer.

They had been sleeping much longer than they had believed possible, for soon the blackness of the forest lightened to gray and they knew that morning had come. Tickletail stood up to look around and the first thing that he saw was a bright red cross marked on the rock and he knew that all through the night they had been sleeping over the buried treasure box!

"We won't starve, anyway," he told Jumpy, "but we won't have to open the box because I think we can find our way out." Sure enough, after walking about a hundred feet they saw a reflection of sunlight which they knew must be the edge of the forest. And there was Uncle Reddy with General Striper, and Tickletail was sure that he had never been so glad to see anyone in all his life! The head gardener was with them, too, and Tickletail excitedly told of their night in the forest with the strange animal with the great white paws.

"That must be the bandit bear that we are looking for," cried General Striper. "How would you and Jumpy like to go on a searching party with me and my soldiers?" The thought of going into the wood with the entire royal guard made Tickletail and Jumpy thrill at the thought of adventure. "And now for the pirate party!" cried Uncle Reddy, as they went up the steps of the palace and the king and queen came down to hug and kiss their little son.

"I have hurt myself," said the great white bear in answer to Tickletail's question, "and there isn't anyone here who will help me out?"

"Where did you hurt yourself?" asked Tickletail, forgetting that he had been afraid of him a few moments ago. The bear held up one paw and looked just exactly as though he were going to burst into tears. He had fallen down coming through the forest and ran a sharp piece of stone which luckily was paws. "I'll take it out for you," said Tickletail, and he had Jumpy hold the bear's other paw while he very carefully took out the piece of stone which luckily was not in very deeply. The bear gave a great howl and Tickletail told him that he must try to keep quiet. "I have a lot of little friends here," he said, "and they are in the woods right near by and you will surely frighten them."

The white bear felt much better now that the stone was out of his paw, and Tickletail took his handkerchief and tried to wrap it up, but the handkerchief was so small and the bear's paw so large that he had a very hard time. "What do you do for a living?" Tickletail asked the bear. "Well," said the bear, leaning back against the tree "I am in the circus business in a way. My life is like a three-ring circus and I am always doing tricks."

"Do some tricks for us now," cried Jumpy, and so the white bear took Tickletail's little gun and balanced it right on the end of his nose. Jumpy tried to imitate him and at first the gun kept falling off, but finally he managed it. Tickletail heard Uncle Reddy calling them, because Plumpy Pigwick had found the treasure and they were going to give out the prize and then eat the ice cream and cake. "Come along to our party," cried Tickletail to the white bear, but he only shook his head and ran away into the forest. "I'll see you again soon," he called back. As Tickletail and Jumpy went back toward the palace they met General Striper hurrying along and pulling at his whiskers. Jumpy insisted that he stop and watch him balance the gun on his nose.

"I haven't time for foolishness," said General Striper. "I am after that bandit bear."

All of a sudden it came to Tickletail and Jumpy that the bandit bear for which General Striper was searching might be the very one which Tickletail had just helped. And the same bear whose paw Tickletail had felt on his shoulder that night in the forest!

"Why do you have to catch the bandit bear?" Tickletail asked General Striper, "and what will you do with him if you do catch him?"

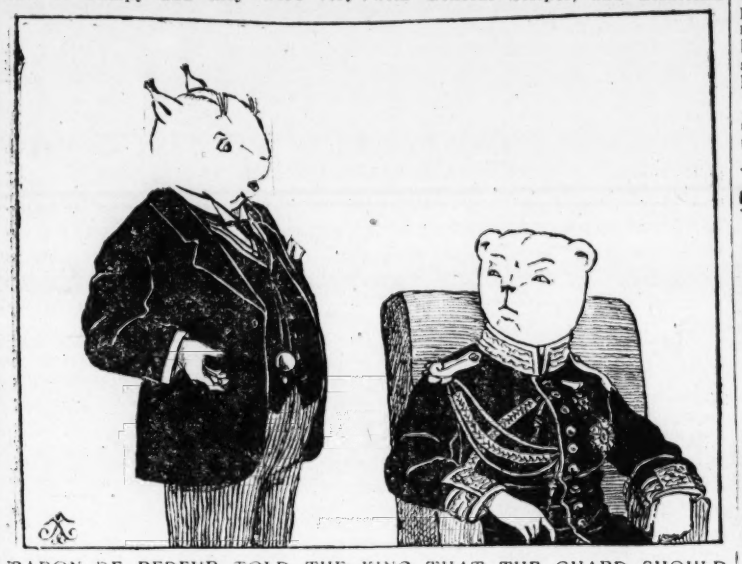

"He has been going about the country stealing things out of gardens and once he took a velvet dress and a string of valuable pearls away from a very rich countess and gave them to a poor girl who lived in a hut in the woods. If I catch him, I shall have to put him in the royal prison and you will be almost a man by the time I let him out."

"I think that it was very nice of the bear to take clothes to the poor little girl, and it seems a shame to shut him up and never let him run about in the forest," said Tickletail.

"He shouldn't take things that don't belong to him," said General Striper. "You run in and see Uncle Reddy and I will ask your father, the king, if I may take you and Jumpy on the search for the bandit." At first Tickletail thought he didn't want to go; he was sure that he would feel badly if they were to catch the bear. But then, he happened to think that perhaps he and Jumpy might be able to help the bear to escape, so he said that he would like to go very much. Uncle Reddy was waiting for him in the palace and with him was Mr. Poodleton, the music teacher. Now Tickletail was very fond of music, but he was so excited at the thought of going on the search with General Striper and his soldiers that he wished Mr. Poodleton had waited until the next day to start his violin lessons. Mr. Poodleton took up his violin to show Tickletail how to draw the bow acros sthe strings. But Tickletail was not in interested in what Mr. Poodleton had to tell him. He opened his mouth in astonishment for through the open window he saw the shadow of the bandit bear!

Robert was sitting listlessly in class, chewing gum. He was reclining on the back of his spine, and as he sat in the front seat, his feet reached out almost to the teacher's desk. Suddenly the teacher exclaimed angrily: "Robert! Take that gum out of your mouth and put your feet in!"

BOB MANLEY AT LAKEVIEW

A Story of Prep School and the Football Field

By JACK GIHON

Author of "Prince Erik of Glaagsbaden," "The City of the Deep," "The Head Hunters of San Blas," etc.

SYNOPSIS.

When Bob Manley, a well-built young fellow of fifteen, was a freshman at Lakeview academy, he won the class presidency and the captaincy of the freshman football team through his feat of planting the freshman insignia on the flagpole during the annual class rush. Now, as a sophomore, he displays the same sort of athletic prowess during practice on the gridiron, and is accepted by Coach Rickey Dale and "Uncle Joe" Thomas, the trainer, as a member of the regular ten. After he is announced as a "regular," he is given a good-natured beating by the regular squad, led by Steve Waters, the captain. Bob's cheerful manner in taking his initiation wins the admiration and respect of the whole team, and back in the clubhouse he is given three rousing cheers. Together with the class rush, the annual Thanksgiving game against Blenton, a neighboring school, is a big event of the year, so as a new member of the team, Bob becomes very popular.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT II.

Even Coach Dale, who did not believe in giving idle praise, was forced to admit that Lakeview had a good football team this year. Its main beauty was the coordination of the players; they worked together, smoothly and quietly, as though they were one man. The line was staunch as a rock, while the backfield was shifty, fast, and made up of good plungers. Coach Dale did not believe in having a quarter, halves and a fullback. All the men behind the line were simply backfield men—they could play all the positions, and were frequently called upon to do so. The team won its first game against Rocking High by a score of 48-0. In its second game, against Valmouth Prep, Lakeview again defended its goal against a single touchdown, while its team romped home with 35 points, finally, in the third quarter, putting its scrubs into the field to finish the one-sided affair.

In both these games Bob Manley starred. Finding him a shifty runner, Captain Tom Waters gave him the ball to carry almost every play, and even though Bob was lighter than most of the men who tried to block his path, it was rare for him not to make a gain. As "Uncle Joe" Thomas had said, Bob was a born football player. Already it was commonly considered that he would be captain of next year's team (Tom Waters was a senior and was to go to college next season) and Bob was one of the most popular boys on the campus.

Jealousies and petty enmities are common on a prep school campus, yet is Bob had been asked if he had any enemies in the school, he would have laughed and denied it. Yet, strange to say, he would have been wrong. There was one boy who heartily disliked the young football star.

"Dude" Rimley, a junior at Lakeview, had, while a sophomore the year before, come very close to winning the honor of putting his class flag on the quadrangle staff. Guarded by a little group of his classmates, he was just preparing to climb up the pole when Bob, in some unaccountable manner, squeezed through the guard, and using "Dude's" shoulder as a ladder, nimbly mounted the staff.

"Dude" had never forgotten. While he himself had ambitions to be a football star, he had failed to make the team, and to have been the factor in getting his class insignia on the flagpole would have done a lot to establish his popularity. Instead of going after the friendship of the others by good fellowship, however, "Dude" sulked his way through school. He could not help feeling that Bob, who had beaten him at the class rush, and had then made the team where he had failed, was a mortal enemy, and his jealousy burned unceasingly.

"Dude" had won his name through the fact that he had more clothes than any other boy in the school. Being the son of wealthy parents, his every want was satisfied, and he took joy in preening himself as a peacock might. Further, in his small way, he felt that Bob, the son of parents whose [illegible] was really strained to send their boy through school, was not his equal.

"Dude" Rimley

On the surface, however, "Dude" pretended to like Bob and never failed to have a pleasant word for him, no matter how much effort it cost. It was only behind his back, among the few other boys of his own calibre who played up to him because of his wealth, that "Dude" spoke what was in his heart.

Meanwhile, however, life on the campus was in a state of constant enthusiasm. The perfection of Coach Dale's team was a subject for never-ending conversation, and every member had the whole-hearted support of nearly every pupil in the school. The annual classic, the game with Blenton, came closes and closer.

"Will we beat Blenton? Laugh that off!" the boys were in the habit of saying. Yet Coach Dale might have had a harder time laughing it off than the steely fibre of his team would indicate. Reports from Blenton were to the effect that there, too, a great football machine was being made. If Lakeview had not been scored against all season, neither had Blenton. If Lakeview had a rocklike line, so had Blenton. If Lakeview's backfield was fast and shifty, so was Blenton's. The teams seemed to be evenly matched, and there was certain to be a terrific battle.

Coach Dale was wont to talk to his boys after practice each afternoon. He did not discourage them, for he told them only enough about the prowess of their old enemies to make them thirst for the fray. Meanwhile, day after day, he brought them closer to perfection in signal work, in line plunging, in shifts, in the intricacies of the aerial game. And "Uncle Joe" Thomas went over each of his charges as an engineer goes over his motors. No "charley-horses" were allowed to appear on the muscles of any of the boys this year; he took more care of them than a man would take of his first automobile. And so Lakeview continued to win all its games. The school would undoubtedly be champion of the prep class this year—providing they defeated Blenton.

It was a week before Thanksgiving—Lakeview's next football game would be against Blenton, for the championship of the prep class. But there was more than a mere championship in this game. Ancient rivals as the two schools were, it is likely that Lakeview would willingly have lost every other game of the season, for the pleasure of winning from Blenton.

Yet there was one other event to come, even before the Blenton game. On Saturday night preceding Thanksgiving, immediately after dinner, the annual class rush was to take place. Coach Dale's first impulse was to forbid members of his team to participate, for he wished to take no chances that any of them would strain muscles, or injure himself in any way, before the big football game of the season. On second thought, however, he decided to let them join. The boys had had nothing but football all season. Every afternoon they had practiced, every evening they had talked nothing but football during dinner at the training table. The coach feared that they might go stale, so he announced on Friday evening that there would be no practice Saturday, but that the team could join in the class rush.

"Day after day he brought them closer to perfection."

Had he known what the outcome of that rush was to be, however, and had he been able to listen to plans being made in "Dude" Rimley's room, he might have rescinded his order. But he did not hear them, and blithely, the members of the team went to bed, sophomore shouting to junior, senior shouting to both of them, the direst of threats as to what they were going to do to one another at the class rush next evening.

To Be Continued Next Week.

Editorial

ALIVE—AFTER CENTURIES.

Centuries ago a man named Samuel Pepys held an English government position in the admiralty. Around him were kings and princes and titled members of nobility, proud of themselves, and living lives of fashion. Samuel Pepys saw them all, though it is probable that they did not see him so often, and each night, year after year, went home and wrote in his diary of all the things that had happened. No matter how hard he had worked that day, no matter how many pleasures were before him, he always wrote in his diary before going to bed.

Today, most of the princes and noblemen of that time are forgotten. And the diary of Samuel Pepys remains one of the foremost books of literature—a book that you will comment on, probably, when you are an upperclassman in college.

This is a good example of what modesty and determination will do—an example of how it lives through the centuries.

Whether it is writing a diary or doing your work—stick to it—follow the thing through to the end. —J. G.
